Garner Still In the Race, Managers Emphasize

Reports Texan Will Withdraw Opposition To Third Term Held Without Foundation

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Brushing aside reports that Vice President Garner wants no part of the Chicago convention, Garner managers last night emphatically restated his determination to seek the Democratic nomination whether or not the President does.

The Garner statement, issued from Dallas, apparently assured three-way opposition to a third term in the convention balloting, despite the President's assured three-fourths majority of nominating votes.

It followed public and private statements by Postmaster General Farley and Senator Wheeler, of Montana, that unconditionally their own names will go before the convention.

Reports Called Baseless

E. B. Germany and Clara Driscoll, comanagers of the Garner campaign, said "there is no foundation whatever" for reports taking the Texan out of the Presidential race.

Silent during recent preconvention jockeying, Garner elsewhere had been reported receptive to the second-place nomination on a third-term ticket, believing the President was certain to run. The Germany-Driscoll statement made no reference to this, but stressed that he was a candidate for President.

Garner-for-President headquarters meanwhile were opened yesterday in the Sherman Hotel in Chicago.

Texas Votes Instructed

"Mr. Garner's name will be presented at the Chicago convention," said the joint statement by his comanagers. "Texas' 46 votes are instructed for him and he will receive substantial support from many other States.

"We feel as we felt when the Garner campaign for President was launched more than a year ago—that Mr. Garner is the best qualified Democrat and the best qualified American to succeed our present great President. He can beat Willkie because no Democrats will leave the party if he is the nominee."

Unreconciled to a third term and a candidate in his own right, Farley was in Chicago yesterday perfecting convention arrangements, while Wheeler was planning a third party bolt should the President accept the nomination.

Believe He'll Run

It was the same tempest that has brewed for a year and a half in the teapot of the President's silence. Democrats who have conferred intimately with Mr. Roosevelt since the Republican Convention professed to be no nearer to the answer. Their assumption was hardening that the President will run.

From other recent White House callers came conversational straws that added little light. To one group of third-term solicitors the President remarked: "You better just leave me at Hyde Park," and in answer to a direct question from another he replied: "I haven't the slightest idea."

Some significance was attached to the President's reported inclusion in the platform of a separate statement on New Deal achievements, apart from the usual plank detail. Such a statement could be used for New Deal vindication or if he chose for third-term justification.

Rough Draft Takes Shape

A rough draft of the platform is virtually prepared, a product of a series of night White House conferences and other talks by Senator Wagner, of New York, resolutions chairman, with Democrats on both sides of many issues.

Concise, like the 1936 platform, it is expected to attempt conciliation

District Area Needy to Get 5-Cent Milk

U. S. Will Finance Plan Intended to Increase Fluid Consumption

A program to sell 5-cent milk to some 11,400 local indigent families was approved yesterday by the Department of Agriculture.

Robert E. Bondy, welfare director, has already selected ten stations in various sections of the city where properly identified persons will be able to purchase the milk at 5 cents a quart. One additional station may be added, he said.

The next step in the project is to invite Washington milk handlers to submit competitive bids for supplying milk on which payments will be made from Federal funds provided by Congress for encouraging domestic consumption of farm products.

Congress has provided the District with $6,900 to be used in operating the stations and the WPA will assign a staff of workers to cooperate in the project.

Eligible purchasers under the program include persons on direct relief, those certified by the Public Assistance Division of the Board of Public Welfare and those certified on WPA lists waiting employment assignment.

Provision also is made in the program for participation by the welfare boards of Montgomery and Prince Georges counties.

Department officials pointed out that the Washington low-cost milk program is designed to utilize, with higher returns to dairy farmers, substantial quantities of milk which these dairymen would otherwise sell at lower prices for manufactured dairy products, provide a larger volume of milk for handlers' plants and make available greater supplies of milk to low-income families.

Record Crowd Sees Belated Pyrotechnics

Estimated 75,000 Jam Monument Area For 'Raincheck' Show

The greatest crowd in the history of the celebrations turned out last night for a "rain check" run-off of Washington's annual fireworks display on the Monument Grounds.

The crowd that staged a comeback after the Thursday night thunderstorm postponement was estimated at 75,000 by Park and Metropolitan police.

The crowd that started arriving well over an hour before the ceremonies quickly overflowed the allotted seats and stretched from Fourteenth to Seventeenth streets as far back as the Monument itself. They were content to stand or sit on newspapers.

In store for them was an hour-long program, featuring flag observances and the recorded speeches of Secretary of Interior Harold Ickes and Representative Clifton Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, before the blazing fireworks finale.

Reminds of City's 150th Birthday

Lawrence Williams, chairman of the celebration committee and former president of the Board of Trade, allowed an apologetic note to creep into his greetings to the thousands who had twice kept faith with the Nation's birthday celebration.

"To those of you who got soaked last night, I want to express my appreciation for your patience in a trying situation," he said in a reference to Thursday night's cloudburst postponement.

He urged the crowd to "glory in the fact that we live in a land still free" and reminded them that the city of Washington was founded just 150 years ago.

And This Means Congressmen

Restriction on After-Hour Callers at Capitol Tightened

Even members of Congress, entering the Capitol next week after closing hours, will be required to identify themselves to the satisfaction of the new Metropolitan Police unit or else take the chance of being ejected like an ordinary intruder.

Green identification cards were being issued yesterday by Kenneth Romney, House sergeant at arms, to all Capitol employes, and there was some indication that they may be issued to members of Congress and to newspapermen.

One Washington policeman stationed at the House entrance of the Capitol said that he had orders beginning next Tuesday to stop anyone who could not produce proper identification cards.

"Does that mean members of Congress?" he was asked.

"It certainly does," he said.

He then added that Capitol policemen would be stationed nearby to help identify the members.

The closing hour of the Capitol ordinarily will come at 4:30 p. m., but it will be later when Congress remains in session beyond that time. Members consequently will encounter no difficulty in entering the Capitol to answer roll calls.

Romney said the precautions have no connection with the attempted bombing of the British pavilion at the New York World's Fair, but he added that the incident illustrated the wisdom of the safeguards.

The Metropolitan Police also have been instructed to observe closely all visitors entering the Capitol with packages, grips or even cameras. One officer pointed out that even a small camera could carry enough explosives to do considerable damage.

While no orders have been given to require tourists to deposit bundles at the door, the police hinted that they may be forthcoming.

Col. Sanders Predicts Nazi Blow at U. S.

Favors Compulsory Military Training To Meet Onslaught If Britain Falls

An immediate German attack on the United States in the event of a British defeat was predicted by Col. Lewis Sanders, reserve officer, of New York, who yesterday urged the Senate Military Affairs Committee to approve the Burke-Wadsworth compulsory military training bill.

Declaring that the United States is "practically a completely defenseless nation today," Col. Sanders warned that Hitler would be an "utter fool," from a military point of view, if he fails to launch an attack on this country "before we have a chance to prepare ourselves"—providing he first wins a decisive victory over the British.

Stimson, Knox Assailed

Other developments in the national defense picture yesterday included:

An attack by Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, on Col. Henry L. Stimson and Col. Frank Knox, President Roosevelt's two Republican nominees to the posts of Secretary of War and Secretary of the Navy.

Appointment of Dr. Will W. Alexander, former chief of the Farm Security Administration, to head the youth training program for the National Defense Advisory Commission—his duties to include coordination of the work of CCC, NYA, Office of Education and other agencies.

Transfer of Admiral William G. DuBose from the Carderock Model Basin to be an assistant to Admiral Emory S. Land in the shipbuilding division of the Defense Commission; appointment of J. C. Nichols, member of the Business Advisory Council and National Capital Park and Planning Commission, to be director of the miscellaneous materials division and appointment of George M. Moffett to be director of the food division.

Berlin Plans Huge Hitler Reception On Return Today

Berlin (Saturday), July 6 (AP).—It was announced officially this morning that Adolf Hitler would return to Berlin from the Western Front at 3 p. m. today (8 a. m., E. S. T.) and receive a great reception.

He will arrive by train for a Nazi welcome "of thanks such as Berlin never has seen," Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels declared in an appeal to the Berlin populace to turn out to greet the Fuehrer.

Hitler has been absent from the capital since May 10, when he set up western field headquarters to follow the offensive into the low countries.

Nation Seeking To Rent Air Bases In Latin America

Copyright by New York Times

The State Department is carrying on diplomatic negotiations for the use, or rent, of air bases in Latin American countries where these are deemed necessary for the defense of hemispheric security, responsible official circles revealed yesterday.

While a great deal of secrecy surrounds these negotiations, and officials have even denied publicly that they are proceeding, reliable sources reveal the Government has decided that if the Americas are to be adequately defended, this country, which has the only large air force, must be assured of bases in countries farther to the south than Central America.

The State and War Departments denied yesterday that an American mission will go to South America to complete arrangements,

Monroe Policy Not Debatable, Hull Replies to Nazi Challenge; France Cuts Ties to Britain

Clash Reported As Poles Try To Quit French Army in Syria

By the United Press

Vichy, France, July 5.—Great Britain and France, fighting side by side in a common cause only two weeks ago, were virtually at war against each other tonight after the government of Marshal Petain angrily broke off diplomatic relations with London.

Clashes between French and British troops were reported along the frontier of Palestine and French Syria. The clashes occurred, according to German radio reports, when Polish troops, presumably under French command, tried to cross from Syria to Palestine.

1,000 Casualties at Oran

Dispatches from Algiers said more than 1,000 persons were reported as officially killed, wounded or missing following the British attack on the fleet at Oran.

Official reports from Oran said that the French battleships Dunkerque, Bretagne and Provence and the destroyer flotilla leader Mogador had been damaged badly and were aground but not sunk.

Another smaller vessel also was said to be aground.

Off Cape Matifou, in the Algiers region, a French patrol boat was destroyed, it was reported. Virtually all of the crew members were rescued.

At Casablanca, French coastal batteries opened fire on a British destroyer, but it escaped under heavy smoke screen.

British destroyers, it was said, apparently intended to attack French warships lying in Casablanca, including a battleship, 4 cruisers, 12 destroyers, 40 submarines and other small units.

[Rome and Madrid reported that the battle of Oran on the north African coast still continued today with British and French naval units involved and that three damaged British destroyers had limped into Gibraltar with their scars of battle.

French Warship Eludes Hood

[There also were reports that a French armed vessel escaped today from Gibraltar, despite the presence there of the most powerful warship in the world, the British battle cruiser Hood.]

Denouncing as "treachery," the British navy's attack on the French fleet at Oran, the Petain government announced its decision to

Hatch Bill Vote Expected Next Week in House

House leaders have decided definitely, it was reported tonight, to permit a vote next week on the Senate-approved Hatch political practices bill.

Informed sources said that notices had been mailed out to all members informing them that debate would start Tuesday. A vote is expected Wednesday or Thursday.

The measure, barring political activity by State employes paid with Federal funds, won approval of the House Judiciary Committee on May 29, after more than two months of stormy sessions.

Among other things, the bill would limit campaign contributions to $5,000.

U. S. to Maintain Relations With Petain Regime

The United States Government does not intend for the present to withdraw recognition from the French government despite the rift yesterday between Marshal Henri Petain's regime and Great Britain, it has been learned.

The thesis that this country might sever relations with Petain and recognize instead the French national committee in London, headed by Gen. de Gaulle, was emphatically rejected for the time being by the State Department officer. "Why need we follow the British lead?" he asked.

The informant pointed out that the United States still maintains diplomatic missions in Germany and Italy, despite the fact that Great Britain is at war with the Axis powers.

British Make Their Coasts A Battle Line

London, July 5.—In a vast extension of Britain's "defense area"—her last ramparts against German invasion—the government excluded the public today from the entire east coast and substantially all of the southern coast, a 12,000-square-mile region.

While the creation of this big no-man's land signaled the intensity of preparations for the supreme test, British men of war searched the seas for the last fugitive units of the French fleet.

Meanwhile, the French charge d'affaires here presented, on orders, a "drastic and stern" protest against the British action against the French fleet in the Mediterranean.

However, no official notice that France had broken off diplomatic relations with Britain had reached the British foreign office late tonight.

Disposition of Fleet

Just how many French warships remained at large was not discussed officially, but an authoritative source said that at the beginning of this week, this was the approximate disposition of the French fleet:

One-third in British ports.

One-third off Oran, in the Mediterranean, the scene of the British attack.

One-sixth at Casablanca.

One-sixth at Alexandria.

Aside from stating also that two units of the French navy now are in Scottish waters, all this—in view of what had happened since the first of the week—suggested that

Freedom Only Hope of Peace, Roosevelt Says

Grants Totalitarian Systems the Sole Virtue of Efficiency

By the Associated Press

Hyde Park, N. Y., July 5.—President Roosevelt suggested today that world powers, now pouring billions into war machines, must dump their armaments onto the scrap heap if a lasting peace is to be secured, and contrasted the American way of government with that of the totalitarian powers. Freedom, he said, alone can insure peace.

The first essential for a permanent peace listed by Mr. Roosevelt was freedom from fear, for, he said, people must not live in fear of being bombed from the air or attacked by another nation.

He conceded that what he termed a corporate state, like Germany or Italy or Russia, could operate more efficiently than a democracy, and added that he was sorry to say some Americans seem to favor such a state because of this.

Mr. Roosevelt started this discussion himself in a press conference and said he wanted to remind those who apparently favored such a government that the system has scrapped two safeguards to democracy—the legislature and the judiciary.

On the subject of fear, the President said the United States has held that freedom from such terror must be based on the removal of the weapons that cause it, and that means disarmament.

Mr. Roosevelt, of course, was looking into the future in talking of disarmament at a time when his defense lieutenants in Washington were whipping into shape another $5,000,000,000 arms program for submission to Congress next week.

His words gave weight, however,

'Oil Bubbles Rose'

British Fliers Report Sinking Five German Submarines

Copyright by New York Times

London, July 5.—Five German submarines operating in sea lanes leading to Britain were recently bombed and believed to have been sunk by aircraft of the Royal Air Force coastal command, an air ministry bulletin announced tonight.

Some of these U-boats were of a smaller type than those used earlier in the war, indicating that the Germans have released their fleet of "minnow" submarines which can easily operate against Britain from ports in France and the Low Countries.

The first of these five attacks took place early one morning. The pilot of an airplane swooped down close to the surface of the water and dropped bombs which struck the starboard beam of a submarine that was submerging. The air observer reported seeing large oil bubbles rise to the surface.

An Australian crew accounted for the next U-boat. One of the members of this crew, reporting to the air ministry on the attack, said "a submarine was cruising on the surface about a mile away. Its crew saw us about the same time we spotted them. The U-boat immediately dived, but we were over it while it was still at periscope depth. We could see it silhouetted beneath the surface and we dropped six bombs close to the port bow. A mass of oil bubbles appeared."

The third submarine was certainly destroyed. It was bombed while its conning tower was still out of the water and the bombs scored direct hits directly ahead of the conning tower.

A direct hit was also scored on the fourth U-boat just as it was rising to the surface. A bomber dived on it, dropped his full load, which hit the submarine on the port and on the starboard beam.

A salvo of bombs from another dive bomber struck just a yard ahead of the fifth submarine, which made a vain effort to dive to safety.

The United States yesterday firmly rejected a German charge that America's stand on the Monroe Doctrine is "untenable," and served blunt notice again that the Doctrine will be enforced.

At the same time it threatened, in effect, to expel German diplomats here who publicly discuss this country's policies. The latter notice was prompted by a reported remark by Baron Edgar von Spiegel, German consul general at New Orleans, that "Germany will not forget that when she was waging a struggle for her very life the United States did everything in its power to aid her enemies."

Simultaneously Government officials turned anxious eyes on the French island of Martinique, in the Caribbean, where a reported British blockade to prevent removal of French naval units and planes apparently was threatening again to carry Europe's hostilities into the waters of this hemisphere.

The German stand on the Monroe Doctrine was contained in a reply to this country's June 19 notification to Berlin and Rome, designed to serve notice that it would not countenance any transfer of sovereignty over American territorial possessions of countries conquered by the Axis powers. The notice was sent after Holland and Belgium had been conquered and France had asked for Germany's terms for an armistice, with resulting fear that the Nazis might seek to take over Duten and French possessions in this hemisphere. Britain and France also were advised of the notification.

Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop replied to the notification, Secretary of State Hull said, by charging this country's interpretation of the Monroe Doctrine would confer upon some European countries the right to possess territories here and bar other nations which, like Germany, have no such American holdings, from such a right.

Insist on Reciprocity

The Nazi government reiterated that it had given no occasion for any assumption that it intends to acquire such possessions, but asserted again that the demand for nonintervention in American affairs by European nations can be valid only if American nations refrain from interference in European affairs.

Secretary Hull, in a statement yesterday, said "no useful purpose will be served by entering into further communication with Germany on the subject, but vigorously answered the points raised by von Ribbentrop and warned again that the Monroe Doctrine "has become the basic policy of

Hull Denies Administration Intends to Let Trade Pacts Die

Exports to Europe Decline, Americas Buy More U. S. Goods

Secretary of State Hull vigorously reaffirmed yesterday his faith in reciprocal trade agreements, while official figures showed further dislocation of American exports by war abroad.

Secretary Hull, father of the trade pact program, issued a statement to deny rumors that recent merging of the department's trade agreements division into a new division of commercial treaties and agreements meant the eclipse of the pacts.

His statement was taken as a direct reply to Wendell L. Willkie, who said in Philadelphia June 25 that the pacts "have been legislated out of existence by Adolf Hitler."

Reply to Republicans

The declaration was interpreted as a blast at Republicans and anti-Administration Democrats who tried unsuccessfully in Congress this year to scrap the reciprocal trade program.

The Secretary's statement means further, it was said, that the Democratic Party will not scuttle the trade pacts during the election campaign, but will defend them as a vital part of the New Deal.

Figures issued by the Commerce Department revealed a sharp drop in American exports to Europe in May, offset by a rise in sales to this hemisphere. The gain in Western Hemisphere trade was sufficient to push American exports in May about one-quarter over the mark set in April.

Shipments Increased

Shipments to northern North America, southern North America, South America, Asia and Oceania increased over April, the figures showed.

Canada, the United Kingdom and France continued, as usual, to be leading markets, taking goods worth $61,877,000, $49,822,000 and $39,350,000 respectively. The previous month, April, showed Canada taking $54,373,000; Great Britain, $53,339,000, and France, $45,990,000.

Exports to Germany doubled, but no officials were alarmed because the jump in May was only to $70,000 from $35,000 for April, small potatoes as foreign trade goes.

Exports to Argentina Rise

Exports to Argentina rose 20 per cent, valued at $10,770,000 in May, compared with about $8,500,000 in April.

Trade increased with Brazil, Chile, Cuba, the Dominican Republic, Honduras, Mexico, the Canal Zone, Peru, Uruguay and Venezuela.

Sales to Australia for May almost doubled the $3,882,000 of April.

Total exports for May to all countries were $325,306,000, compared with $249,466,000 for the same month last year. Imports were $211,382,000, somewhat higher than the $202,493,000 of May last year.

Text of Hull Statement

The text of Secretary Hull's statement follows:

"The recent creation of a new division of commercial treaties and agreements was another of a number of steps taken, from time to time, for the purpose of improving and making more effective the administrative machinery of the department. The new division will provide unified direction for carrying out important functions in the field of commercial policy formerly handled by a number of divisions.

"Far from signifying an abandonment or weakening of the trade agreements program, this administrative change is intended to strengthen and make more efficient our efforts in the direction of the widest practicable implementation of the program and of the basic principles of liberal commercial relations, which underlie that program. Continued advocacy of these principles has been and remains our fixed policy. The only alternative, especially after the war, would be the destructive course of totalitarian autarchy.

Statement Recalled

"I should like to call attention again to the following statement made by the President on June 21, 1940, in connection with some of the emergency features of our current work in the field of inter-American economic cooperation:

". . . In some of its essential features, this program of cooperative economic action by the American republics and possibly by other countries is being undertaken in response to new—but, we hope, temporary—developments in international relations.

It is not intended to replace the program of reciprocal trade agreements which has been steadfastly pursued by the Government of the United States. We continue to believe that the basic principles of that program offer the most effective basis for mutually beneficial economic relations among nations, and we are determined to work, as circumstances permit, for their fullest possible application."

Willkie Sees 12-Man Board On Campaign

Question of Who Will Be Manager Still Unanswered

By the Associated Press

New York, July 5.—The question of who will manage Wendell L. Willkie's Presidential campaign still was unanswered tonight after the nominee and a special 12-member subcommittee of the Republican National Committee concluded an all-afternoon session.

Willkie said that any mention of names in connection with the post was "pure speculation."

He stimulated the speculation with his announcement that he would have as a dinner guest Representative Martin, of Massachusetts, House minority leader.

12 Members Chosen

Martin's name has been mentioned frequently in connection with the campaign manager's job, as has that of Samuel W. Pryor, jr., Connecticut national committeeman, and others.

Willkie twice emerged from today's closed meeting to talk with newsmen. He disclosed that the campaign organization was gradually taking form and that 12 members of the 15-member executive committee had been agreed upon, although their names were not announced.

Willkie and the subcommittee will resume their session tomorrow morning, and he said he was hopeful the executive committee, as well as the entire campaign setup could be announced after the meeting.

Organization Discussed

"Almost the entire time today," Willkie said, "has been taken up with a discussion of the whole problem of national organization and the question of a campaign manager and a national chairman has not come up."

Willkie had luncheon today with Pryor, Representative Halleck (Republican), Indiana, who placed Willkie's name in nomination at Philadelphia; Walter A. Hallanan, of West Virginia, chairman of the special subcommitee; Sinclair Weeks, national committeeman from Massachusetts and a member of the subcommittee; Franklyn Waltman, jr., national commitee publicity director, and Russell Davenport, one of Willkie's pre-campaign managers.

Britain, Hull said that the United States "pursues a policy of nonintervention in the pure-

Answering the German inference that America is interfering in European affairs by her aid to Great ly political affairs of Europe" but will "continue to cooperate with all nations whenever the policies of such nations make it possible, and whenever it believes that such efforts are practicable and in its own best interest, for the purpose of promoting economic, commercial and social rehabilitation, and of advancing the cause of international law and order, of which the entire world stands so tragically in need today."

His sharpest comment to date on the Japanese-asserted "Monroe Doctrine for Asia" was seen also in the Secretary's statement, when he commented:

"The Monroe Doctrine is solely a policy of self-defense which is intended to preserve the independence and integrity of the Americas . . . It never has resembled, and it does not today resemble, policies which appear to be arising in other geographical areas of the world, which are alleged to be similar to the Monroe Doctrine, but which, instead of resting on the sole policies of self-defense and of respect for existing sovereignties, as does the Monroe Doctrine, would in reality seem to be only the pretext for the carrying out of conquest by the sword, of military occupation, and of economic and political domination by certain powers of other free and independent peoples."

The Secretary's declarations, it was announced, were approved by President Roosevelt.

They directed fresh attention, incidentally, to the conference of all American nations, to be held at Havana July 20, for a discussion of steps to achieve hemisphere solidarity against totalitarian aggression.

British Off Martinique

break off relations with Britain after an emergency session of the council of ministers with President Lebrun.

Foreign Minister Baudouin told American newspaper correspondents that Britain must also shoulder the blame "for the loss of the war" to Germany and the defeat of France.

The British selfishly thought only of the defense of the British Isles, he alleged, and provided only minimum military aid to France.

France is determined, with consent of Germany and Italy, to "defend herself by sea and air in the Mediterranean" against any further British attacks, but "will not take any further reprisals for the time being," Baudouin said.

Asks U. S. to Understand

The French warships remaining in Oran have been ordered home "regardless of consequences," even though they may be sunk before they get out.

Baudouin said that the governmen's breaking off of relations with Britain does not apply to Canada, South Africa and Australia.

After the Oran battle, Baudouin said, France appealed for and obtained consent of Germany and Italy to cancel the clauses of the armistice agreements providing for disarmament and internment of all French warships and warplanes.

He appealed to the people of the United States to understand France's action against her former ally and said that the people of France remain staunch in their friendship for the United States. This same assurance, he said, he gave to U. S. Ambassador Bullitt yesterday.

Denounces Churchill

His voice became knife-sharp with bitterness as he spoke of British Prime Minister Churchill and the blasting naval attack on the French fleet at Oran late Wednesday, under a six-hour ultimatum.

"Mr. Churchill is guilty of an act of aggression which is without precedent in the history of the world," Baudouin said, "because the French warships at Oran were demobilized and without steam to maneuver for battle."

[Despite Baudouin's assertion that the French fleet at Oran did not have steam up when the British guns roared, the battleship Strasbourg was able to escape to Toulon, France, after being struck by a British torpedo. Some smaller ships also were able to escape with the Strasbourg.—Editor's note.]

Baudouin said there were a "great number" of French casualties in the brief but bitter battle of Oran because they were trapped "like rabbits in a pen."

The 22,189-ton battleship Bretagne, built in 1913 and recently reconditioned and normally carrying 1,133 officers and men, is a complete loss, and the 26,500-ton battle cruiser Dunkerque, one of the world's finest fighting ships, was badly damaged with fires raging aboard hours after the battle, the foreign minister said.

Puts Blame on Britain

The Provence, sister ship of the Bretagne, and the 2,884-ton destroyer flotilla leader Mogador also were set on fire.

Baudouin blamed Britain for her alleged failure to provide any help in the French army's attempts to close the Artois gap between Bapaume and Peronne, through which Gen. von Reichenau's mechanized German divisions poured to the Channel coast and created the Flanders trap.

Baudouin asserted that the British saved four-fifths of their troops from the Flanders trap, embarking them from Dunkerque, while the French lost fully half of their forces.

"The British furnished only 14,000 troops for rear guard operations and the remainder of the 200,000 were French," he said in describing the Dunkerque rescue.

"The first serious strategic error of the maneuver occurred on May 10 when the French army left its trenches at England's demand and rushed into the Lowlands (Belgium) and into the fatal battle of the Meuse."

Says British Disobeyed

French Generalissimo Weygand said Baudouin, tried to close the Artois gap and asked the British army to strike southward while the French drove northward in an attempt to cut the corridor to the coast.

duties connected with Army expansion.

Adoption of military calisthenics in CCC camps, differing from the Army "setting-up" program only in that rifles will not be used.

Indication that European military and naval advisers in South America are being replaced by American experts, while trade between this country and South America is on the upgrade.

Estimates that America's national defense program may cost as much as $3,000,000,000 a year, including a possible $1,200,000,000 annually to pay for 2,000,000 trainees if the pending compulsory service bill is adopted.

Speaking on behalf of this measure before the Military Affairs Committee, Col. Sanders asserted that "the United States is the only thing that stands between Hitler and domination of the world—and the United States is in no position to withstand him."

Committee Recesses

"If we are fully prepared, I don't think he'd attack us," Sanders added.

After hearing testimony of Col. Sanders, Col. Julius Ochs Adler, war veteran and general manager of the New York Times, and Col. Frederick Palmer, author and war correspondent, all of whom indorsed the bill, the committee suspended further hearings until Tuesday, when the War and Navy departments will give their views on the measure.

It was indicated that representatives of the War Department might also discuss the military training plans which the department has been working on ever since the last war.

Col. Adler told the committee he would like to see 2,000,000 men in training every year "as long as the emergency exists." Taking Adler's estimate that the training would cost $400 to $600 a man, Senator Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, suggested that the program would involve an annual expenditure of $1,200,000,000.

Senator Downey (Democrat), of California, objecting to the proposed compulsory training, suggested paying mechanics regular wages instead of conscripting them.

Opposes Forced Labor

"If we want to create saboteurs and disloyalty, I can think of no better way than to take mechanics and force them to work for nothing," Senator Downey said.

"There's a lot of subtle propaganda going around the country against compulsory military training," observed Senator Minton, of Indiana, majority whip. "It is part of the program of Mr. Hitler to weaken us at a vital point."

Both Col. Sanders and Col. Adler thought an eight-month training period would be enough, contrary to Senator Downey's suggestion that training for a mechanized army would require several years.

Col. Sanders said, however, that it would take much more than eight months to train staff, communication and liaison officers. It is in the "integration of all arms and services" that the "real secret" of German success lies, he said.

Federal Order Defers Aluminum Strike Decision

Pittsburgh, July 5 (AP).—A Government order that "no other alternative is available" tonight forced adjournment until Monday of the deadlocked wage conference of the Aluminum Company of America and the C. I. O. Aluminum Workers Union, postponing at least temporarily a threatened strike in that vital industry.

The cnferees will continue in Washington Monday their discussions of the union demands which were accompanied by a strike threat, for a flat ten cents an hour raise for the 15,000 workers employed in five plants where it has contracts.

Dr. John R. Steelman, director of conciliation for the Labor Department, made public a letter he gave N. A. Zonarich, president of the union, "since the industry in question is so vital in the national defense program."

"Under the circumstances no other alternative is available, and both parties are expected to comply," he wrote.

Observers said that was the strongest language they recalled a Government conciliator using a major labor fight here.

Dutch Ship Crew Arrested in Ohio

Sandusky, Ohio, July 5 (AP).—Authorities swooped down on the Dutch freighter Prinz Willem II today and seized 19 crew members accused by a Netherlands official of being "traitors, deserters and mutineers."

The arrests were made after Capt. C. A. Van Der Eyck, of Rotterdam, formally complained of a mutiny he feared might cost his life. He said the group also was conspiring to sabotage the ship and Sandusky docks.

Louisiana Chief Engineer Held In Wife's Death

New Orleans, July 5 (INS).—Harry Jacobs, chief of the Louisiana Board of Engineers and close political and personal friend of the late Huey P. Long, was held tonight following the mysterious fatal shooting of his wife, Edna, 46. He was charged with her death.

Police also held William Jacobs, 30, of Louisville, Ky., a son by a previous marriage.

Jacobs reported the shooting early today, stating a high-powered rifle with which he had been shooting stray dogs, was discharged accidentally.

Freedom Vital to Peace, Roosevelt Says to a possibility that America might build up the mightiest sea and air armadas in history, only to sacrifice a portion of them if the rest of the world could be persuaded to join in disarmament in another effort to attain a real peace.

That course would follow a precedent established after the last World War when the United States junked thousands of tons of warships to meet terms of an international arms pact.

The Chief Executive made it clear that he believed disarmament alone offered no formula for permanent peace, any more than it did in the 1920's.

As corollary essentials to peace, when the time comes to propose it, he named:

1—Freedom of information. He said that meant not only freedom of the press but also of all channels through which information moves. America must receive news of what is happening in all parts of the country and the rest of the world, he said.

2—Freedom from want, brought about by tearing down cultural and commercial barriers between nations.

3—Freedom of religion, which Mr. Roosevelt said had been preserved fairly well by democracies but not by other forms of government.

4—Freedom of expression, with any individual permitted to state his opinions unless he advocated overthrow of his government.

Those who heard him got the impression that his five "freedoms" were not susceptible to being interpreted as a concrete peace program.

As for the supplementary defense recommendations, expected to shove the total beyond the $10,000,000,000 mark, Mr. Roosevelt said they might be laid before Congress next Monday.

But he said he did not have the final figures yet and that he had not begun drafting a message to the legislators.

Bid to Willkie Stands

The President said his statement of last Friday that he would be glad at any time to see Wendell L. Willkie to discuss foreign policy still stood. Willkie, the Republican Presidential candidate, will be in Washington Monday to talk with his running mate, Senator McNary (Republican), of Oregon.

He met an inquiry whether he had given up hope of reaching his peace objectives by saying they were just as sound today as they ever were.

Then he repated to a large extent what he had told members of his family and the people who live on his estate in an informal talk yesterday.

Mr. Roosevelt recalled how there had been talk of a representative form of government for hundreds of years, arising from a belief that it was needed to check tyranny by kings, conquerors or individuals or to guarantee certain individual rights.

It remained for the United States to establish such a government at the close of the eighteenth century, he pointed out.

with as many elemtns in the party as possible while still pressing forward with New Deal social objectives. The foreign affairs plank is expected to be a restatement of the Administration's own foreign course, but will be under heavy pressure for "peace" emphasis from isolationists led by Wheeler.

The Republican Party's minor exceptions to the Wagner Act and the farm program would be ignored.

Speaker Bankhead who, with a growing number of other leaders believes the President will run but has not been told, has virtually completed the first draft of the keynote speech, to be delivered Monday night, July 15. The speech will be exceptionally brief—some 35 to 40 minutes. Bankhead will not go to Chicago until the eve of the convention, but Wagner will arrive next Wednesday for conferences with members-designate of the resolutions committee.

Willkie to Meet McNary

Republicans, off to a campaign head start, meanwhile awaited Monday's first meeting here between Wendell L. Willkie and their Vice Presidential nominee, Senate Minority Leader McNary. McNary is expected to receive Willkie at his Senate offices here and invite a few colleagues in to meet him.

Oregon's liberal Republican, whose nomination has started a Democratic search for a second place candidate to match his farm record and Northwestern appeal, was reported to have scheduled at least one speech in New York in a campaign that apparently will be far more active than was first expected.

While final arrangements have not been completed for McNary's acceptance speech, the Senate Minority Leader was said to be debating acknowledging his nomination either at his farm a few miles from Salem, Oreg., or at the Salem fair grounds, with a 10,000 to 15,000 capacity.

In Dallas, Tex., meantime, leaders of a movement of local clubs to give the Democratic nomination to Willkie, planned a meeting today to elect a permanent State chairman and other officers. House Majority Leader Rayburn has pointed out here that Texans advocating Willkie's Democratic nomination won't be delegates to the convention and won't have a vote. The Texas delegation is instructed for Garner.

1,310 Adult Cases Handled In Year by Juvenile Court

Tribunal in General Charge of Child Welfare Problems

This is the third of a series on the Juvenile Court of the District, outlining its methods, scope, and responsibilities following criticism of the tribunal at Senate hearings.

The District Juvenile Court, which is responsible for combating and eliminating child delinquency in Washington, found it necessary to deal with 1,310 adults in the year ended June 30, 1939.

Judge Fay L. Bentley's method of handling those cases was criticized by some of the witnesses who testified at hearings upon her nomination to succeed herself as judge of the court.

The ramifications of the tribunal's functions indicate that the name "juvenile court" is an understatement and that the court actually is, according to law and in operation, a social service agency dealing generally with the problem of child welfare in Washington.

McCarran Suggests Delay

As the scope of the activities under Judge Bentley's control was developed at the hearings, Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the Bentley subcommittee, suggested that action on her appointment be held up until the Senate had investigated the whole subject of child welfare and juvenile delinquency in Washington.

The court was entrusted with this general responsibility by Congress in 1938, when the present court was established to replace the Juvenile-Criminal Court first set up in 1906. The court's objective was made service "of the child's welfare and the best interests of the state" rather than simple punishment of young misdoers. In other words, the court was to deal with the conditions that made offenders out of children.

Adults accordingly, are subject to Judge Bentley's jurisdiction when they contribute to the delinquency of children or fail to support their own children. The Juvenile Court also has authority to determine the paternity of children born out of wedlock and to compel the fathers to support them.

Jurisdiction Shared

Most numerous are the cases of nonsupport, of which 1,109 were heard among the 1,310 cases disposed of in the fiscal year 1939. Of these 1,109 only 15 defendants demanded jury trials, and 6 won verdicts of not guilty.

The Juvenile Court shares jurisdiction in these cases with the District Court, but Judge Bentley's most recent report says that "as a matter of practice, the Juvenile Court disposes of all cases of nonsupport in which the defendant can be served, either by summons or warrant, in the District" and refers to the district attorney those cases where the defendant is outside the district and must be returned here by extradition procedure."

The Juvenile Court's authority to punish husbands who fail to support their wives and children is established by law. The District Court recently released, by writ of habeas corpus, a man whom Judge Bentley jailed for failing to support his childless wife. The higher court's decision held that this offense was beyond the jurisdiction of the Juvenile Court. Congress has been asked to approve a bill giving this jurisdiction to Judge Bentley's court.

Cases Exceptional

Judge Bentley has declared that her court handles few cases of nonsupport of childless wives, but has followed the practice of advising these women to take their grievances to the District Court. The exceptions, she declares, have been in the case of wives who were unemployed, unemployable, ill or otherwise were able to present meritorious pleas for handling in Juvenile Court, where the procedure is streamlined and there are no costs.

Judge Bentley asserts that her policy in nonsupport cases is to attempt to offer service rather than coercion. Most husbands brought before her, she said, are perfectly willing to meet their obligations but are handicapped by low income, bad management and other conditions. These are placed on probation, and aided by the social workers of the court.

Of the 1,310 defendants brought into court in 1939, 870 were placed on probation, 171 were dismissed, 18 were jailed and 8 were fined. The cases of 275 others were continued subject to call, without a judgment being entered.

209 Men Jailed

However, 375 cases came before the court a second time, with the result that 168 were continued on probation, 10 were dismissed, 191 were jailed for one year, 5 were jailed 48 hours for contempt of court and 1 was continued subject to call. Of the total of 209 men sent to jail, 56 had failed to support their illegitimate children.

The growth of this phase of the Juvenile Court's work is illustrated by the amounts collected for distribution to dependents. From $101,293.42 collected in 1935, the total grew to $224,466.23 in the year ended June 30, 1939, an increase of 121 per cent for the four years.

FROM ALL THIS KINDLER CREATED HARMONY—Dr. Hans Kindler, director of the National Symphony Orchestra, conducted the final rehearsal yesterday for the Watergate concerts starting tomorow. National Symphony Orchestra Will Open Series Tomorrow

Conductor Kindler Declares 72 Musicians Are Ready After Final Rehearsal; Harbor Police Bans Speedboats From Nearing Barge

Dr. Hans Kindler yesterday declared the National Symphony Orchestra ready for its first sunset concert of the summer series at 8 o'clock tomorrow night at the Watergate. His 72 musicians rehearsed for 2½ hours yesterday on the barge, under Kindler's baton.

The Weather Bureau predicted fair weather for the opening concert.

Noise of river craft will be held to a minimum during the concerts this season. Lieut. W. H. Carlin, of Harbor Police, has promised a detail to patrol against noises. Speedboats, he announced, will be prohibited from going north of the Arlington Memorial Bridge, and motor boats will be kept far from the barge.

Washington Airport has instructed pilots taking off or bringing in planes on concert nights to avoid the concert areas as far as possible.

Four new faces were in the orchestra at rehearsal yesterday. They were Britton Johnson, first flute; Robert Marstella, first trombone; William Hymanson, first viola, and Walter Maciejewicz, first bassoon.

Dr. Kindler, who conducts tomorrow night, has dedicated the concert to "the heroic work of the Red Cross." In this connection, Mrs. August Belmont, member of the Red Cross central committee, will speak.

The program is comprised of overture to Glinka's "Russlan and Ludmilla," Sibelius' Symphony No. 2 in D major, Smetana's "The Moldau," two Brahm's waltzes, Nos. 11 and 12; the berceuse and finale from Stravinsky's "Fire Bird Suite," the delightful "Golden Age" polka of Shostakovich, and Dr. Kindler's arrangement of the introduction, chorale and love music from "Boris Godounov" by Moussorgsky.

Seats for the opening concert are available at the symphony box office in the Homer L. Kitt music store, and will go on sale after 11 a. m. tomorrow at the Watergate box office.

Stokowski Inspects Barge at Watergate

Leopold Stokowski yesterday personally inspected the symphony barge at the Watergate, where his 100-piece All-American Youth Orchestra will play for a Washington audience, July 23.

He said he will sail for South America, July 26, with his orchestra for a concert tour beginning in Rio de Janeiro, August 7.

"Our audiences may not be able to understand English, but they will understand our music, and thus they will come to know our young people, who are playing the music for them and the millions of Americans these young people represent," he said.

Italian Troops Occupy Kassala And Galadat

Mechanized Attack Forces British to Quit African Border Posts

Copyright by New York Times

Cairo, Egypt, July 5.—An Italian force of light tanks, armored cars and motorized infantry, supported by heavy bombers occupied Kassala, in Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, near the Abyssinian border, Thursday after the small garrison withdrew.

British retirement from Kassala and the neighboring post at Galadat, was announced in the war communique today.

The Kassala area of the border has been the scene of feequent raids by both sides with the object of capturing prisoners, gaining information, or depriving the enemy of equipment and supplies rather than advancing lines.

After heavy salvos from low-diving bombers, the Italian tanks and armored cars began to advance, firing as they approached Kassala. The motrized infantry followed the war cars while the bombing continued.

British Retreat Is Orderly

The British garrison fired steadily until the order to withdraw, which was accomplished in good order.

The Italians used similar tactics at Gallabat, which was occupied at about the same time. Here, too, the British troops used their light antiaircraft guns to shoot down two enemy aircraft and inflicted heavy ground losses, before withdrawing to pre-arranged positions.

The Italians are believed to be trying to cut the British frontier communications but thus far they have been unsuccessful.

Three persons were killed and four wounded in Italian air raids on the Alexandria area this morning, which was the second day in succession for such air raid activities. A bomb fell on King Farouk's large estate, one slightly damaged a road and another hit the roof of a building.

Eighteen more bombs were dropped around Alexandria proper, as the Italians were apparently confused by the heavy antiaircraft fire and dropped the missiles far from military objectives. One small bomb slightly damaged a house roof, while another dropped into a street, both causing deafening explosions. Bomb fragments killed two and wounded three others. Altogether, about 32 bombs were dropped before the raiders were driven off.

Nine Italian fighters were shot down in combats of Thursday near Sidi Barrani, a fortified Egyptian coastal town. Two warplanes were hit in the morning fighting, with seven destroyed in an afternoon air battle to the death.

Shortly after dawn a flight of Royal Air Force fighters sighted several Italian machines approaching Sidi Barrani and turned quickly to intercept them. The British caught the enemy formation on the flank and poured bullets into the outside machines.

During a subsequent dog fight another Italian airplane left the engagement to struggle toward the Libyan border but had to land. The pilot was taken prisoner.

In the afternoon six British fighters accepted the challenge of nine Italian fighters. The British pilots calmly fired on the enemy warplanes, one at a time. One by one the Italians wavered as they were struck. Some fluttered down, like wounded birds, others plummeted to the earth, leaving exclamation marks skywritten in black smoke.

A formation of British Blenheim bombers attacked the large military camp at Bir-El-Gobbi, a short distance directly south of Tobruk Libya.

British bombers also struck heavily on Metema, Abyssinia, braving antiaircraft fire for a chance to make direct hits on the barracks and airfield runways.

Meanwhile, Malta was subjected to another Italian air raid, but, it was stated, neither casualties nor damage was inflicted.

Ciano Goes to Berlin

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, July 5.—Count Galeazzo Ciano, the Italian foreign minister, left after midnight by train for Berlin, it was announced. He was accompanied by high officials of the foreign office, and expects to stay in Berlin "for several days."

First guesses were that the drive against Britain is about to begin, but it should be emphasized that this is guesswork. There are other vital questions on tap, such as Ireland and the British action against the French fleet. In this war, surprises have become the normal thing.

The Italian press, radio and officialdom today launched a furious attack of words against the British for having sunk the French fleet at Oran.

(The Italian press, incidentally, is assuring its readers that American opinion also has condemned the British.)

The great discussions abroad as to why the Italian fleet did not go to the aid of the French have no echo here. In political circles it was merely confirmed that the fleet made no move yesterday and it was stated that "if Italian ships should come upon French vessels being attacked by the British, then the Italians would unquestionably give battle to the British."

the French ships not now in British hands or out of action were very few.

Keeping up their nightly forays, German warplanes attacked Great Britain again last night. First reports told of no damage.

Two German bombers were heard over northeast England. They were reported to have dropped bombs but it was believed all bombs fell in open country.

Other reports said German raiders dropped incendiary bombs on southeast England and raided coastal sections of southwest England, Yorkshire and the Kent coast.

Near one southeast coast town last night a Messerschmitt fighter was reported shot down by British fighting planes.

Line 20 Miles Deep

The order lengthening and deepening the defense area will, in supplement with the previously declared defense area, make a solid line, 20 miles deep, given over entirely to military operations from Berwick-on-Tweed, in Scotland, clear down the east coast and around to Dorset, on the south coast.

The home office took two other home defense steps:

All civilian former Austrians, Germans and Italians—men and women who became British subjects after December 31, 1932—to report to the police Sunday and and Monday.

All aliens possessing maps of a scale exceeding 12 miles to 2 inch, and guide books, to surrender them to the police.

French Diplomat Resigns

The French protest against the British fleet action had one unusual aftermath — the reported resignation of the charge d'affaires who delivered it, Roger Cambon. The French ambassador, Charles Corbin, resigned last week.

(Both Cambon and Corbin have been in London a long time and have close British attachments. Their resignations indicate they do not desire to represent a government antagonistic to the British war effort.)

The counsellor, the Marquis de Castellane, now has assumed charge of the French Embassy.

During the day, the British reported that enemy airplanes had made three unsuccessful attacks on Gibraltar.

(The German wireless reported from Madrid that a French warplane "claiming revenge for the British assault on the French fleet lying at Oran" had participated in the attack, according to the United Press.

Planes which bombed Gibraltar were reported to have come from the Mediterranean side of the Rock.

Bombs were reported to have fallen on the higher fortifications, the radio station and near the docks.

They reported also that British planes had been busy, to this effect:

A big German supply ship hit squarely by a high explosive bomb off the Dutch coast; a small German guard ship overturned by a bomb; other patrol vessels left "in a sinking condition."

Youngsters to Make Home in Greenwood, Va., For the Duration of the War; Washington May Get Glimpse of Them After They Settle Down

Five English children, two of them members of Britain's royal family, paused in Washington last night near the end of a long journey from England to safety in the Valley of Virginia.

Davina Bowes-Lyon, 10, and her brother, Simon, 8, are niece and nephew of Queen Elizabeth. With them were three young cousins, Francis, Anne and Jeanne Nichols, and the five were under the wing of the Bowes-Lyon' children's grandmother, Mrs. H. H. Spender Clay, a sister of Vincent Astor.

The vanguard of thousands of English children fleeing the horror of modern war, they arrived in New York yesterday from Montreal, where they had come in secret aboard the steamer Duchess of Atholl with 645 other youngsters. They were on their way to El Mirador, estate of Ronald Tree, member of the British Parliament, at Greenwood, Va., near Charlottesville.

While their sleeper was shifted from the New York train to that for Charlottesville, they did not leave the car. They probably will be back, Mrs. Clay said, to see the sights of Washington after they are settled at Greenwood.

Murphy Backs Plan

In caring for child refugees from Great Britain, America would be 'at its noblest and best," Supreme Court Justice Frank Murphy said last night in a radio broadcast.

He spoke in behalf of the United States Committee for the Care of European Children. Before long, Murphy said, "the bombers will be coming not by ones and twos, or fives and tens, but probably by twenties and hundreds" over England. "Little children," he said, "without knowledge of the cause of this war or responsibility for it" will be in the towns laid waste.

Little Britons Reach Canada

Windsor, Ontario, July 5 (AP).—Far from their homes across the sea, 25 English children arrived in a Canadian haven today to stay for "the duration."

Curious over the new country but apparently quickly adaptable, the children came here as guests of W. R. Campbell, president of the Ford Motor Co. of Canada.

All are sons and daughters of Ford employes in England, and 100 more are yet to come. Officials here expressed confidence that homes would be found for all.

The 15 boys and 10 girls arriving today ranged in age from 4 to 14. The smallest played happily with toys. Older ones spoke calmly of their experiences.

Poorer Children Barred

New York, July 5 (AP).—Present American immigration laws would prevent thousands of poorer refugee European children from landing in United States ports, a representative of the British children's overseas reception board said today.

More fortunate, said J. Roland Robinson, member of Parliament and board representative, would be those children whose parents can afford to pay their youngsters' transatlantic steamer fares.

Immigration regulations now forbid the landing in U. S. ports of persons whose passage has been paid by a foreign government, and Robinson explained that those refugee children whose passage was paid by the British government would be first taken to Canada, there to await entrance under the quota of 6,500 a month into the United States.

Robinson estimated that of the 50,000 refugee children he expects to come to the United States by fall, 75 per cent would be from working class families. The first ship, he added, is scheduled to sail from England with 2,000 children, "sometime next week."

Tunney Plans A New Youth Movement

Congress Meeting In Wisconsin Called Communist Led

By the United Press

Lake Geneva, Wis., July 5.—Gene Tunney tonight announced he would sponsor a new youth organization as a rival to the American Youth Congress, which he described as a "communistic organization financed in a good many instances by the Moscow government."

Tunney, saying his only thought was of patriotism, made the announcement as the congress' sixth annual convention adopted resolutions opposing President Roosevelt's foreign policies.

Tunney arrived here late today from New York, turned down an invitation of A. Y. C. officials to address the convention, and immediately went into conference with a "pro-American" group of about 65 young men and women. The group had failed to gain recognition as delegates to the convention.

When Tunney arrived late today, Plavner and followers greeted him on a highway near the convention camp with banners urging, "Purge the Junior Reds From the A. Y. C."

Mrs. Vivian Cadden, wife of A. Y. C. Executive Secretary Joseph Cadden, presented Tunney with an invitation from her husband "in the interest of free speech," to address the peace session.

Tunney declined and instead went to nearby Williams Bay, where his followers had set up headquarters when they were unable to obtain accommodations at the convention camp.

At Chicago Tunney had accused leaders of the congress of failing in their duties as good Americans and mentioned an A. Y. C. meeting at Washington last February at which President Roosevelt was booed.

Capitalites to Help Bring Refugee Children to Haven

A Washington organization to aid a national movement to transport Europe's refugee children to this country will be set up in the near future, Miss Katherine F. Lenroot, chief of the U. S. Children's Bureau, said yesterday.

She explained that the local group would work with the United States Committee for the Care of European Children, formed in New York last month. The Children's Bureau is preparing simply to give its services to these groups and to prescribe standards for child care.

Sweden Permits Nazi Army to Use Her Railroads

Stockholm, July 5 (AP).—The end of the war in Norway caused Sweden today to lift railroad restrictions and permit Germany to move men and materials over Swedish lines.

The foreign office said in announcing the change that Sweden's policy of neutrality remains the same.

Henceforth the German military, particularly soldiers on leave, can use Swedish railroads. Materials may be moved without restriction.

Despite the government's contention that its neutrality remains unaffected, the newspaper Nordens Frihet disagreed. Referring to reports that the Norwegian coast was being used as a base for attacks on Scotland, it asked if it would not be true that a belligerent power now would use Swedish territory for its activity.

2 Killed as Army Bomber Crashes

Callahan, Fla., July 5 (AP).—A twin-motored Army bomber crashed at Grass Landing, 10 miles east of here today, killing both its occupants. They were identified as Lieut. William R. Barrow, 26, and Lieut. John A. Morris (pilot), both of Patterson Field, Dayton, Ohio.

The plane was en route to Miami, Fla., from Dayton. It apparently struck a tree as it came down and then hit another squarely, shearing off a wing and a motor.

Philadelphia Man Named to Direct Registry of Aliens

Solicitor General Francis Biddle yesterday announced the appointment of Earl G. Harrison, of Philadelphia, as Director of Registration of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, and Marshall E. Dimock as administrative assistant of the service.

Harrison, president of the Public Charities Association of Pennsylvania, will direct the Nation-wide program for registration and fingerprinting of 3,600,000 aliens now in the United States, as required by the Alien Registration Act of 1940. Registration begins September 1. Dimock has been Second Assistant Secretary of Labor in charge of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

2 D. C. Stations to Carry Attlee's Report on War

A radio speech of Maj. Clement Attlee, British cabinet member and prominent labor member of Parliament, will be broadcast at 3:15 p. m. today by two local stations, WJSV and WMAL. Attlee, speaking from London, will discuss "The Progress of the War."

Liner Carrying Daladier, Aides Reported Missing

London, July 5 (AP).—The German-controlled Brussels radio in a broadcast heard here reported today that the 15,363-ton French liner Massilia, which left Bordeaux June 16 with former French Premier Edouard Daladier aboard, was overdue and missing.

The broadcast said that former French Minister of Education Delbos and former Minister of the Interior Mandel also were aboard.

The report added that they left France intending to continue French resistance against Germany in conjunction with former Premier Reynaud, that the ship sought unsuccessfully to enter several ports and last was heard from "still at sea" several days ago.

A Birthday Wish

Yesterday marked the fifth anniversary of the signing of the National Labor Relations Act. Mr. Ernest K. Lindley rightly states that no other New Deal law, with the exception of the National Industrial Recovery Act, has created so much controversy. In Mr. Lindley's opinion, however, the thousands of cases disposed of, and the elections successfully conducted, reveal the board's accomplishments much better than the conflict over a few difficult cases.

Considering the importance of the issues raised in some of the cases that subjected the board to bitter criticism, one may well question the superior value of the numerical total. But it is undeniable that the board has had to bear the brunt of much criticism which should have been directed against labor leaders whose factional fights made the administration of a new and formidable type of labor legislation exceptionally difficult.

The task of determining the proper units for collective bargaining would have been much easier if the workers had been under a united union leadership. As it was, torn between the claims of opposing factions, the board could not avoid antagonizing both the A. F. of L. and C. I. O. regardless of the wisdom of its decisions.

On this fifth anniversary, therefore, it seems fitting to urge once more the importance of ending the strife that has handicapped the efforts of the NLRB to strengthen the bargaining position of labor. The present imperfect law is in need of amendment and the board itself ought to be reconstituted. But even without these needed reforms it could function much more effectively if a truce were called to labor warfare.

With the entire Nation anxious to unify itself against possible aggression, the demand for unity in the ranks of labor should seem exceptionally cogent. The national interest, as well as the cause of labor itself, would be furthered by putting an end to further fruitless strife between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O.

The Spirit Of Anarchy

Three bomb explosions have occurred in New York City within the past fortnight. The first two fortunately caused no loss of life and little damage to property. But an infernal machine which had been planted in the British pavilion at the World's Fair exploded with deadly effect last Thursday as it was being examined in the open, killing two detectives and seriously wounding several others.

No doubt some people will jump to the conclusion that this last outrage is the work of conspirators with totalitarian leanings. But another explanation will have to be found for the earlier explosions which occurred outside the office of a German commercial agency, just a floor below the German Consulate General, and at the entrance of the national headquarters of the Communist Party. Reasoning from analogy these earlier bombings would have to be regarded as the work of anti-Fascist, anti-Communist groups.

Whether the unknown criminals responsible for these bombings are working together, or as individuals, whether they call themselves Fascists, Communists, Irish Republicans or some other name is immaterial. For whatever their label, they are kindred spirits, whose activities express the same vicious urge to destroy. A cosmopolitan city like New York, harboring millions of people of different races, offers a fertile field for the professional agitator. Add to that the tension created by the war in Europe and the result is an atmosphere congenial to constitutionally lawless individuals.

Every effort must be made by the law enforcement agencies to track down and punish the guilty, both as a protection against further outrages and as a warning to potential criminals. Punishment, however, while curbing the lawless, does not get at the basic cause of these cowardly attacks. They should serve as a reminder of the importance of avoiding needlessly provocative acts and utterances which fire the spirit of anarchy latent in unbalanced and undisciplined men.

Heard Round The World

The same French government to which Great Britain on June 16 made an offer of outright political union has now severed diplomatic relations with London. It is a grim commentary on the speed with which the democratic axis has been dissolved and the extent to which French policy has been realigned since the German conquest.

The present break between the two former allies has its proximate cause in the destruction off Algeria, by British warships, of a part of the French fleet. But even without this bitterly tragic action it is to be feared that Anglo-French relations would have steadily deteriorated.

When Marshal Petain's government signed an armistice with Germany on June 22 the immediate interests of France were swung to the side of a general European peace. Until that peace is secured an army of occupation will be maintained on a large part of French territory; commerce and industry will be stagnant and almost hopeless disorganization will confront the hard-pressed government now endeavoring to operate from the little town of Vichy.

French seaports and air fields, moreover, will be used for the duration of the war as bases for German attacks against England. French territory will be subject to British counterattacks against the Germans. France, for as long as the war continues, will suffer all of the disadvantages of crushing military defeat with little of the opportunity for reconstruction which surrender usually affords a vanquished nation. Under such circumstances, it is inevitable that many Frenchmen should desire peace between England and Germany, regardless of whether British pride is thereby humbled as their own has been.

This underlying situation is bound to exacerbate the bad feeling aroused by destruction of a part of the French fleet, and to give justified cause for nervousness at all of the many points where vital French and British interests are contiguous. Already there are reports, it may be hoped untrue, of minor clashes between contingents of the former Allies in the Near East and of uneasiness in neighboring British and French West Indian possessions.

In Canada, particularly, the shells fired in the naval battle off Algeria will have unpleasant echoes. More than one-third of the population of this great British dominion is of French origin. With France out of the struggle the interest of French-Canadians in their country's war participation is very different from the case a month ago.

Perhaps Winston Churchill gave these factors adequate attention before the heart-rending decision to demand surrender of the French warships was made. Certainly one must assume that he at least consulted the Canadian government, so deeply concerned with any factor affecting Anglo-French relations. One may suppose that the British premier, in spite of his impetuous nature, weighed all the considerations and still decided that it was of paramount importance to insure British control over all French warships, by force if necessary.

But the implications of this attack on a former ally are not less far-reaching because the British government presumably studied them very carefully before giving the orders which have precipitated the present dreadful rupture.

Our Loss Of Police

Fear that Congress is about to create a fourth police force that would further confuse the task of law enforcement in Washington may be put aside. Representative Sasscer's bill passed by the House the other day would merely recognize the United States Building Guards as policemen and increase their salaries accordingly. These guards are already invested with full police powers over Federal buildings and grounds. Their number is not increased by the Sasscer bill, and their salaries are paid entirely from Federal funds.

There is reason for concern, however, over the recurrent weakening of the Metropolitan Police force for the purpose of giving additional protection to Federal agencies. Several months ago officials concluded that additional guards were needed at the White House. Twenty Metropolitan policemen were taken for that purpose. Now 20 experienced men of the local force have been detailed to the Capitol, which already has a contingent of 136 special policemen.

Congress recently gave some recognition to the need for more officers to enforce the law in Washington. Provision was made in the 1941 Appropriations Act for the addition of 15 men to the Metropolitan Police. But the prospective gain of 15 rookies is much more than offset by the temporary loss of 20 experienced men to the Capitol Police. In other words, the force on which the people of this growing city rely for protection of their lives and property is weaker than it was before.

Washington's crime record would be a disgrace to any city; it is doubly disgraceful for the National Capital. Yet the interest of Federal authorities seems to center in only one small segment of the problem—the protection of national institutions. By comparison, the robbery, swindling or even murder of Washington citizens seems to arouse little concern.

Pointing His Own Moral

President Roosevelt has evidently thought seriously about the fundamentals of American government since February 5, 1937, when he casually asked Congress to grant him permission to pack the Supreme Court.

Yesterday, at Hyde Park, the President waxed eloquent in defense of that delicate balance between executive, legislature and judiciary which three years ago he was extremely anxious to destroy.

To show how our democracy works he even cited approvingly the case of the Federal income tax law, in which constitutional amendment proved necessary for validation. This is a striking and pleasant change from the days when "Nine Old Men" were held responsible for gumming the New Deal.

Incidentally, it is toward age as well as toward the established processes of our democracy that Mr. Roosevelt became more sympathetic as he himself grows older. In 1937 he thought men of 70 too old for service on the bench. His own nominee for Secretary of War—now as strenuous and exacting a post as can be imagined—will be 73 in September.

With the President's concern lest Americans should compromise democracy in behalf of dictatorship there will, of course, be universal approval. As he says, any such compromise would be dangerous and unwholesome.

Those are precisely the adjectives which many Americans would apply to third-term aspirations, if one can imagine any American President willing to acquiesce in such an affront to the traditions which Mr. Roosevelt seeks to preserve.

Dog Eat Dog

There is nothing new in the war of our No. 1 bird pest against our No. 1 insect pest. The Department of Agriculture knew as long ago as 1920 that starlings ate Japanese beetles.

The starling, however, is a gregarious creature which follows the dictates of starling fashion; when his fellows are eating fruit, he eats fruit, and when his friends are devouring bugs he devours bugs. Therefore the news that our local flocks have developed a taste for Popillia Japonica is doubly welcome.

In some respects the starling is much maligned. No one denies he is a nuisance. His favorite roosts are the trees of residential sections, even when there are extensive woodlands nearby. A flock of starlings can strip a cherry tree in an afternoon. On the other hand, cherries in season form only about 15 per cent of the adult starling's diet, and about 23 per cent of the robin's.

The robin's stealthy depredations have not branded him as a marauder. Starlings also like apples, but most of the damage to corn that is blamed on them is the work of grackles and red-winged blackbirds. In general, nearly half the starling's food consists of insects.

Clifford Lanham, District superintendent of trees, says the starlings here are developing a technique of eating Japanese beetles. They lift the leaves with one foot, snatch the beetles from the underside and crush the shells. If this goes on the starlings may yet become respectable citizens of the District, and we might be persuaded, if only during the beetle season, to put away the balloons, Roman candles, tin cans and shotguns used without conspicuous success to frighten them away from our foliage and the ledges of our public buildings. We may even forgive them for their ear-piercing chatter.

At a banquet they dope you up with heavy food and before you can recover sufficiently to escape, somebody gets up and throws a speech at you.

The scarcity of jobs is becoming considerably less acute. Every day or so somebody not kin to any public official succeeds in securing employment.

"Life on earth, as now constituted, will continue with very little change for at least a billion years," declares a Princeton professor. Aw, come now, doctor; this is no time for pessimism.

Sleepy Drivers

From the Memphis Commercial Appeal

State police troopers stationed at South Haven, Mich., are now stopping trucks to see if the drivers have been hitting the ball so long that they are sleepy. If a driver shows signs of unusual fatigue and drowsiness, the troopers order him to bed to stay until he is fully rested and at himself. This rather unusual procedure was adopted after there was a wave of early morning traffic accidents in which trucks were involved. It seems a sound and logical exercise of the police power, especially if traffic officers really exist to prevent accidents rather than arrest those who violate the laws of the land and of common sense and get into trouble.

The Underpass

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The editorial in The Post of July 3 is most disappointing. We, who are interested in keeping Washington a city of beauty, regret that one of our leading papers should be so short-sighted.

This is not just the interest of property owners of Sixteenth street, but an interest of every citizen of the United States. Surely the avenue to the most noted building in our country and the world today, for that matter, should be protected from destruction.

Washington is not a city of industry. Why all this worry in getting out of the city—or rather into the suburbs? Cities of several millions do not have the conditions that we have here. It would seem that instead of destroying the beauty of the city, we should insist on an official who is capable of making such changes as are necessary to relieve congestion in the few locations downtown.

I wish to suggest that the large amount of money needed for this one project be divided and used to widen several streets, such as P street from Logan Circle to Dupont Circle, as this would relieve traffic on three circles and two avenues.

Thirteenth street should be widened from Logan Circle to Park road to assist traffic to the fast growing Northwest. Also a street parallel to K street should be widened to relieve traffic routed to Georgetown, Chevy Chase, Rockville, Md., and Virginia

On Isolationists

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In my opinion our first and most important step toward speeding up our national defense program and material aid to the Allies is to impeach all our sissy and weak-kneed legislator-isolationists.

Some of our "isolationists" remind me of Ferdinand the Bull, who sits under his favorite tree and smells the flowers while Hitler arms, builds and arms and then takes what he wants.

Our isolationists tell us to mind our own business and not to meddle in European conflicts, not realizing that the European struggle is our struggle indeed.

"The Whole Man"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Miss Dorothy Thompson has expressed herself recently as bemoaning the fact that our high schools and colleges are turning out graduates who "are completely unfitted for the realities of the world," said realities consisting of a mechanically developed society in which the ability to "read a slide rule or handle a screw driver" is the criterion for the training of the "whole man."

One would expect that Miss Thompson's mood of a contemporary Cassandra would imply that when she uses such an Aristotelian term as the "whole man," she should recognize the meaning of the term. If by using it, she wants to convey the impression that one who cannot handle a slide rule or a screw driver is not a "whole man," she either has been misinformed or hasn't examined the implications of her thought.

Using the word "technics" for her criterion, for that would embody all she has in mind, she would demand that if our schools did not produce engineers, our educational system was not properly geared to democratic society. Even the most ardent Veblenite (contrary to her assertion) never conceded that our society would need only engineers; time and again, Veblen maintained that a society which divorced technics from cultural values would be doomed.

In the light of this fact, Miss Thompson's arguments with reference to our educational system fall far short of the idea of the "whole man" that education aims to develop. I presume that her ideal educational system would be one in which stiff courses in mathematics would be supplemented by equally stiff courses in the physical and biological sciences, ultimately producing a pseudo-synthetic Mendeleff - Conklin - Millikan combination, all rolled in one.

Robert Jackson Quoted On War

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At this time when pro-war propagandists seek to whip the Nation into fury and frenzy that will make easier American participation in the orgy of international sadism and slaughter across the ocean, may we call to yours and your readers' attention some words spoken by Robert H. Jackson, Attorney General, about 2½ years ago—January 17, 1938—at a banquet given in Jamestown, N. Y., in honor of Mayor-Emeritus Samuel A. Carlson who retired then after serving as the city's chief executive for 26 years.

Mr. Carlson, like Mr. Jackson, at the time of the World War, had opposed American entry into the war and the war hysteria which saw a blackout of civil liberties in many cities, but not that of which Mr. Carlson was official head.

The relevant excerpts from Mr. Jackson's statement follow:

"I think it has become apparent today that the American Expeditionary Forces fought for ideals that even our allies in Europe did not share; that our participation in a 'war to end war' was futile; and our hope to make the world 'safe for democracy' was disappointed. But to have said as much, when the passion for war was on, was uncomfortable, and it seemed at that time certain to end the careers of all who participated in the hope for peace.

"Throughout the war Samuel A. Carlson stood, as the official head of this community, for free speech—not as a theory, but as a fact. He always respected the civil rights of the people of this city.

"I recall the days of the so-called 'slacker raids' and 'red drives'—those vindictive and cruel public movements which disgraced the memory of many cities. I was acting as corporation counsel when it was proposed that this city engage in a drive of this kind.

"There were official and unofficial organizations that wanted, suddenly and without warning, to round up the young men of the city on their way to work in the morning, through the aid of patriotic volunteers to supplement the police force. All of those who failed to have on their persons registration cards were to be bundled into the lock-up. All of those whose activities or opinions were under suspicion were to be held for examination. It is utterly inconceivable to us today that such a thing could happen in our city. But it did happen in many of our cities, and I regret to say that it had the approval of very high officials . . .

"Sam Carlson, more than any other one man, reached the decision that no such 'raid' would blacken this community; that no part of this community, however overheated with zeal, would be permitted to make a drive or raid upon any other part of this community."

The Citizens Committee Against War, opposed to all totalitarianism at all times, urges official and rank and file American to take heed. Let us not repeat the mistake referred to above. We regret that in at least one respect even Mr. Jackson has dangerously compromised his position, as set forth, namely, in relation to aliens.

ANNETTE TEMIN,
Secretary, Citizens Committee Against War.
Washington, June 30.

Feed The Hungry

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Many Forum writers have suggested that all fifth columnists be put in jail, or under the surveillance of the F. B. I., or deported to some other country. But I should like to suggest that they be converted to the Christian way of thinking and living. American churches spend millions of dollars annually to tell the heathens of foreign lands the story of Jesus who died on the cross, that the whole world might be safe for democracy. But what are the American churches doing to make good Christians, as well as good citizens, out of the fifth columnists? Are our ministers and home missionaries asleep on the job? If Jesus were on earth today, what would He do to stop the activities of the fifth column? He would first feed the hungry, clothe the naked, and heal the sick. Then he would preach the Gospel to them.

What are the conditions in America which are causing men and women to become dissatisfied with our form of government? There are thousands of homeless, unemployed people, wandering to and fro, from one coast to the other, looking for work. There are thousands more living on starvation wages, while their employers live in luxury. There are many undernourished children living in sunless slums, while fat politicians loll about on sunny beaches. Let us first rid our country of undesirable living conditions, before we attempt to clean up the fifth column situation. Now is the time for all good Christians to come to the aid of their country, by helping to make America an earthly paradise for all disgruntled fifth columnists.

Eire's Position

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Eire is not a member of the British Commonwealth of Nations as stated in The Post of July 3. The Privy Council, the highest court in England, in a test case rendered the decision that Eire is a "free, independent, and sovereign nation."

Neither England nor Germany has any right to invade Ireland. Eire is a neutral nation, and there is no legitimate reason for stating that Eire should help England in her war against Germany.

Eire is increasing her army at the rate of 2,000 men a day. While it may not match in strength the armies of Germany or England, still what it lacks in numbers will be compensated for by the genius, courage, and bravery of its men. Germany and England should pause, look and listen before invading a country with a history such as Ireland is the proud possessor of.

Gen. Haig, during the World War, sent the following cablegram home to England: "Send me 30,000 Englishmen, or 300 Irishmen."

A. M. SULLIVAN,
Washington, July 3.

Working Mothers

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Senator McCarran, in his statement to The Post, July 2, deserves much commendation in his blaming of "working fathers and mothers" for the high rate of "juvenile delinquency in the Captial." He is entirely correct and Washington papers should give the idea more publicity.

The Senator from Nevada should, however, have laid a bit more stress on the working mothers, for it is they, alone, who are neglecting the home. I cannot see for the life of me how a woman can do justice, both to her home and her office. The hue and cry generally put up by them, is that "My husband does not make enough money, and the rents are so high." This, seems to me a very puny excuse, for a little careful planning before marriage and as much self-denial after marriage, on the part of husband and wife would easily do the trick.

In Search Of Work

"Good morning, ma'am. Got any scissors or knives that need sharpening? Now, ain't that a pity? Nobody don't use no scissors nor knives any more. I ain't got no more than a nickel and that won't buy no more than a cup-a-coffee. What kind of a job is that, ma'am? Yes, indeed, I can clean up a yard. Around this way? Yes, ma'am.

"Ain't you got a lawn mower, ma'am, that needs sharpening? I'll sharpen it fine and set the blades all for a dollar. Yes, ma'am. All right, ma'am.

"What you want done, ma'am? Yes, I can rake up. Where all those locust pods come from? Now, them pods makes a good drink. You soak 'em in water with a lot of sugar in it and it makes the finest kind of a drink. 'Tain't intoxicating, but it's mighty sweet.

"Now, you won't have no trouble cutting the grass this summer. If that lawn mower was sharpened up good you could cut that grass just fine. No'm, it ain't high enough now to cut but it's going to get high.

"There, that looks better already, ma'am. There ain't nothing prettier than flowers. I had a letter from Florida this morning, from the circus place. I'm an old showman myself, used to perform on the trapee. 'Course I can't do it now. Mrs. Ringling runs the circus now and she's a mighty fine woman. He was a mighty fine man, too, never made no difference between people, treated 'em all alike. Yes, ma'am, I was in the show business 40 year. There wasn't nothing I wouldn't do. Mr. Ringling, he said to me one day, 'Bill, I know there ain't nothing here you can't do. Go over there and help with the big top.'

"And Mrs. Ringling, she knows there ain't nothing I can't do. 'Course I ain't in the business now. I'm 68 years old come May. But I just don't dare go over to the circus grounds when they come here. I went over last year and Mrs. Ringling, she come riding up in a Rolls-Royce and she saw me and sent for me. I went over to her car and she says, 'Bill, I know there ain't nothing you can't do and one of the cooks is sick, so hop in here and I'll take you over.'

"You got a broom, ma'am? I'll sweep the walk and make it look nice. There ain't no kind of work I can't do. My father brought us all up to work. He was foreman on a big stock farm and what he said was law and gospel.

"Yes'm, I been married, but my wife died 24 year ago. We lived together 20 years and never had ten minutes of cross words in all that time. Yes'm, I didn't argue. She was one smart woman. She was making $200 a month when I married her. Yes, ma'am, she was bookkeeper in a big factory and that's what she made. And when me an her was going to get married her boss came to me and said, 'The girl you're going to marry is my bookkeeper and I don't want to lose her. Can't I give you a job so as to keep her '

"So he did, put me in the factory—I'm a machinist by trade—and paid me $5 a day. Yes'm, I was with the circus, but that was in the summer. I was a machinist in the winter. Yes, ma'am, I'm an old trapee performer. We lived well, but the banks got me for $11,000. But I got my health and there ain't nothing I can't do.

"Well, if here ain't a dead soldier under this rose bush. Now, plenty of people seeing this in your yard would say, 'Look at that whiskey bottle. Those people drink.'

"That's one thing I ain't got no use for. Must be I ain't, for I never go in no liquor shop. No, ma'am, if the liquor stores never sold a drop until I come in, they'd never sell annother drop in all their lives. It's a disgrace to this country.

"You got some manure over there? Well, how about sharpening that lawn mower? All right, ma'am, but I never would of worked for you if I hadn't thought I'd get that lawn mower to sharpen. That's my business, not that dirty old work. And I know you ain't going to pay me nothing. Here I been wasting my time when I might have got two or three scissors to sharpen by this time. I don't intend to work for you any longer, getting my clothes all dirtied up for nothing. I got a regular job, I have. I don't have to do dirty work. If I have to work for nothing I might as well do nothing for nothing.

"You call that decent pay? Well, I don't. Here I been working for two hours and I expect 50 cents an hour. A dollar here? Well, it's such a mess of dimes and nickels how you expect me to tell it's a dollar?" HELEN H. LAWTON.

Today And Tomorrow

America And The Battle Of Britain

THE EXAMINATION of Messrs. Stimson and Knox brought out the fact that there are many Senators who are chiefly concerned to make certain that, whatever happens in the Battle of Britain the United States shall have nothing to say about the disposition of the British fleet. These same statesmen are voting billions upon billions to construct another American fleet. So presumably they realize that the control of the Atlantic Ocean against aggression from Europe is vital to the defense of America. Presumably they realize that though they vote billions for another fleet, it will take three or four years to construct the fleet. Yet because Col. Stimson and Col. Knox have wanted to take measures to prevent the British fleet and British shipyards from being captured and used to give the Axis immediate control of the Atlantic Ocean, these Senators treated them as dangerous men.

They were not satisfied with assurances that nobody is thinking of sending an American army to fight in Europe. Perhaps they realized how impossible this is. For even a child ought to be able to see that no army of any kind, British much less American, can now be landed in Europe. Their whole preoccupation, their sole concern, seemed to be to make sure that nothing will be done to prevent any part of British sea power—warships, shipyards and naval bases—from being incorporated into the naval forces of the German-Italian-Japanese combination. They were not merely cautious and skeptical as to whether effective measures can now be taken to guarantee this country against this eventuality. They are opposed in principle, in the name of international law, and as a means of safeguarding the American peace, against any move of any kind which might conserve British sea power for the defense of this hemisphere.

APPARENTLY, these Senators would feel safer if the British fleet were surrendered to Hitler than if some part of it, which was not sunk or scuttled, were induced to take refuge in this hemisphere. That is not what they said. But is not that what their position comes down to? They wish to build another American fleet—in four years. But they do not wish to make a move to prevent the Axis from obtaining another fleet—in four months. In all seriousness, is this an intelligible American policy?

On what conception of America's interests are these gentlemen acting? Is it that the United States can trust the recent assurances from Berlin and Rome that it has nothing to fear from the supremacy of the European Axis allied with Japan? If so, why do they support the plan to construct another American fleet? Is it that they think the British can resist so well that the British can exhaust their enemies, even if they cannot defeat them? If so, then how can these gentlemen justify an attitude which is calculated to refuse the British not only effective assistance in resisting, but to deprive them of the kind of hope which gives men an ultimate reason for resisting to the death? Is it that they think the British position is desperate? If so, how can they justify a refusal to negotiate with the empire for the preservation of some part of its naval power when there is still a chance to negotiate because British naval power is still intact?

THOSE WHO ARE determined to obstruct any move to preserve British sea power for the defense of this hemisphere must be allowed to say what their reasoning is. But since none of them has said what he would do and only that he would prevent others from doing anything, it is permissible to speculate upon the train of thought which has led these eminent Senators, several of them recently candidates for President, to a policy of obstruction and sheer negation and paralyzed impotence.

It is, we may perhaps guess, a failure and unwillingness to realize that the defeat of Britain would mean not only the fall of British sea power and the withdrawal of the protection which it has provided both in the Atlantic and the Pacific. To that these gentlemen are presumably prepared to accommodate themselves by arming this country as fast as possible and at the same time by seeking to appease Japan in the Far East and the Axis in South America and elsewhere. They have not, I believe, faced the possibility, which in the light of France's tragic experience is now a probability, that a defeated Britain would fall into the hands of men prepared, a few by choice and others by necessity, to act as the vassals and allies of the Axis and its Japanese partner. But having seen the French fleet fighting the British fleet the day after the Senators quizzed Col. Stimson, we can no longer afford not to grasp the fact that the total defeat of Britain would very probably mean that the British interest in Europe, in South America and in the Far East would be turned around and turned against us. And what would be the condition of Canada if in London there were a government which advised the King to require all British subjects to conform to the policy of the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo combination?

AND IF this happens, and for the moment the policy of influential Senators seems to be to prevent ourselves from doing anything to prevent it from happening, how much time does Senator Walsh think we shall be allowed in order to build another fleet? Is it not evident that to persist in the policy of absolute passivity and inaction and indifference is to take the greatest gamble ever taken with the security of America?

Fair Enough

Poor Mrs. Willkie

THROUGH THE ACTION of the Republican National Convention Mrs. Wendell Willkie is now a public personage, subject to heckling with sneak-punch questions by reporters of the New Deal press, including not a few Communists, avowed and covert, and to nasty little word-of-mouth stories of the "Queen, you said a mouthful" type, for which the obscure and wholly domestic Mrs. John F. Hylan, late Lady Mayoress of New York, is still remembered, doubtless without the slightest justification in fact.

Although she is not running for any office herself, Mrs. Willkie will be required to hold press conferences wherever she goes in deference to the American tradition, which has some substance, that those public figures who do not make themselves available and cordial to the press deserve its ridicule.

At her peril and at some peril to the political chances of the Republican nominee will she refuse unreasonable demands on her time, strength and patience and resent attempts to put her on a spot with questions planted not to elicit her ideas for what they are worth but to embarrass her.

This sort of thing will be done—not by all reporters but by an occasional tricky one—under the pretext that the public has a natural and legitimate interest in the mind and personality of the wife of the nominee and on the ground that by some intuitive process the husband may be judged by the wife.

If Mrs. Willkie tries to establish a rule against questions touching on matters of politics and state, occasions will rise in which only a very surefooted person of great experience will be able to decide on the instant whether the questions are on the fairway or out of bounds, and some which seem legitimate and receive answers will lead to others intended to draw her on to dangerous ground. Moreover, should she confine herself to discussions of such topics as clothes, cooking and parties, not because such are her greatest interest but to avoid entrapment, she will find herself depicted as a frivolous woman with no awareness of the awful issues of the day.

MRS. WILLKIE is small and fair and rather stylish, though not obtrusively so, and of her it might be said, in paraphrase of her fellow Hoosier George Ade, that if she is not exactly a queen for looks she is distinctly better than a nine-spot. However, she has had no preparatory experience in politics or personal publicity, and the realization that she will now be quoted and, occasionally, misquoted widely, and that her remarks may be held against her husband, may give her the stammers and make her answers worse.

If these observations seem to give the press a bad name that can go as it lies. The American press has never turned out more conscientious journalism than it is producing today, being especially careful to deserve the freedom which it enjoys alone in all the world.

But at the same time it is producing some of the vilest journalism in its history, the result of the introduction into the newspaper business of interlopers without the slightest notion of propriety or newspaper methods. Many years ago, like prostitution, this sort of vice was segregated in publications conducted for blackmail and personal revenge, but, like prostitution, it has now been scattered among the best neighborhoods, so to speak.

Not even the Washington corps has escaped contamination of its journalistic morals from this source, and a daily portion of white paper there has become in some instances a weapon for the public redress of private social slights and shrewish animosities.

UNAVOIDABLY, Mrs. Willkie will be compared with Mrs. Roosevelt and vice versa and, though Mrs. Roosevelt, of course, will treat her with instinctive politeness polished into diplomacy by long experience, Mrs. Willkie, with the best intentions, may be drawn into regrettable remarks.

Already it is customary to ask her if she has suddenly discovered an unsuspected gift of journalism, and what syndicate will handle her column, to which the most innocent reply might be construed as a scratch at Mrs. R. On other subjects in which Mrs. Roosevelt has shown a booming interest, such as the Communistic American Youth Congress and the Communistic Workers' Alliance, Mrs. Willkie might be induced to say things which would seem to attack Mrs. Roosevelt's conduct. And then the cats would yowl.

Romania's History

By Felix Morley
Editor Of The Post

How The Present Reflects The Past

A CERTAIN IRONIC consistency would be served if Romania, which owes both its national existence and its aggrandizement after the last war to French exertions, should sink back to political insignificance as a result of the collapse of France.

As a people the Romanians, in their more expansive moments, claim a connected history of some 17 centuries. It was in the second century A. D. that the Emperor Trajan settled Roman colonies on the lower reaches of the Danube to serve as an outpost of empire against barbarian incursions from the north and the east.

Because of this Roman origin, of which the people of Romania are still extremely proud, it seems only fair in this article to give the name of the country the spelling they prefer. The English, with their passion for adding a "u" to an "o" wherever possible, are responsible for the spelling "Roumania." American newspapers, for some undiscoverable reason, tend to drop not the "u" but the "o" and print the name "Rumania."

It would be as logical to alter the English spelling of "labour" and "honour" so as to read labur and honur. At a time when Romania is threatened with dissolution the least one can do is to leave its people the "o" which proudly recalls the Roman tradition in their country.

In spite of its impressive origin, however, Romania as a political entity was in complete oblivion from the third to the thirteenth century of the Christian era. During the latter period the country emerged from the Dark Ages as the two principalities of Moldavia and Wallachia, which achieved a certain autonomy under their own rulers during their period of subjection to the Ottoman Empire.

As Russia, in the eighteenth century, pressed southwards the Turkish overlordship of these principalities was exchanged for that of the Czar. In 1812 the Russians for the first time annexed the Province of Bessarabia, until then regarded as an integral part of Moldavia. In 1829, by the Treaty of Adrianople, the rest of Moldavia and Wallachia also became protectorates of the Russian Empire. Indeed there is ample precedent for the cartographic revision which is happening in Romania now.

II

A CENTURY AGO, as today, the question of who should control the mouths of the Danube was a matter of importance to all of Europe. A century ago, as today, Russian pressure in this vicinity was viewed with apprehension.

Consequently, when France and Britain defeated Russia in the Crimean War, a part of the settlement was the restoration of Bessarabia to Moldavia and the reallocation of this province, together with Wallachia, to Turkish control. Napoleon III, however, regarded this restoration as inadequate. He wanted to make this important territory a nation, serving as a buffer state between Austria, Russia and Turkey.

Through his intervention the two principalities were encouraged to merge their identity under a single prince. And after the Russo-Turkish war of 1877, in which Russia for the second time seized Bessarabia, the remainder of Moldavia and Wallachia were formally established as the kingdom of Romania.

In this form, as a small but relatively stable Balkan kingdom, notable largely for oil resources which in 1913 placed it fourth in the list of petroleum producing countries, Romania remained until the close of the World War. It was then that the mistake was made of more than doubling its area and heterogeneous population.

Bessarabia was retaken from Russia; Bukovina from Austrian Galicia; Transylvania and the Banat from Hungary, and the seizure of the lower Dobrudja from Bulgaria after the second Balkan War was confirmed. More than any other country, France stood behind this surfeit of annexations. And, however justifiable, it has been apparent since 1919 that without constant and effective French support they could not be maintained.

III.

THE PROOF of this became apparent when, on the afternoon of June 28, Russian troops for the third time in a century and a quarter poured into Bessarabia and annexed it, as well as Bukovina, "in order to lay at last the foundations of a durable peace."

As the French say: "The more things change, the more they remain the same." The drive of Stalin down toward the Bosphorus has behind it precisely the same forces which animated the conquering imperialism of Catherine the Great and Czar Alexander.

Russia, of course, has picked her moment wisely. This time there will be no objection from France and at the moment none of any effect from England. German acceptance, in principle, of the seizure of Bessarabia had been obtained by Moscow last year, though it is probable that any further Russian aggression would now be viewed with strong disfavor in Berlin. Certainly this would be so if Russia should threaten the oil fields of Wallachia, or transport of this vital commodity up the Danube.

Russia and Germany, however, have some rivalry for the disposal of Romania's destiny. Hungary, which for 20 years has resolutely demanded at least partial restoration of Transylvania, is obviously anxious not to miss the present golden opportunity. And Bulgaria, though very patient in her claim to recover that part of the Dobrudja which was almost wholly non-Romanian in population, cannot be expected to refrain from action if Hungary should feel it necessary to move into Transylvania.

So it remains questionable whether Romania, mutilated by Russia, threatened by Hungary and Bulgaria, torn by internal dissensions and deprived of all Anglo-French support, can survive in anything like the form which has made the country seem formidable—on the map—since 1919. But the outcome, whatever it may be, will be decided in Berlin. It is that capital, much more than the Romanian army, which imposes restraint on Budapest and Sofia.

IV.

THAT IS THE REAL significance of this Balkan overturn. In the fall of the inflated Romania kingdom, created by France with British acquiescence, now jeopardized by Russia with German acquiescence, is one of the first positive reflections of the change of the location of power in Europe. It is not by conquest and not by moving troops that Berlin now controls the Romanian destiny. It is by the dominating influence which Nazi force has given to the Wilhelmstrasse.

The irony of the situation lies in the fact that, as recently as April of 1939, King Carol gladly accepted British and French guarantees of assistance against any German aggression. This week he has renounced these guarantees to conform with "the new orientation of Europe;" has installed a strongly pro-German cabinet and is feverishly seeking support from the very country against which he was so recently willing to be guaranteed.

The plight of his regime is emphasized by the indications that Germany, wishing to alienate neither Russia nor Hungary and concerned with "Romania only for its oil," is largely indifferent to the future of Carol, his dynasty and the puffed-out country which he has sought to preserve by tight-rope diplomacy.

With the defeat of France, the country launched by her statesmen sinks back towards the status of a century ago. And Germany, never consulted in the creation of Romania, today holds the decision as to whether or not its dissolution shall be stayed.

Theatrical, Not Dramatic

The Third Term Issue

A WEEK from Monday the Democratic National Convention will meet to name its candidate and write its platform. Subsequent to that, the Republican nominee, Mr. Wendell Willkie, will make his acceptance speech—make it with knowledge of what the Democrats have said in their platform, and whom they have nominated. Later still, the as yet unknown Democratic nominee will make his acceptance speech. Thereafter, beginning presumably about the middle of August, the issues will be joined, the candidates will confront each other, an historic campaign will be on.

Let us review the events that led up to this. Months ago, when the campaign year began to simmer, Republicans expressed a vague wish that their national convention should be held after the Democratic one. It was true that for many years the Republicans had met first. They now, somewhat lamely, justified their suggestion of meeting later on the ground that they were the party out of power. As such, so they said, they had some sort of right to know the nominee and platform of the party in power, before acting on their own.

At once the Democrats made it clear that they had no notion of letting the Republicans hold the later convention. So far as the Republicans suggested postponement, the Democrats suggested greater postponement. President Roosevelt, at a press conference, made a statement which seemed to indicate that he would be well enough pleased if the Democratic convention were postponed as late as Labor Day. That, if done, would mean an extremely short campaign.

THIS ATTITUDE of Mr. Roosevelt, like practically every step he has taken for a year past, was subjected to two interpretations. So long as Mr. Roosevelt held himself open to accept a third nomination, whatever he did or said was bound to be examined in the light of its bearing on his presumed willingness, or wish, to be renominated and reelected. When he suggested an extremely late date for the Democratic convention, it was at once said that this would work to the advantage of his aspiration—if aspiration is the word—for a third term. He, being thoroughly known to the country, could do with a short campaign. Any other nominee would need a longer campaign. A Democratic convention held at a very late date would be unlikely to nominate any one other than Mr. Roosevelt.

Another motive was assigned for Mr. Roosevelt's desire for a late convention. The later the convention, the more progress the war in Europe would have made toward whatever was to be its conclusion; and the better able would Mr. Roosevelt and the convention be to take, about the war, a position which would "stand up" until election day. This point has bedeviled both parties. Both knew that the cyclonic rapidity of events in Europe might cause a party platform written in June or July to become meaningless, or worse, by the time of the election in November.

THE REPUBLICANS quickly realized that they were in no position to "jockey" with the Democrats about convention dates—in any competition of postponement, the Democrats could win. Perforce the Republicans fixed June 24, not materially later than their customary date. Just as soon as the Republicans named June 24, Chairman Farley named July 15 for the Democrats.

Thus, at the end of the maneuvering, the Democratic convention is to meet only about three weeks later than it would have met had precedent been followed. The extra three weeks are of no great benefit to Mr. Roosevelt. He has little more of the materials for his great decision than he would have had in any circumstances. True, he knows now who the Republican nominee is, but he would have known that anyhow—granted what was always certain, that the Republican convention would come first.

Extended time has robbed whatever Mr. Roosevelt does of much of the dramatic quality it might once have had. That he could have the nomination was known early in April, after the disastrous defeat of Mr. Garner in the Wisconsin and Illinois primaries. Any event, even one so unprecedented as an attempted violation of the two-term tradition, loses some of its dramatic force when postponed for nearly three months after it is known to be possible. Whatever Mr. Roosevelt now does—whether acceptance of a third nomination, or renunciation of it—can be theatrical, but not dramatic. "Theatrical" is the word for it, because it will proceed wholly from one man, will be a thing made by one man, staged by one man.

THE OTHER WORD, "dramatic," fits the nomination of Mr. Willkie by the Republicans, because it proceeded from the crowd, the people; it was, so to speak, an act of nature; it was unexpected, it had the dramatic quality of surprise, accompanied by quick realization that it had deep significance. In the competition for dramatic effect, the rivalry in showmanship, Mr. Roosevelt loses—unless he can conjure up for the Democratic convention something not now possible to envisage.

The Democrats realize this. They approach their convention with no great zest. Taking of the nomination by Mr. Roosevelt will be no surprise. Renunciation by him will force on the Democrats a condition they would not have courted. Because Mr. Roosevelt has kept himself to the front so long, other candidates have had practically no chance to develop.

Hull's Statement

Text Of Warning To Nazis

The text of Secretary of State Hull's statement yesterday on receipt of a German note concerning the Monroe Doctrine follows:

THE AMERICAN Charge d'Affaires in Berlin has communicated to the department the text of the note dated July 1, which he has received from the German minister of foreign affairs.

The note in question refers to a note delivered by the American Charge d'Affaires under instructions of the Government of the United States on June 18, in which this Government informed the government of the German Reich that it would not recognize any transfer of a geographical region of the Western Hemisphere from one non-American power to another non-American power, and that it would not acquiesce in any attempt to undertake such transfer.

The German minister of foreign affairs states that the Government of the German Reich is unable to perceive for what reason the Government of the United States of America has addressed this communication to the Reich government. He states that in contrast with other countries, especially in contrast with England and France, Germany has no territorial possessions in the American continent, and has given no occasion whatever for the assumption that it intends to acquire such possessions and he asserts that thus insofar as Germany is concerned, the communication addressed to the Reich government is without object.

THE GERMAN minister of foreign affairs continues by remarking that in this case the interpretation of the Monroe Doctrine implicit in the communication of the Government of the United States would amount to conferring upon some European countries the right to possess territories in the Western Hemisphere and not to other European countries. He states that it is obvious that such an interpretation would be untenable. He concludes by remarking that apart from this, the Reich government would like to point out again on this occasion that the nonintervention in the affairs of the American continent by European nations which is demanded by the Monroe Doctrine can in principle be legally valid only on condition that the American nations for their part do not interfere in the affairs of the European continent.

The foregoing is the substance of the German note:

I feel that no useful purpose will be served at this time for this Government to undertake to make any further communication to the government of the German Reich on the subject matter of the communication above quoted.

The fundamental questions involved are entirely clear to all of the peoples of the American republics, and undoubtedly as well to the majority of the governments and peoples in the rest of the world.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE is solely a policy of self-defense, which is intended to preserve the independence and integrity of the Americas. It was, and is, designed to prevent aggression in this hemisphere on the part of any non-American power, and likewise to make impossible any further extension to this hemisphere of any non-American system of government imposed from without. It contains within it not the slightest vestige of any implication, much less assumption, of hegemony on the part of the United States. It never has resembled, and it does not today resemble, policies which appear to be arising in other geographical areas of the world, which are alleged to be similar to the Monroe Doctrine, but which, instead of resting on the sole policies of self-defense and of respect for existing sovereignties, as does the Monroe Doctrine, would in reality seem to be only the pretext for the carrying out of conquest by the sword, of military occupation, and of complete economic and political domination by certain powers of other free and independent peoples.

The Monroe Dictrine has, of course, not the remotest connection with the fact that certain European nations exercise sovereignty over colonies in the Western Hemisphere and that certain other European nations do not. This situation existed before the Monroe Doctrine was proclaimed. The doctrine did not undertake to interfere with the existing situation, but did announce that further incursions would not be tolerated. It made clear that the future transfer of existing possessions to another non-American state would be regarded as inimical to the interests of this hemisphere. This has become a basic policy of the Government of the United States. As already stated in the communication addressed to the German government by this Government under date of June 18, the Government of the United States will neither recognize nor acquiesce in the transfer to a non-American power of geographical regions in this hemisphere now possessed by some other non-American power.

THE GOVERNMENT of the United States pursues a policy of nonparticipation and of noninvolvement in the purely political affairs of Europe. It will, however, continue to cooperate, as it has cooperated in the past, with all other nations, whenever the policies of such nations make it possible, and whenever it believes that such efforts are practicable and in its own best interests, for the purpose of promoting economic, commercial, and social rehabilitation, and of advancing the cause of international law and order, of which the entire world stands so tragically in need today.

Books And Things

"Quickies"

THE PUBLISHERS have their firecrackers, too. They call them "quickies." They are books rushed through the presses to meet the headlines of the day, to go off with a bang, even if they are but rubbish in the grass when the holiday is over. Sometimes they expode with a magnificent detonation, and sometimes the memory lasts in the mind, like the picture of a perfect skyrocket. And, of course, some of the "quickies" seem to come a bit damp from the presses and don't explode at all.

Alsop and Kintner's "American White Paper," published ten weeks ago, was a "quickie" that shot at once to the top of the best seller lists. Already Messrs. Alsop and Kintner have issued a "postscript," dated June 6, which is "tipped in" into new editions of the book. The postscript says, in substance, that events are moving even faster than the authors foresaw, but finds one consolation: "As the Napoleonic campaigns ended by uniting Germany, so a German victory will surely end by uniting the only outwardly United States."

Walter Millis' "Why Europe Fights" was not a "quickie," but it had the bitter timeliness of the genus; it was published on June 12, and seven days later Mr. Millis was adding a new introduction, which in effect alters his title to "Why America May Have to Fight."

That is the implicit argument in the "quickie" symposium, edited by William Allen White, called "Defense for America" (Macmillan, $1). The contributors seem hesitant to carry out the implications of their own logic, but in effect all of them, as Mr. White notes in his preface, say "This is our war." If that be the case, it seems strange that they should all adopt the toes-in-the-water program of "every aid short of sending men."

Quincy Wright, professor of international law at the University of Chicago, here pleads: Don't let dictatorship triumph in Europe (specifically, send the Allies planes); President Seymour, of Yale, holds that the only question before us is "how best to avoid the necessity of meeting a triumphant Germany at our own doors after she had conquered half the world;" Barry Bingham, aged 34, youngest of the contributors, says that he is ready for anything; the Rev. Henry Sloane Coffin denounces pagan totalitarianism; Grenville Clark, lawyer, outlines concrete stages of legislation (repeal the Johnson Act, permit Americans to volunteer in the Allied armies, authorize governmental loans to England); President Conant of Harvard eloquently argues that to prevent the capture or destruction of the British fleet is no moral crusade but sheer self-preservation; Mrs. Dwight Morrow calls for courage; Msgr. Ryan offers a dialectical analysis of the "just cause" of the Allies; President Graham of North Carolina asks for a long as well as a short range program of aid; Chester Rowell comments on the Japanese challenge; Lewis Douglas and Rabbi Wise sound ready to declare war at once, but don't quite say so.

BEST WRITTEN and meanest of the current "quickies" is John T. Flynn's blackface of President Roosevelt, "Country Squire in the White House" (Doubleday, $1).

Mr. Flynn, a newspaper economist who describes himself as a Bryan-Wilson Democrat, begins with ancestry. Franklin Roosevelt isn't really more than 3 per cent Dutch, he says—that's just a publicity build-up. He is almost 90 per cent English. And he has an English kind of education, too; private tutors and Groton. He was a "spoiled darling" when he went to school and a mamma's boy after he was married.

The Once Over

What America Needs

Less concern about comfortable upholstery, longer play hours and the streamlined day.

A return to the day when the height of heroism was not thought attained if you took a ride in a car without a guarantee that the shock absorbers were up to date and the ash tray where you could find it without stretching.

The elimination of the hitchhike as the predominant motif in American life, and an abandonment of the standard under which it is presumed anything can be accomplished through a sweet smile and the patience to hold the thumb in an upright position indefinitely.

Less attention to overstuffed mattresses, glassed-in showers, buzzer systems, the latest swimming strokes, nonstop beach picnics and the abolition of the idea that it's an unfair world if you press a button and don't get an immediate answer.

A fairly early retreat from the slogan "Never walk when you can ride" and "We demand that the Government provide an elevator for every two-story home!"

A willingness to admit that America shaped up as a tougher country in a crisis away back in the days when daughters helped ma wash the dishes, when sons didn't think pop was a bust if he didn't provide the kids with their own private conveyance to and from dances, and when neither mom nor pop was afraid that if they disciplined the kids they would get even by not taking them with them on the week-end auto trip.

More dependence on the brakes and less dependence on the horn.

Less tendency to squawk because the flivver uses more gas going uphill than down.

Immediate scrapping of the "what's-in-it-for-me?" standard.

A disposition on the part of all Americans to put less trust in political programs, radio pledges and new-style bookkeeping, and more trust in hard facts, obvious truths, old traditions and the simple rules of Little Red School House arithmetic.

A high resolve to know what's going on in Government, make your voice heard in opposition to dangerous doings and write your Congressman now and then, even if it makes you late for the screeno contest.

A serious effort on the part of all Americans to separate the pigmies from the giants in national leadership, to tell the hassenpfeffer from the solid meat, to suspect any movement to make life a bowl of cherries and to yell "Stop kidding me" to the preachers of the "You, too, can learn how to climb a rainbow in five free lessons."

A Birthday Wish

Yesterday marked the fifth anniversary of the signing of the National Labor Relations Act. Mr. Ernest K. Lindley rightly states that no other New Deal law, with the exception of the National Industrial Recovery Act, has created so much controversy. In Mr. Lindley's opinion, however, the thousands of cases disposed of, and the elections successfully conducted, reveal the board's accomplishments much better than the conflict over a few difficult cases.

Considering the importance of the issues raised in some of the cases that subjected the board to bitter criticism, one may well question the superior value of the numerical total. But it is undeniable that the board has had to bear the brunt of much criticism which should have been directed against labor leaders whose factional fights made the administration of a new and formidable type of labor legislation exceptionally difficult.

The task of determining the proper units for collective bargaining would have been much easier if the workers had been under a united union leadership. As it was, torn between the claims of opposing factions, the board could not avoid antagonizing both the A. F. of L. and C. I. O. regardless of the wisdom of its decisions.

On this fifth anniversary, therefore, it seems fitting to urge once more the importance of ending the strife that has handicapped the efforts of the NLRB to strengthen the bargaining position of labor. The present imperfect law is in need of amendment and the board itself ought to be reconstituted. But even without these needed reforms it could function much more effectively if a truce were called to labor warfare.

With the entire Nation anxious to unify itself against possible aggression, the demand for unity in the ranks of labor should seem exceptionally cogent. The national interest, as well as the cause of labor itself, would be furthered by putting an end to further fruitless strife between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O.

The Spirit Of Anarchy

Three bomb explosions have occurred in New York City within the past fortnight. The first two fortunately caused no loss of life and little damage to property. But an infernal machine which had been planted in the British pavilion at the World's Fair exploded with deadly effect last Thursday as it was being examined in the open, killing two detectives and seriously wounding several others.

No doubt some people will jump to the conclusion that this last outrage is the work of conspirators with totalitarian leanings. But another explanation will have to be found for the earlier explosions which occurred outside the office of a German commercial agency, just a floor below the German Consulate General, and at the entrance of the national headquarters of the Communist Party. Reasoning from analogy these earlier bombings would have to be regarded as the work of anti-Fascist, anti-Communist groups.

Whether the unknown criminals responsible for these bombings are working together, or as individuals, whether they call themselves Fascists, Communists, Irish Republicans or some other name is immaterial. For whatever their label, they are kindred spirits, whose activities express the same vicious urge to destroy. A cosmopolitan city like New York, harboring millions of people of different races, offers a fertile field for the professional agitator. Add to that the tension created by the war in Europe and the result is an atmosphere congenial to constitutionally lawless individuals.

Every effort must be made by the law enforcement agencies to track down and punish the guilty, both as a protection against further outrages and as a warning to potential criminals. Punishment, however, while curbing the lawless, does not get at the basic cause of these cowardly attacks. They should serve as a reminder of the importance of avoiding needlessly provocative acts and utterances which fire the spirit of anarchy latent in unbalanced and undisciplined men.

Heard Round The World

The same French government to which Great Britain on June 16 made an offer of outright political union has now severed diplomatic relations with London. It is a grim commentary on the speed with which the democratic axis has been dissolved and the extent to which French policy has been realigned since the German conquest.

The present break between the two former allies has its proximate cause in the destruction off Algeria, by British warships, of a part of the French fleet. But even without this bitterly tragic action it is to be feared that Anglo-French relations would have steadily deteriorated.

When Marshal Petain's government signed an armistice with Germany on June 22 the immediate interests of France were swung to the side of a general European peace. Until that peace is secured an army of occupation will be maintained on a large part of French territory; commerce and industry will be stagnant and almost hopeless disorganization will confront the hard-pressed government now endeavoring to operate from the little town of Vichy.

French seaports and air fields, moreover, will be used for the duration of the war as bases for German attacks against England. French territory will be subject to British counterattacks against the Germans. France, for as long as the war continues, will suffer all of the disadvantages of crushing military defeat with little of the opportunity for reconstruction which surrender usually affords a vanquished nation. Under such circumstances, it is inevitable that many Frenchmen should desire peace between England and Germany, regardless of whether British pride is thereby humbled as their own has been.

This underlying situation is bound to exacerbate the bad feeling aroused by destruction of a part of the French fleet, and to give justified cause for nervousness at all of the many points where vital French and British interests are contiguous. Already there are reports, it may be hoped untrue, of minor clashes between contingents of the former Allies in the Near East and of uneasiness in neighboring British and French West Indian possessions.

In Canada, particularly, the shells fired in the naval battle off Algeria will have unpleasant echoes. More than one-third of the population of this great British dominion is of French origin. With France out of the struggle the interest of French-Canadians in their country's war participation is very different from the case a month ago.

Perhaps Winston Churchill gave these factors adequate attention before the heart-rending decision to demand surrender of the French warships was made. Certainly one must assume that he at least consulted the Canadian government, so deeply concerned with any factor affecting Anglo-French relations. One may suppose that the British premier, in spite of his impetuous nature, weighed all the considerations and still decided that it was of paramount importance to insure British control over all French warships, by force if necessary.

But the implications of this attack on a former ally are not less far-reaching because the British government presumably studied them very carefully before giving the orders which have precipitated the present dreadful rupture.

Our Loss Of Police

Fear that Congress is about to create a fourth police force that would further confuse the task of law enforcement in Washington may be put aside. Representative Sasscer's bill passed by the House the other day would merely recognize the United States Building Guards as policemen and increase their salaries accordingly. These guards are already invested with full police powers over Federal buildings and grounds. Their number is not increased by the Sasscer bill, and their salaries are paid entirely from Federal funds.

There is reason for concern, however, over the recurrent weakening of the Metropolitan Police force for the purpose of giving additional protection to Federal agencies. Several months ago officials concluded that additional guards were needed at the White House. Twenty Metropolitan policemen were taken for that purpose. Now 20 experienced men of the local force have been detailed to the Capitol, which already has a contingent of 136 special policemen.

Congress recently gave some recognition to the need for more officers to enforce the law in Washington. Provision was made in the 1941 Appropriations Act for the addition of 15 men to the Metropolitan Police. But the prospective gain of 15 rookies is much more than offset by the temporary loss of 20 experienced men to the Capitol Police. In other words, the force on which the people of this growing city rely for protection of their lives and property is weaker than it was before.

Washington's crime record would be a disgrace to any city; it is doubly disgraceful for the National Capital. Yet the interest of Federal authorities seems to center in only one small segment of the problem—the protection of national institutions. By comparison, the robbery, swindling or even murder of Washington citizens seems to arouse little concern.

Pointing His Own Moral

President Roosevelt has evidently thought seriously about the fundamentals of American government since February 5, 1937, when he casually asked Congress to grant him permission to pack the Supreme Court.

Yesterday, at Hyde Park, the President waxed eloquent in defense of that delicate balance between executive, legislature and judiciary which three years ago he was extremely anxious to destroy.

To show how our democracy works he even cited approvingly the case of the Federal income tax law, in which constitutional amendment proved necessary for validation. This is a striking and pleasant change from the days when "Nine Old Men" were held responsible for gumming the New Deal.

Incidentally, it is toward age as well as toward the established processes of our democracy that Mr. Roosevelt became more sympathetic as he himself grows older. In 1937 he thought men of 70 too old for service on the bench. His own nominee for Secretary of War—now as strenuous and exacting a post as can be imagined—will be 73 in September.

With the President's concern lest Americans should compromise democracy in behalf of dictatorship there will, of course, be universal approval. As he says, any such compromise would be dangerous and unwholesome.

Those are precisely the adjectives which many Americans would apply to third-term aspirations, if one can imagine any American President willing to acquiesce in such an affront to the traditions which Mr. Roosevelt seeks to preserve.

Dog Eat Dog

There is nothing new in the war of our No. 1 bird pest against our No. 1 insect pest. The Department of Agriculture knew as long ago as 1920 that starlings ate Japanese beetles.

The starling, however, is a gregarious creature which follows the dictates of starling fashion; when his fellows are eating fruit, he eats fruit, and when his friends are devouring bugs he devours bugs. Therefore the news that our local flocks have developed a taste for Popillia Japonica is doubly welcome.

In some respects the starling is much maligned. No one denies he is a nuisance. His favorite roosts are the trees of residential sections, even when there are extensive woodlands nearby. A flock of starlings can strip a cherry tree in an afternoon. On the other hand, cherries in season form only about 15 per cent of the adult starling's diet, and about 23 per cent of the robin's.

The robin's stealthy depredations have not branded him as a marauder. Starlings also like apples, but most of the damage to corn that is blamed on them is the work of grackles and red-winged blackbirds. In general, nearly half the starling's food consists of insects.

Clifford Lanham, District superintendent of trees, says the starlings here are developing a technique of eating Japanese beetles. They lift the leaves with one foot, snatch the beetles from the underside and crush the shells. If this goes on the starlings may yet become respectable citizens of the District, and we might be persuaded, if only during the beetle season, to put away the balloons, Roman candles, tin cans and shotguns used without conspicuous success to frighten them away from our foliage and the ledges of our public buildings. We may even forgive them for their ear-piercing chatter.

At a banquet they dope you up with heavy food and before you can recover sufficiently to escape, somebody gets up and throws a speech at you.

The scarcity of jobs is becoming considerably less acute. Every day or so somebody not kin to any public official succeeds in securing employment.

"Life on earth, as now constituted, will continue with very little change for at least a billion years," declares a Princeton professor. Aw, come now, doctor; this is no time for pessimism.

Sleepy Drivers

From the Memphis Commercial Appeal

State police troopers stationed at South Haven, Mich., are now stopping trucks to see if the drivers have been hitting the ball so long that they are sleepy. If a driver shows signs of unusual fatigue and drowsiness, the troopers order him to bed to stay until he is fully rested and at himself. This rather unusual procedure was adopted after there was a wave of early morning traffic accidents in which trucks were involved. It seems a sound and logical exercise of the police power, especially if traffic officers really exist to prevent accidents rather than arrest those who violate the laws of the land and of common sense and get into trouble.

The Underpass

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The editorial in The Post of July 3 is most disappointing. We, who are interested in keeping Washington a city of beauty, regret that one of our leading papers should be so short-sighted.

This is not just the interest of property owners of Sixteenth street, but an interest of every citizen of the United States. Surely the avenue to the most noted building in our country and the world today, for that matter, should be protected from destruction.

Washington is not a city of industry. Why all this worry in getting out of the city—or rather into the suburbs? Cities of several millions do not have the conditions that we have here. It would seem that instead of destroying the beauty of the city, we should insist on an official who is capable of making such changes as are necessary to relieve congestion in the few locations downtown.

I wish to suggest that the large amount of money needed for this one project be divided and used to widen several streets, such as P street from Logan Circle to Dupont Circle, as this would relieve traffic on three circles and two avenues.

Thirteenth street should be widened from Logan Circle to Park road to assist traffic to the fast growing Northwest. Also a street parallel to K street should be widened to relieve traffic routed to Georgetown, Chevy Chase, Rockville, Md., and Virginia

On Isolationists

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In my opinion our first and most important step toward speeding up our national defense program and material aid to the Allies is to impeach all our sissy and weak-kneed legislator-isolationists.

Some of our "isolationists" remind me of Ferdinand the Bull, who sits under his favorite tree and smells the flowers while Hitler arms, builds and arms and then takes what he wants.

Our isolationists tell us to mind our own business and not to meddle in European conflicts, not realizing that the European struggle is our struggle indeed.

"The Whole Man"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Miss Dorothy Thompson has expressed herself recently as bemoaning the fact that our high schools and colleges are turning out graduates who "are completely unfitted for the realities of the world," said realities consisting of a mechanically developed society in which the ability to "read a slide rule or handle a screw driver" is the criterion for the training of the "whole man."

One would expect that Miss Thompson's mood of a contemporary Cassandra would imply that when she uses such an Aristotelian term as the "whole man," she should recognize the meaning of the term. If by using it, she wants to convey the impression that one who cannot handle a slide rule or a screw driver is not a "whole man," she either has been misinformed or hasn't examined the implications of her thought.

Using the word "technics" for her criterion, for that would embody all she has in mind, she would demand that if our schools did not produce engineers, our educational system was not properly geared to democratic society. Even the most ardent Veblenite (contrary to her assertion) never conceded that our society would need only engineers; time and again, Veblen maintained that a society which divorced technics from cultural values would be doomed.

In the light of this fact, Miss Thompson's arguments with reference to our educational system fall far short of the idea of the "whole man" that education aims to develop. I presume that her ideal educational system would be one in which stiff courses in mathematics would be supplemented by equally stiff courses in the physical and biological sciences, ultimately producing a psuedo-synthetic Mendeleff - Conklin - Millikan combination, all rolled in one.

Feed The Hungry

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Many Forum writers have suggested that all fifth columnists be put in jail, or under the surveillance of the F. B. I., or deported to some other country. But I should like to suggest that they be converted to the Christian way of thinking and living. American churches spend millions of dollars annually to tell the heathens of foreign lands the story of Jesus who died on the cross, that the whole world might be safe for democracy. But what are the American churches doing to make good Christians, as well as good citizens, out of the fifth columnists? Are our ministers and home missionaries asleep on the job? If Jesus were on earth today, what would He do to stop the activities of the fifth column? He would first feed the hungry, clothe the naked, and heal the sick. Then he would preach the Gospel to them.

What are the conditions in America which are causing men and women to become dissatisfied with our form of government? There are thousands of homeless, unemployed people, wandering to and fro, from one coast to the other, looking for work. There are thousands more living on starvation wages, while their employers live in luxury. There are many undernourished children living in sunless slums, while fat politicians loll about on sunny beaches. Let us first rid our country of undesirable living conditions, before we attempt to clean up the fifth column situation. Now is the time for all good Christians to come to the aid of their country, by helping to make America an earthly paradise for all disgruntled fifth columnists.

Eire's Position

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Eire is not a member of the British Commonwealth of Nations as stated in The Post of July 3. The Privy Council, the highest court in England, in a test case rendered the decision that Eire is a "free, independent, and sovereign nation."

Neither England nor Germany has any right to invade Ireland. Eire is a neutral nation, and there is no legitimate reason for stating that Eire should help England in her war against Germany.

Eire is increasing her army at the rate of 2,000 men a day. While it may not match in strength the armies of Germany or England, still what it lacks in numbers will be compensated for by the genius, courage, and bravery of its men. Germany and England should pause, look and listen before invading a country with a history such as Ireland is the proud possessor of.

Gen. Haig, during the World War, sent the following cablegram home to England: "Send me 30,000 Englishmen, or 300 Irishmen."

Working Mothers

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Senator McCarran, in his statement to The Post, July 2, deserves much commendation in his blaming of "working fathers and mothers" for the high rate of "juvenile delinquency in the Captial." He is entirely correct and Washington papers should give the idea more publicity.

The Senator from Nevada should, however, have laid a bit more stress on the working mothers, for it is they, alone, who are neglecting the home. I cannot see for the life of me how a woman can do justice, both to her home and her office. The hue and cry generally put up by them, is that "My husband does not make enough money, and the rents are so high." This seems to me a very puny excuse, for a little careful planning before marriage and as much self-denial after marriage, on the part of husband and wife would easily do the trick.

Robert Jackson Quoted On War

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At this time when pro-war propagandists seek to whip the Nation into fury and frenzy that will make easier American participation in the orgy of international sadism and slaughter across the ocean, may we call to yours and your readers' attention some words spoken by Robert H. Jackson, Attorney General, about 2½ years ago—January 17, 1938—at a banquet given in Jamestown, N. Y., in honor of Mayor-Emeritus Samuel A. Carlson who retired then after serving as the city's chief executive for 26 years.

Mr. Carlson, like Mr. Jackson, at the time of the World War, had opposed American entry into the war and the war hysteria which saw a blackout of civil liberties in many cities, but not that of which Mr. Carlson was official head.

The relevant excerpts from Mr. Jackson's statement follow:

"I think it has become apparent today that the American Expeditionary Forces fought for ideals that even our allies in Europe did not share; that our participation in a 'war to end war' was futile; and our hope to make the world 'safe for democracy' was disappointed. But to have said as much, when the passion for war was on, was uncomfortable, and it seemed at that time certain to end the careers of all who participated in the hope for peace.

"Throughout the war Samuel A. Carlson stood, as the official head of this community, for free speech—not as a theory, but as a fact. He always respected the civil rights of the people of this city.

"I recall the days of the so-called 'slacker raids' and 'red drives'—those vindictive and cruel public movements which disgraced the memory of many cities. I was acting as corporation counsel when it was proposed that this city engage in a drive of this kind.

"There were official and unofficial organizations that wanted, suddenly and without warning, to round up the young men of the city on their way to work in the morning, through the aid of patriotic volunteers to supplement the police force. All of those who failed to have on their persons registration cards were to be bundled into the lock-up. All of those whose activities or opinions were under suspicion were to be held for examination. It is utterly inconceivable to us today that such a thing could happen in our city. But it did happen in many of our cities, and I regret to say that it had the approval of very high officials . . .

"Sam Carlson, more than any other one man, reached the decision that no such 'raid' would blacken this community; that no part of this community, however overheated with zeal, would be permitted to make a drive or raid upon any other part of this community."

The Citizens Committee Against War, opposed to all totalitarianism at all times, urges official and rank and file American to take heed. Let us not repeat the mistake referred to above. We regret that in at least one respect even Mr. Jackson has dangerously compromised his position, as set forth, namely, in relation to aliens.

ANNETTE TEMIN,

Secretary, Citizens Committee Against War.

In Search Of Work

"Good morning, ma'am. Got any scissors or knives that need sharpening? Now, ain't that a pity? Nobody don't use no scissors nor knives any more. I ain't got no more than a nickel and that won't buy no more than a cup-a-coffee. What kind of a job is that, ma'am? Yes, indeed, I can clean up a yard. Around this way? Yes, ma'am.

"Ain't you got a lawn mower, ma'am, that needs sharpening? I'll sharpen it fine and set the blades all for a dollar. Yes, ma'am. All right, ma'am.

"What you want done, ma'am? Yes, I can rake up. Where all those locust pods come from? Now, them pods makes a good drink. You soak 'em in water with a lot of sugar in it and it makes the finest kind of a drink. Tain't intoxicating, but it's mighty sweet.

"Now, you won't have no trouble cutting the grass this summer. If that lawn mower was sharpened up good you could cut that grass just fine. No'm, it ain't high enough now to cut but it's going to get high.

"There, that looks better already, ma'am. There ain't nothing prettier than flowers. I had a letter from Florida this morning, from the circus place. I'm an old showman myself, used to perform on the trapee. 'Course I can't do it now. Mrs. Ringling runs the circus now and she's a mighty fine woman. He was a mighty fine man, too, never made no difference between people, treated 'em all alike. Yes, ma'am, I was in the show business 40 year. There wasn't nothing I wouldn't do. Mr. Ringling, he said to me one day, 'Bill, I know there ain't nothing here you can't do. Go over there and help with the big top.'

"And Mrs. Ringling, she knows there ain't nothing I can't do. 'Course I ain't in the business now. I'm 68 years old come May. But I just don't dare go over to the circus grounds when they come here. I went over last year and Mrs. Ringling, she come riding up in a Rolls-Royce and she saw me and sent for me. I went over to her car and she says, 'Bill, I know there ain't nothing you can't do and one of the cooks is sick, so hop in here and I'll take you over.'

"You got a broom, ma'am? I'll sweep the walk and make it look nice. There ain't no kind of work I can't do. My father brought us all up to work. He was foreman on a big stock farm and what he said was law and gospel.

"Yes'm, I been married, but my wife died 24 year ago. We lived together 20 years and never had ten minutes of cross words in all that time. Yes'm, I didn't argue. She was one smart woman. She was making $200 a month when I married her. Yes, ma'am, she was bookkeeper in a big factory and that's what she made. And when me an her was going to get married her boss came to me and said, 'The girl you're going to marry is my bookkeeper and I don't want to lose her. Can't I give you a job so as to keep her'

"So he did, put me in the factory—I'm a machinist by trade—and paid me $5 a day. Yes'm, I was with the circus, but that was in the summer. I was a machinist in the winter. Yes, ma'am, I'm an old trapee performer. We lived well, but the banks got me for $11,000. But I got my health and there ain't nothing I can't do.

"Well, if here ain't a dead soldier under this rose bush. Now, plenty of people seeing this in your yard would say, 'Look at that whiskey bottle. Those people drink.'

"That's one thing I ain't got no use for. Must be I ain't, for I never go in no liquor shop. No, ma'am, if the liquor stores never sold a drop until I come in, they'd never sell annother drop in all their lives. It's a disgrace to this country.

"You got some manure over there? Well, how about sharpening that lawn mower? All right, ma'am, but I never would of worked for you if I hadn't thought I'd get that lawn mower to sharpen. That's my business, not that dirty old work. And I know you ain't going to pay me nothing. Here I been wasting my time when I might have got two or three scissors to sharpen by this time. I don't intend to work for you any longer, getting my clothes all dirtied up for nothing. I got a regular job, I have. I don't have to do dirty work. If I have to work for nothing I might as well do nothing for nothing.

"You call that decent pay? Well, I don't. Here I been working for two hours and I expect 50 cents an hour. A dollar here? Well, it's such a mess of dimes and nickels how you expect me to tell it's a dollar?" HELEN H. LAWTON.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

America And The Battle Of Britain

THE EXAMINATION of Messrs. Stimson and Knox brought out the fact that there are many Senators who are chiefly concerned to make certain that, whatever happens in the Battle of Britain the United States shall have nothing to say about the disposition of the British fleet. These same statesmen are voting billions upon billions to construct another American fleet. So presumably they realize that the control of the Atlantic Ocean against aggression from Europe is vital to the defense of America. Presumably they realize that though they vote billions for another fleet, it will take three or four years to construct the fleet. Yet because Col. Stimson and Col. Knox have wanted to take measures to prevent the British fleet and British shipyards from being captured and used to give the Axis immediate control of the Atlantic Ocean, these Senators treated them as dangerous men.

They were not satisfied with assurances that nobody is thinking of sending an American army to fight in Europe. Perhaps they realized how impossible this is. For even a child ought to be able to see that no army of any kind, British much less American, can now be landed in Europe. Their whole preoccupation, their sole concern, seemed to be to make sure that nothing will be done to prevent any part of British sea power—warships, shipyards and naval bases—from being incorporated into the naval forces of the German-Italian-Japanese combination. They were not merely cautious and skeptical as to whether effective measures can now be taken to guarantee this country against this eventuality. They are opposed in principle, in the name of international law, and as a means of safeguarding the American peace, against any move of any kind which might conserve British sea power for the defense of this hemisphere.

APPARENTLY, these Senators would feel safer if the British fleet were surrendered to Hitler than if some part of it, which was not sunk or scuttled, were induced to take refuge in this hemisphere. That is not what they said. But is not that what their position comes down to? They wish to build another American fleet—in four years. But they do not wish to make a move to prevent the Axis from obtaining another fleet—in four months. In all seriousness, is this an intelligible American policy?

On what conception of America's interests are these gentlemen acting? Is it that the United States can trust the recent assurances from Berlin and Rome that it has nothing to fear from the supremacy of the European Axis allied with Japan? If so, why do they support the plan to construct another American fleet? Is it that they think the British can resist so well that the British can exhaust their enemies, even if they cannot defeat them? If so, then how can these gentlemen justify an attitude which is calculated to refuse the British not only effective assistance in resisting, but to deprive them of the kind of hope which gives men an ultimate reason for resisting to the death? Is it that they think the British position is desperate? If so, how can they justify a refusal to negotiate with the empire for the preservation of some part of its naval power when there is still a chance to negotiate because British naval power is still intact?

THOSE WHO ARE determined to obstruct any move to preserve British sea power for the defense of this hemisphere must be allowed to say what their reasoning is. But since none of them has said what he would do and only that he would prevent others from doing anything, it is permissible to speculate upon the train of thought which has led these eminent Senators, several of them recently candidates for President, to a policy of obstruction and sheer negation and paralyzed impotence.

It is, we may perhaps guess, a failure and unwillingness to realize that the defeat of Britain would mean not only the fall of British sea power and the withdrawal of the protection which it has provided both in the Atlantic and the Pacific. To that these gentlemen are presumably prepared to accommodate themselves by arming this country as fast as possible and at the same time by seeking to appease Japan in the Far East and the Axis in South America and elsewhere. They have not, I believe, faced the possibility, which in the light of France's tragic experience is now a probability, that a defeated Britain would fall into the hands of men prepared, a few by choice and others by necessity, to act as the vassals and allies of the Axis and its Japanese partner. But having seen the French fleet fighting the British fleet the day after the Senators quizzed Col. Stimson, we can no longer afford not to grasp the fact that the total defeat of Britain would very probably mean that the British interest in Europe, in South America and in the Far East would be turned around and turned against us. And what would be the condition of Canada if in London there were a government which advised the King to require all British subjects to conform to the policy of the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo combination?

AND IF this happens, and for the moment the policy of influential Senators seems to be to prevent ourselves from doing anything to prevent it from happening, how much time does Senator Walsh think we shall be allowed in order to build another fleet? Is it not evident that to persist in the policy of absolute passivity and inaction and indifference is to take the greatest gamble ever taken with the security of America?

The Once Over

What America Needs

Less concern about comfortable upholstery, longer play hours and the streamlined day.

A return to the day when the height of heroism was not thought attained if you took a ride in a car without a guarantee that the shock absorbers were up to date and the ash tray where you could find it without stretching.

The elimination of the hitch-hike as the predominant motif in American life, and an abandonment of the standard under which it is presumed anything can be accomplished through a sweet smile and the patience to hold the thumb in an upright position indefinitely.

Less attention to overstuffed mattresses, glassed-in showers, buzzer systems, the latest swimming strokes, nonstop beach picnics and the abolition of the idea that it's an unfair world if you press a button and don't get an immediate answer.

A fairly early retreat from the slogan "Never walk when you can ride" and "We demand that the Government provide an elevator for every two-story home!"

A willingness to admit that America shaped up as a tougher country in a crisis away back in the days when daughters helped ma wash the dishes, when sons didn't think pop was a bust if he didn't provide the kids with their own private conveyance to and from dances, and when neither mom nor pop was afraid that if they disciplined the kids they would get even by not taking them with them on the week-end auto trip.

More dependence on the brakes and less dependence on the horn.

Less tendency to squawk because the flivver uses more gas going uphill than down.

Immediate scrapping of the "what's-in-it-for-me?" standard.

A disposition on the part of all Americans to put less trust in political programs, radio pledges and new-style bookkeeping, and more trust in hard facts, obvious truths, old traditions and the simple rules of Little Red School House arithmetic.

A high resolve to know what's going on in Government, make your voice heard in opposition to dangerous doings and write your Congressman now and then, even if it makes you late for the screeno contest.

A serious effort on the part of all Americans to separate the pigmies from the giants in national leadership, to tell the hasenpfeffer from the solid meat, to suspect any movement to make life a bowl of cherries and to yell "Stop kidding me" to the preachers of the "You, too, can learn how to climb a rainbow in five free lessons."

Fair Enough

Poor Mrs. Willkie

THROUGH THE ACTION of the Republican National Convention Mrs. Wendell Willkie is now a public personage, subject to heckling with sneak-punch questions by reporters of the New Deal press, including not a few Communists, avowed and covert, and to nasty little word-of-mouth stories of the "Queen, you said a mouthful" type, for which the obscure and wholly domestic Mrs. John F. Hylan, late Lady Mayoress of New York, is still remembered, doubtless without the slightest justification in fact.

Although she is not running for any office herself, Mrs. Willkie will be required to hold press conferences wherever she goes in deference to the American tradition, which has some substance, that those public figures who do not make themselves available and cordial to the press deserve its ridicule.

At her peril and at some peril to the political chances of the Republican nominee will she refuse unreasonable demands on her time, strength and patience and resent attempts to put her on a spot with questions planted not to elicit her ideas for what they are worth but to embarrass her.

This sort of thing will be done—not by all reporters but by an occasional tricky one—under the pretext that the public has a natural and legitimate interest in the mind and personality of the wife of the nominee and on the ground that by some intuitive process the husband may be judged by the wife.

If Mrs. Willkie tries to establish a rule against questions touching on matters of politics and state, occasions will rise in which only a very surefooted person of great experience will be able to decide on the instant whether the questions are on the fairway or out of bounds, and some which seem legitimate and receive answers will lead to others intended to draw her on to dangerous ground. Moreover, should she confine herself to discussions of such topics as clothes, cooking and parties, not because such are her greatest interest but to avoid entrapment, she will find herself depicted as a frivolous woman with no awareness of the awful issues of the day.

MRS. WILLKIE is small and fair and rather stylish, though not obtrusively so, and of her it might be said, in paraphrase of her fellow Hoosier George Ade, that if she is not exactly a queen for looks she is distinctly better than a nine-spot. However, she has had no preparatory experience in politics or personal publicity, and the realization that she will now be quoted and, occasionally, misquoted widely, and that her remarks may be held against her husband, may give her the stammers and make her answers worse.

If these observations seem to give the press a bad name that can go as it lies. The American press has never turned out more conscientious journalism than it is producing today, being especially careful to deserve the freedom which it enjoys alone in all the world.

But at the same time it is producing some of the vilest journalism in its history, the result of the introduction into the newspaper business of interlopers without the slightest notion of propriety or newspaper methods. Many years ago, like prostitution, this sort of vice was segregated in publications conducted for blackmail and personal revenge, but, like prostitution, it has now been scattered among the best neighborhoods, so to speak.

Not even the Washington corps has escaped contamination of its journalistic morals from this source, and a daily portion of white paper there has become in some instances a weapon for the public redress of private social slights and shrewish animosities.

UNAVOIDABLY, Mrs. Willkie will be compared with Mrs. Roosevelt and vice versa and, though Mrs. Roosevelt, of course, will treat her with instinctive politeness polished into diplomacy by long experience, Mrs. Willkie, with the best intentions, may be drawn into regrettable remarks.

Already it is customary to ask her if she has suddenly discovered an unsuspected gift of journalism, and what syndicate will handle her column, to which the most innocent reply might be construed as a scratch at Mrs. R. On other subjects in which Mrs. Roosevelt has shown a booming interest, such as the Communistic American Youth Congress and the Communistic Workers' Alliance, Mrs. Willkie might be induced to say things which would seem to attack Mrs. Roosevelt's conduct. And then the cats would yowl.

Romania's History

By Felix Morley

Editor Of The Post

How The Present Reflects The Past

A CERTAIN IRONIC consistency would be served if Romania, which owes both its national existence and its aggrandizement after the last war to French exertions, should sink back to political insignificance as a result of the collapse of France.

As a people the Romanians, in their more expansive moments, claim a connected history of some 17 centuries. It was in the second century A. D. that the Emperor Trajan settled Roman colonies on the lower reaches of the Danube to serve as an outpost of empire against barbarian incursions from the north and the east.

Because of this Roman origin, of which the people of Romania are still extremely proud, it seems only fair in this article to give the name of the country the spelling they prefer. The English, with their passion for adding a "u" to an "o" wherever possible, are responsible for the spelling "Roumania." American newspapers, for some undiscoverable reason, tend to drop not the "u" but the "o" and print the name "Rumania."

It would be as logical to alter the English spelling of "labour" and "honour" so as to read labur and honur. At a time when Romania is threatened with dissolution the least one can do is to leave its people the "o" which proudly recalls the Roman tradition in their country.

In spite of its impressive origin, however, Romania as a political entity was in complete oblivion from the third to the thirteenth century of the Christian era. During the latter period the country emerged from the Dark Ages as the two principalities of Moldavia and Wallachia, which achieved a certain autonomy under their own rulers during their period of subjection to the Ottoman Empire.

As Russia, in the eighteenth century, pressed southwards the Turkish overlordship of these principalities was exchanged for that of the Czar. In 1812 the Russians for the first time annexed the Province of Bessarabia, until then regarded as an integral part of Moldavia. In 1829, by the Treaty of Adrianople, the rest of Moldavia and Wallachia also became protectorates of the Russian Empire. Indeed there is ample precedent for the cartographic revision which is happening in Romania now.

II

A CENTURY AGO, as today, the question of who should control the mouths of the Danube was a matter of importance to all of Europe. A century ago, as today, Russian pressure in this vicinity was viewed with apprehension.

Consequently, when France and Britain defeated Russia in the Crimean War, a part of the settlement was the restoration of Bessarabia to Moldavia and the reallocation of this province, together with Wallachia, to Turkish control. Napoleon III, however, regarded this restoration as inadequate. He wanted to make this important territory a nation, serving as a buffer state between Austria, Russia and Turkey.

Through his intervention the two principalities were encouraged to merge their identity under a single prince. And after the Russo-Turkish war of 1877, in which Russia for the second time seized Bessarabia, the remainder of Moldavia and Wallachia were formally established as the kingdom of Romania.

In this form, as a small but relatively stable Balkan kingdom, notable largely for oil resources which in 1913 placed it fourth in the list of petroleum producing countries, Romania remained until the close of the World War. It was then that the mistake was made of more than doubling its area and heterogeneous population.

Bessarabia was retaken from Russia; Bukovina from Austrian Galicia; Transylvania and the Banat from Hungary, and the seizure of the lower Dobrudja from Bulgaria after the second Balkan War was confirmed. More than any other country, France stood behind this surfeit of annexations. And, however justifiable, it has been apparent since 1919 that without constant and effective French support they could not be maintained.

III.

THE PROOF of this became apparent when, on the afternoon of June 28, Russian troops for the third time in a century and a quarter poured into Bessarabia and annexed it, as well as Bukovina, "in order to lay at last the foundations of a durable peace."

As the French say: "The more things change, the more they remain the same." The drive of Stalin down toward the Bosphorus has behind it precisely the same forces which animated the conquering imperialism of Catherine the Great and Czar Alexander.

Russia, of course, has picked her moment wisely. This time there will be no objection from France and at the moment none of any effect from England. German acceptance, in principle, of the seizure of Bessarabia had been obtained by Moscow last year, though it is probable that any further Russian aggression would now be viewed with strong disfavor in Berlin. Certainly this would be so if Russia should threaten the oil fields of Wallachia, or transport of this vital commodity up the Danube.

Russia and Germany, however, have some rivalry for the disposal of Romania's destiny. Hungary, which for 20 years has resolutely demanded at least partial restoration of Transylvania, is obviously anxious not to miss the present golden opportunity. And Bulgaria, though very patient in her claim to recover that part of the Dobrudja which was almost wholly non-Romanian in population, cannot be expected to refrain from action if Hungary should feel it necessary to move into Transylvania.

So it remains questionable whether Romania, mutilated by Russia, threatened by Hungary and Bulgaria, torn by internal dissensions and deprived of all Anglo-French support, can survive in anything like the form which has made the country seem formidable—on the map—since 1919. But the outcome, whatever it may be, will be decided in Berlin. It is that capital, much more than the Romanian army, which imposes restraint on Budapest and Sofia.

IV.

THAT IS THE REAL significance of this Balkan overturn. In the fall of the inflated Romania kingdom, created by France with British acquiescence, now jeopardized by Russia with German acquiescence, is one of the first positive reflections of the change of the location of power in Europe. It is not by conquest and not by moving troops that Berlin now controls the Romanian destiny. It is by the dominating influence which Nazi force has given to the Wilhelmstrasse.

The irony of the situation lies in the fact that, as recently as April of 1939, King Carol gladly accepted British and French guarantees of assistance against any German aggression. This week he has renounced these guarantees to conform with "the new orientation of Europe;" has installed a strongly pro-German cabinet and is feverishly seeking support from the very country against which he was so recently willing to be guaranteed.

The plight of his regime is emphasized by the indications that Germany, wishing to alienate neither Russia nor Hungary and concerned with "Romania only for its oil," is largely indifferent to the future of Carol, his dynasty and the puffed-out country which he has sought to preserve by tight-rope diplomacy.

With the defeat of France, the country launched by her statesmen sinks back towards the status of a century ago. And Germany, never consulted in the creation of Romania, today holds the decision as to whether or not its dissolution shall be stayed.

Theatrical, Not Dramatic

By Mark Sullivan

The Third Term Issue

A WEEK from Monday the Democratic National Convention will meet to name its candidate and write its platform. Subsequent to that, the Republican nominee, Mr. Wendell Willkie, will make his acceptance speech—make it with knowledge of what the Democrats have said in their platform, and whom they have nominated. Later still, the as yet unknown Democratic nominee will make his acceptance speech. Thereafter, beginning presumably about the middle of August, the issues will be joined, the candidates will confront each other, an historic campaign will be on.

Let us review the events that led up to this. Months ago, when the campaign year began to simmer, Republicans expressed a vague wish that their national convention should be held after the Democratic one. It was true that for many years the Republicans had met first. They now, somewhat lamely, justified their suggestion of meeting later on the ground that they were the party out of power. As such, so they said, they had some sort of right to know the nominee and platform of the party in power, before acting on their own.

At once the Democrats made it clear that they had no notion of letting the Republicans hold the later convention. So far as the Republicans suggested postponement, the Democrats suggested greater postponement. President Roosevelt, at a press conference, made a statement which seemed to indicate that he would be well enough pleased if the Democratic convention were postponed as late as Labor Day. That, if done, would mean an extremely short campaign.

THIS ATTITUDE of Mr. Roosevelt, like practically every step he has taken for a year past, was subjected to two interpretations. So long as Mr. Roosevelt held himself open to accept a third nomination, whatever he did or said was bound to be examined in the light of its bearing on his presumed willingness, or wish, to be renominated and reelected. When he suggested an extremely late date for the Democratic convention, it was at once said that this would work to the advantage of his aspiration—if aspiration is the word—for a third term. He, being thoroughly known to the country, could do with a short campaign. Any other nominee would need a longer campaign. A Democratic convention held at a very late date would be unlikely to nominate any one other than Mr. Roosevelt.

Another motive was assigned for Mr. Roosevelt's desire for a late convention. The later the convention, the more progress the war in Europe would have made toward whatever was to be its conclusion; and the better able would Mr. Roosevelt and the convention be to take, about the war, a position which would "stand up" until election day. This point has bedeviled both parties. Both knew that the cyclonic rapidity of events in Europe might cause a party platform written in June or July to become meaningless, or worse, by the time of the election in November.

THE REPUBLICANS quickly realized that they were in no position to "jockey" with the Democrats about convention dates—in any competition of postponement, the Democrats could win. Perforce the Republicans fixed June 24, not materially later than their customary date. Just as soon as the Republicans named June 24, Chairman Farley named July 15 for the Democrats.

Thus, at the end of the maneuvering, the Democratic convention is to meet only about three weeks later than it would have met had precedent been followed. The extra three weeks are of no great benefit to Mr. Roosevelt. He has little more of the materials for his great decision than he would have had in any circumstances. True, he knows now who the Republican nominee is, but he would have known that anyhow—granted what was always certain, that the Republican convention would come first.

Extended time has robbed whatever Mr. Roosevelt does of much of the dramatic quality it might once have had. That he could have the nomination was known early in April, after the disastrous defeat of Mr. Garner in the Wisconsin and Illinois primaries. Any event, even one so unprecedented as an attempted violation of the two-term tradition, loses some of its dramatic force when postponed for nearly three months after it is known to be possible. Whatever Mr. Roosevelt now does—whether acceptance of a third nomination, or renunciation of it—can be theatrical, but not dramatic. "Theatrical" is the word for it, because it will proceed wholly from one man, will be a thing made by one man, staged by one man.

THE OTHER WORD, "dramatic," fits the nomination of Mr. Willkie by the Republicans, because it proceeded from the crowd, the people; it was, so to speak, an act of nature; it was unexpected, it had the dramatic quality of surprise, accompanied by quick realization that it had deep significance. In the competition for dramatic effect, the rivalry in showmanship, Mr. Roosevelt loses—unless he can conjure up for the Democratic convention something not now possible to envisage.

The Democrats realize this. They approach their convention with no great zest. Taking of the nomination by Mr. Roosevelt will be no surprise. Renunciation by him will force on the Democrats a condition they would not have courted. Because Mr. Roosevelt has kept himself to the front so long, other candidates have had practically no chance to develop.

Hull's Statement

Text Of Warning To Nazis

The text of Secretary of State Hull's statement yesterday on receipt of a German note concerning the Monroe Doctrine follows:

THE AMERICAN Charge d'Affaires in Berlin has communicated to the department the text of the note dated July 1, which he has received from the German minister of foreign affairs.

The note in question refers to a note delivered by the American Charge d'Affaires under instructions of the Government of the United States on June 18, in which this Government informed the government of the German Reich that it would not recognize any transfer of a geographical region of the Western Hemisphere from one non-American power to another non-American power, and that it would not acquiesce in any attempt to undertake such transfer.

The German minister of foreign affairs states that the Government of the German Reich is unable to perceive for what reason the Government of the United States of America has addressed this communication to the Reich government. He states that in contrast with other countries, especially in contrast with England and France, Germany has no territorial possessions in the American continent, and has given no occasion whatever for the assumption that it intends to acquire such possessions and he asserts that thus insofar as Germany is concerned, the communication addressed to the Reich government is without object.

THE GERMAN minister of foreign affairs continues by remarking that in this case the interpretation of the Monroe Doctrine implicit in the communication of the Government of the United States would amount to conferring upon some European countries the right to possess territories in the Western Hemisphere and not to other European countries. He states that it is obvious that such an interpretation would be untenable. He concludes by remarking that apart from this, the Reich government would like to point out again on this occasion that the nonintervention in the affairs of the American continent by European nations which is demanded by the Monroe Doctrine can in principle be legally valid only on condition that the American nations for their part do not interfere in the affairs of the European continent.

The foregoing is the substance of the German note:

I feel that no useful purpose will be served at this time for this Government to undertake to make any further communication to the government of the German Reich on the subject matter of the communication above quoted.

The fundamental questions involved are entirely clear to all of the peoples of the American republics, and undoubtedly as well to the majority of the governments and peoples in the rest of the world.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE is solely a policy of self-defense, which is intended to preserve the independence and integrity of the Americas. It was, and is, designed to prevent aggression in this hemisphere on the part of any non-American power, and likewise to make impossible any further extension to this hemisphere of any non-American system of government imposed from without. It contains within it not the slightest vestige of any implication, much less assumption, of hegemony on the part of the United States. It never has resembled, and it does not today resemble, policies which appear to be arising in other geographical areas of the world, which are alleged to be similar to the Monroe Doctrine, but which, instead of resting on the sole policies of self-defense and of respect for existing sovereignties, as does the Monroe Doctrine, would in reality seem to be only the pretext for the carrying out of conquest by the sword, of military occupation, and of complete economic and political domination by certain powers of other free and independent peoples.

The Monroe Dictrine has, of course, not the remotest connection with the fact that certain European nations exercise sovereignty over colonies in the Western Hemisphere and that certain other European nations do not. This situation existed before the Monroe Doctrine was proclaimed. The doctrine did not undertake to interfere with the existing situation, but did announce that further incursions would not be tolerated. It made clear that the future transfer of existing possessions to another non-American state would be regarded as inimical to the interests of this hemisphere. This has become a basic policy of the Government of the United States. As already stated in the communication addressed to the German government by this Government under date of June 18, the Government of the United States will neither recognize nor acquiesce in the transfer to a non-American power of geographical regions in this hemisphere now possessed by some other non-American power.

THE GOVERNMENT of the United States pursues a policy of nonparticipation and of noninvolvement in the purely political affairs of Europe. It will, however, continue to cooperate, as it has cooperated in the past, with all other nations, whenever the policies of such nations make it possible, and whenever it believes that such efforts are practicable and in its own best interests, for the purpose of promoting economic, commercial, and social rehabilitation, and of advancing the cause of international law and order, of which the entire world stands so tragically in need today.

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett

"Quickies"

THE PUBLISHERS have their firecrackers, too. They call them "quickies." They are books rushed through the presses to meet the headlines of the day, to go off with a bang, even if they are but rubbish in the grass when the holiday is over. Sometimes they expode with a magnificent detonation, and sometimes the memory lasts in the mind, like the picture of a perfect skyrocket. And, of course, some of the "quickies" seem to come a bit damp from the presses and don't explode at all.

Alsop and Kintner's "American White Paper," published ten weeks ago, was a "quickie" that shot at once to the top of the best seller lists. Already Messrs. Alsop and Kintner have issued a "postscript," dated June 6, which is "tipped in" into new editions of the book. The postscript says, in substance, that events are moving even faster than the authors foresaw, but finds one consolation: "As the Napoleonic campaigns ended by uniting Germany, so a German victory will surely end by uniting the only outwardly United States."

Walter Millis' "Why Europe Fights" was not a "quickie," but it had the bitter timeliness of the genus; it was published on June 12, and seven days later Mr. Millis was adding a new introduction, which in effect alters his title to "Why America May Have to Fight."

That is the implicit argument in the "quickie" symposium, edited by William Allen White, called "Defense for America" (Macmillan, $1). The contributors seem hesitant to carry out the implications of their own logic, but in effect all of them, as Mr. White notes in his preface, say "This is our war." If that be the case, it seems strange that they should all adopt the toes-in-the-water program of "every aid short of sending men."

Quincy Wright, professor of international law at the University of Chicago, here pleads: Don't let dictatorship triumph in Europe (specifically, send the Allies planes); President Seymour, of Yale, holds that the only question before us is "how best to avoid the necessity of meeting a triumphant Germany at our own doors after she had conquered half the world;" Barry Bingham, aged 34, youngest of the contributors, says that he is ready for anything; the Rev. Henry Sloane Coffin denounces pagan totalitarianism; Grenville Clark, lawyer, outlines concrete stages of legislation (repeal the Johnson Act, permit Americans to volunteer in the Allied armies, authorize governmental loans to England); President Conant of Harvard eloquently argues that to prevent the capture or destruction of the British fleet is no moral crusade but sheer self-preservation; Mrs. Dwight Morrow calls for courage; Msgr. Ryan offers a dialectical analysis of the "just cause" of the Allies; President Graham of North Carolina asks for a long as well as a short range program of aid; Chester Rowell comments on the Japanese challenge; Lewis Douglas and Rabbi Wise sound ready to declare war at once, but don't quite say so.

BEST WRITTEN and meanest of the current "quickies" is John T. Flynn's blackface of President Roosevelt, "Country Squire in the White House" (Doubleday, $1).

Mr. Flynn, a newspaper economist who describes himself as a Bryan-Wilson Democrat, begins with ancestry. Franklin Roosevelt isn't really more than 3 per cent Dutch, he says—that's just a publicity build-up. He is almost 90 per cent English. And he has an English kind of education, too; private tutors and Groton. He was a "spoiled darling" when he went to school and a mamma's boy after he was married.

2 Bridals to Climax Gay Week of Parties

Mary Dora Thompson Will Be Married After Luncheon Given by Miss Starrett; Miss Miller, Dr. Moore to Be Wed Today

AS TWO BONNIE BRIDES say "I do" this afternoon a week of prenuptial partying—unprecedented in its merriment—will come to a close. Having been wined and dined, the younger set is in for a brief respite.

After a week of almost continual gayety Miss Mary Dora Thompson, daughter of Mrs. Smith Tempstone, and her fiance, Lieut. Ormond Griffith Sexton, U. S. N., will be guests at one more affair—a luncheon today to be given by Miss Ann Sterrett at her home.

Miss Houston Niller and Dr. Moore Moore, whose marriage takes place today, have also been feted right and left. Both girls made their debut in Washington several seasons ago.

At the moment Miss Thompson, who is the granddaughter of Theodore W. Noyes, is sharing the spotlight with her brand-new nephew, son of Mr. and Mrs. Garfield Swift. The baby will be named for his great-great-grandfather, Crosby S. Noyes.

Attending Miss Sterrett's luncheon will be members of the wedding party, including Mrs. John Thompson, Miss Letitia Knox, Miss Ann Reeve, Miss Frances Drisler, of New York City, and Miss Eleanor Hempstone. Also attending the luncheon were a bevy of naval officers in town for the wedding. Having come here several years ago to make her debut, the bride-elect has been a popular member of the young set.

Parties Continue After Wedding

Last evening Capt. and Mrs. Smith Hempstone gathered in a group for a casual "family" dinner before the wedding party left for the church where the rehearsal was held. Although partying for the young set will stop this afternoon, there is yet another affair on tap. Capt. and Mrs. Hempstone will give a dinner party tonight at the Chevy Chase Club for a group of out-of-town guests.

Following the rehearsal last evening the pretty bridesmaids-to-be and the handsome Navy ushers gathered at the home of Capt. and Mrs. Luther Sheldon on Cleveland avenue for a supper party in honor of Mrs. Sheldon's niece and her fiance. A few hands of bridge were indulged in, but it was "early to bed" for all persons concerned.

Meanwhile things were very gay on the Shoreham terrace, where a gala dinner party was given last evening for Miss Niller and Dr. Moore. Hostess at the party was Mrs. William Niller, mother of the bride. Wearing a flame mousseline de soie dance frock, the prospective bride waltzed about the dance floor in a "last fling" before taking on the status of matron. Mrs. Niller had chosen a smart gray lace frock.

Mrs. Niller Plans Trip

Aside from making plans for the wedding, Mrs. Niller has been busy getting ready for a trip to California, which she will take in several weeks. After closing her Alexandria home, Mrs. Niller, who is from California, will leave with her sister, Mrs. Hugh Berkley, for Los Angeles for an indefinite stay.

Last night's dinner party followed the rehearsal. Guests included the many people here from out of town as well as members of the wedding party. Dr. and Mrs. Moore Moore, sr., who arrived yesterday morning from Memphis, Tenn., were there, as were Larry Haugen, of New York City; Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Westbrook, Mrs. Niller's brother and sister-in-law, of Riverside, Calif., and her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. John Robert Westbrook, also of Riverside.

Those from the wedding party who attended the dance were Miss Doris Becker, Miss Betty Fischer, Miss Nancy Lee Hoskinson, Dr. Sivley Moore, brother of the bridegroom; Charlton Moore, Dr. Allan Tuggle, James O'Grady and Grant Boss.

Busy Season Awaits Senora de Cardenas

Spanish Envoy's Wife Still Hopes to Visit Europe, if War Permits

Although Senora de Cardenas, wife of the Spanish Ambassador, has a full summer of traveling mapped out for her, she is still toying with the idea of going abroad. A native of Rumania, Senora de Cardenas has relatives in that country and she is more than a little anxious about them at present.

However, if plans for a European trip do not materialize, Senora de Cardenas will be off next Tuesday for Highlands, N. C., to visit friends. She expects to do a great deal of riding and hiking at this mountain resort. Senora de Cardenas will then travel to Newport, R. I., for a stay of several weeks, stopping for a brief time with the Marquis and Marquess de Cuevas there. She will be joined by the Ambassador for several week-ends.

Before going to Newport, Senora de Cardenas will be in Washington for a short time around July 18, when Spain will celebrate its national holiday. At this time the Ambassador and his wife will entertain at a reception for the Spanish colony here.

From Newport, Senora de Cardenas plans to go to Narragansett, R. I., for a brief stay and on to Naushon Island, off the coast of Massachusetts, where she will be a guest at the home of former Gov. Cameron Forbes. She also will stop with Mrs. Richmond Fearing at her place in Westwood, Mass.

London Couple, Known Here, Now Visiting Canada

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Drummond-Wolff, accompanied by Carol Stokes and George Drummond-Wolff, have closed their home in London and have arrived at the Chateau-Frontenac Hotel in Canada.

Mrs. Drummond-Wolff is the former Miss Margaret Fahnestock, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock and a sister of Snowden Fahnestock, of Washington. She made her debut here and shortly afterward married Sylvanus Stokes from whom she was divorced a number of years ago.

Later, she married Benjamin Holcombe. After his death, she went abroad to make her home, and a few years later on the Riviera she met the distinguished Englishman who is her present husband.

Mrs. Albers to Be Hostess at Tea

Mrs. A. W. Henry Albers will entertain at a tea and card party on Monday afternoon at the League of Republican Women.

Guests will be Mrs. Edward E. Gann, Miss Grace Burton, Mrs. Maurice H. Thatcher, Mrs. Virginia White Speel, Miss Temple Bailey, Mrs. Robert McNeill, Mrs. William Corby, Mrs. Frank Murphy, Mrs. Mary Thomas, Mrs. Charles Williamson, Mrs. William F. Loetsch and Mrs. Mary Butt.

Still others there will be Mrs. Warren Haines, Mrs. Strickland Gillilan, Mrs. Frank Crowther, Mrs. Mary E. Youngman, Mrs. Millard West, sr., Mrs. Elmer W. Brandes, Mrs. George Thorpe, Mrs. R. A. Boone, Mrs. J. H. Branson, Mrs. Amos A. Fries, Mrs. Louis Weller, Mrs. James K. Wiles, Mrs. James Councilor, Mrs. George L. Hart, Mrs. Charles Fairfax, Mrs. Thomas Reed, Mrs. James Barnes, Mrs. William Scott and Mrs. Pierson.

Notes of Society

Six Doll Centers to Open Next Week

Project Designed To Teach, Entertain Little D. C. Girls

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Next week will be almost as important as Christmas for many Washington children. It will mark the opening of six doll centers in the Capital under the auspices of the Washington Council of Church Women, of which Mrs. Frank A. Linzel is president—and every little girl who goes to one of the centers will receive a doll.

The first "doll adoption" project of the council was started four years ago under the direction of Miss Etta Mai Russell, its Juvenile Court worker. Each season since, the plan has been expanded in line with its purpose of teaching child care to mothers through their children and the dolls, and of providing playthings that would contribute to happy vacations for the children.

This year the dolls will be given out at the centers to be held at churches in different sections of the city. The little girls who receive them will attend the center programs from 9 to 12 each morning except Saturday, for two weeks. They will bring their dolls each day and learn to sew and make little pasteboard cradles for them and will be taught songs, games and the simple things that underlie kindliness and friendship.

Surveys of each of the geographic areas in which a center is to be opened have been made to determine the needs of the section, the agencies and churches by which it is served. Information will be provided for the child and her family to encourage wider use of the health, recreation and character-building facilities of public and private social agencies and the churches.

At the close of the two-week period, children who prove to be good mothers to their new doll babies will sign final "adoption papers" for them.

More Than 1,000 Dolls Contributed

During May and June, Mrs. Richard A. Sauer, chairman of the juvenile court department of the council, with the cooperation of hundreds of church women, collected more than 1,000 handdressed dolls for the project. They were presented on Doll Day, observed last month at Calvary Baptist Church for use in the centers.

This year also, the project has been extended to include other towns in the Metropolitan area.

Women in the council's membership in nearby Maryland and Virginia will conduct centers like those in Washington under Miss Russell's supervision. Those in Mount Rainier are already under way, having started last Monday and continuing through next week. They are at the Mount Rainier Episcopal Church with Mrs. Nellie Stebbins, director; Mount Rainier Methodist, Mrs. Gladys Sampselle, director, and Mount Rainier Christian, Mrs. C. D. Calbeck, director.

The centers opening in Washington Monday and continuing through July 19 are: Lutheran Church of the Reformation, 212 East Capitol, Mrs. Fred Phieffer, director; Wilson Memorial Methodist, 754 Eleventh street southeast, Miss Viola Saunders, director; Trinity Methodist, Fifth street and Seward square southeast, Miss Dorothy Hartley, director, all under the leadership of Mrs. Charles Green; Takoma Park Presbyterian Church, Mrs. Hugh McKinnie, director; Alexandria Center, under the supervision of the Protestant Churches; Alexandria Girls Club, Mrs. C. M. French, director.

National B. & P. W. Board Meets Next Week

Other centers will serve the Central Neighborhood area at Vernon Place Methodist Church, Mrs. John T. Hicks, director, July 10, 13, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20; Southwest Center at Marvin Methodist Church, Independence avenue southwest, Mrs. W. F. Roman and Mrs. Gale Feaster, directors, July 15, 17, 19, 22, 24 and 26; Arlington Virginia Center at Ballston Methodist Church, opening July 15, Miss Elizabeth Beale, director; Hyattsville Centers at Edmondson School and East Riverdale Lutheran Church, Mrs. F. R. Coburn, president of the Hyattsville Council of Churches, director, July 29, 30, 31 and August 1, 2, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9.

Judge Lucy S. Howorth, past president of the Washington Business and Professional Women's Club and chairman of public affairs for the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, leaves today for Asheville, N. C., to attend the meeting of the national board, opening tomorrow at Grove Park Inn. Miss Vera Lundquist, of the local club, although not a board member, will leave tomorrow night to be there during the sessions.

Results of the survey made by the national federation of the married woman worker will be presented at the meeting. It has devoted more than a year to the study of discrimination against married women workers in 26 States.

Dr. Minnie L. Maffett, of Texas, national president, will address the opening meeting tomorrow night at which she will welcome Gov. Clyde R. Hoey and Mrs. Hoey at a reception. The North Carolina Federation of Business and Professional Women will be hostess to the more than 300 out-of-town delegates, officers and guests.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Circumspect Girl, Who Loves Her Mother, Is Told By Father That He Will Put Her in the Street If She Has Beaux Before She Is 21; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young girl nearing my eighteenth birthday and already troubled with the problems of life. I live in a house with my parents and small sister. I can't call it a home because to me, home spells love, and there isn't much love under my roof.

My mother is the dearest mother ever; and perhaps you wonder why I don't take my problem to her. Well, this is why: Mother has no say in our house. Dad is boss. He hates me and treats me like a dog. He says I cannot have company until I am 21, and therefore will not let any boys come to see me. If they do, he insults them. He doesn't like for me to bring girl friends home, either.

He will not let me wear make-up. I can't go to parties or dances or, in fact, anywhere, unless he takes me. Yet I am a normal girl and therefore desire the kind of life other girls have. I am not wild. I don't believe in smoking, drinking or petting; but I do believe in clean fun.

There is a young man of 20 whom I love dearly and I am sure he cares for me. He is a gentleman, respected by all who know him, except my father, and he has no bad habits. The other afternoon my mother gave me permission to go out with him and when I returned my father all but thrashed me. He said if he caught me with any boy again he would put my clothes in the road.

What must I do? I would leave home, except that would mean giving up school. Still, I can't go on this way. I am a nervous wreck. Please be frank and give me some helpful advice on or before July 6. MARIA.

Such Problems Exist In Every Community

DEAR MARIA: There is no pat solution for your kind of problem—which, incidentally, exists in some household in practically every community, and has, I daresay, since the beginning of mankind's upward struggle from cave man beginnings. You may choose between the painful alternatives of (1) putting up with your father's nasty-minded, sadistic domination until you are a grown woman (by which time you may be too crushed in spirit to revolt), or (2) of clearing out in the immediate future, after making prudent plans for supporting yourself without his help.

If you have made good use of your educational opportunities thus far, you should be graduated from high school by now, and many high school graduates become self supporting as a matter of course—"working," as they say, "their way through college," or toward whatever professional goal they earnestly aspire to. However, if your primary desire to be free has to do with wanting beaux and "a good time," (or "clean fun," as you call it), it is doubtful if you have the stern stuff of character, the heroic drive of will, to set forth on your own and steadfastly accomplish something worthwhile.

But if you feel you can do it, and must do it in order to maintain your self respect, by all means go ahead; after reassuring your mother that the step is for the best and that you will behave so circumspectly that she need have no fear for your welfare. Certainly your father's wretchedly wrong attitude justifies the break. Be sure, though, that you would never, in looking backward, long for the comparative security of even virtual imprisonment, as contrasted with the lean profits and hard discipline you probably will invite in prematurely assuming full responsibility for your welfare.

If you have relatives or family friends who might give you a "hand-up," both in locating a job and a suitable place to live, get in touch with them, and explain what you are proposing to do, and why. The summer vacation period ahead is an ideal time for long-range, resolute plan-making. You could have the new set-up well in mind by fall, when business quickens and job opportunities are easier come by; and you should go after jobs in such localities as afford special schooling (of the night course and secretarial variety) to adults and employed persons.

Now, if you lack the self reliance and resourcefulness to tackle such a project, the best advice I can give you is to take your problem to your minister, say, or to your Sunday School teacher (if you have such affiliations) and entreat them to help you in winning your father to a more rational, cooperative attitude.

Such advocates, as standard bearers of community righteousness, might have greater influence upon him than any member of the family. And if they were to plead that you were being unwisely and unjustly restricted and thus subjected to greater social dangers than if you were more sympathetically treated, he might hearken and relent. I don't say that he would; but at least it is a possibility worth investigating.

Gogo Schiaparelli, Designer's Daughter, Begins Career

Gogo Schiaparelli—young American-born daughter of the famous Paris designer, Elsa Schiaparelli—has embarked on an American career. And it has nothing to do with clothes.

She seems to have no desire to design them.

After six months of driving a war ambulance in France, she is hard at work in her mother's American cosmetics office in New York, where Mme. Schiaparelli sent her just before the Germans invaded Paris.

This is no case of the boss's daughter making pretty, but ineffectual, passes behind a mahogany desk. Miss Schiaparelli (christened Marisa and selfnamed Gogo as soon as she could talk) is working from the bottom up in a business of which she owns half. She is classifying and filing orders and taking the work as seriously as her Italian-born mother takes clothes.

Pretty? Rather—and something more. Blue eyes. Brown hair. Warm peach skin. A hint of character in the chin.

Manner? Reserved and a bit shy.

Clothes? Chic in a don't-work-too-hard-at-it-way. Though she could have a wardrobe to make a princess envious, hers is very simple.

Assurance by Label

The wise shopper insists on finding out whether the fabric in the clothing purchased will wash, shrink and crease badly. This information is usually available; many garments now carry labels telling about the material.

Irish Stew Excellent Dish for Trailer Cookery

THIS is the season of the open road, and it seems that all roads are leading to Washington these mild July days. The Washington Tourist Camp has many guests and among them families traveling under the rolling roof of trailers. I have never enjoyed the experience of trailer travel but I do have to my credit now a delicious dinner cooked in one. I ate at the tourist camp recently with friends traveling in a streamlined conveyance.

The amount of equipment and supplies that can be placed in a trailer kitchen is amazing. Storage space is limited, but adequate if the equipment is selected to fit the size and shape of the cupboards. Utensil manufacturers have designed special sets for trailers. In the utensil lineup I found there were 38 items—everything from a singing tea kettle to an egg-beater. Staples had been selected carefully, too. No unnecessaries, but ample for making satisfactory meals.

I arrived at the trailer just after luncheon. My hostess, Mrs. Ralph Joyce, told me that the family had breakfasted on cantaloupe, corn flakes with milk, scrambled eggs, coffee cake and coffee. Luncheon had included Welsh Rarebit on toast, vegetable salad, whole wheat bread, peaches with cup cakes and milk. Irish stew was the main dinner dish. With it Mrs. Joyce served tomato salad, hot biscuits (out of a can), ice cream with chocolate sauce and coffee.

The Irish Stew was served with all-bran dumplings. Here is Mrs. Joyce's recipe:

Irish Stew With Dumplings

Wipe 2 pounds lamb with a damp cloth. Cut into serving pieces and place in a kettle; cover with boiling water. Cover kettle and simmer for 1 hour. Add 1 cup each of diced carrots and turnips and 1 cup sliced onion, 4 cups diced potatoes, 2 teaspoons salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Continue cooking slowly until vegetables are tender. Thicken with paste made of ¼ cup flour and ¼ cup water. Top with all-bran muffins. Cover and cook for 20 minutes.

Dumplings—Sift 1½ cups flour, 1 teaspoon salt and 1 tablespoon baking powder together. Beat 1 egg until light and add 1 tablespoon melted fat, cooled. Add ½ cup all-bran and ¾ cup milk. Add liquid mixture to sifted dry ingredients and stir only until flour disappears. Drop batter by teaspoonfuls on top of hot stew. Cover tightly and let simmer for 20 minutes without removing cover. Serve at once. Yield 4 servings.

Touch of White for Early Town Blacks

Whether you are toying with the idea of a side saddle drape for your first fall dress or have decided on doing over the old one, a crisp touch of white will keep your spirits in tune with the season. Pictured above is a snowy capeskin belt pert with engaging ruffles. There is a hidden adjustable clasp to assure perfect fit. White capeskin gloves and a large dark cartwheel would complete this distinguished between-season costume

Portable Radio Sets Are Newest Fad Ruby Keeler, Al Jolson, in Same Show

New York, July 6.

WHEN THE girl comes twittering along the street with a small box slung from one shoulder on a strap, don't bet heavy money that it is a camera or a handbag or her lunch. It may be one of these new-fangled portable radio receivers that have just hit the market.

Nothing caught on faster than portable radio sets in the satchel size, and these new babies ought to do right well. They are only eight inches long, about three wide and thick. I have one here on my desk, and when I heft it I feel some doubt about the shoulder angle. All right for a lady wrestler, of course, but a small, slight girl must get a permanent shoulder sag if she did it. None the less, the dingus is certainly a masterpiece of mechanical condensation. It has two batteries, and all the other needed works, but no aerials to sprout from our shell-pink ears, or any of those old-fashioned contraptions. Who remembers the crystal set of 1924?

When you open the lid of the thing, you are on the air. There are two small wheels inside—one for tuning the desired station, the other for volume. The whole thing is a great boon to those who want to make music wherever they go. No longer must the dance-tune addict miss her favorite afternoon show when she sets out on a shopping orgy. At the appointed hour for Mario Schmaltz, the waltz king, she just puts the little set on the notion counter, fiddles with the dial, assumes the conventional rapt expression, and there is Mario, practically in person.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Ruby Keeler, the tap dancer, is now learning how it feels to work in a show which stars her former helpmate. She's featured in the cast of Al Jolson's new opus, "Hold on to Your Hats," an awkward title for a show if I ever heard one, which hopes to spend a pleasant and profitable summer in Chicago. Old Al, the Washington mammy singer, is almost as sentimental as Georgie Jessel, and is probably still carrying the torch for his Ruby. But there is no real sign of a marital reunion —yet.

Many a dress business or shop has a social "front woman" these days. It gives them what they feel is "class," and provides a job for the lady. Mrs. Pierpont Morgan Hamilton, a charming woman, performs this function for the Jane Derby dress business here, greeting visitors to the show room and presiding as they look over the new line. She likes the job a lot, and so does the "trade," so everybody seems happy in that set-up.

Three women and 107 men are taking an odd course up at Columbia Teachers' College this summer. They are being instructed by Dr. H. H. Linn in the arts of efficient and economical mopping, sweeping, boiler-stoking and window-washing. The students are housekeepers of schools, and their new efficient speed will undoubtedly allow them more time for reading Horace in the original Greek. Wonder what kind of degree they'll rate?

It is reported that Doris Duke Cromwell is going to work as an extra in a new film called "When the Daltons Rode," which stars Randy Scott and Kay Francis. It must take an awful lot to amuse a millionairess.

Scraped Apple Used in Treating Child's Colic

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

"Yes," said Dr. Adrian Gibbs to the mother, I know that the cause of this child's colic is eating apples and I know it sounds queer to you for me to tell him to eat apples. Yet I want you to fix the apples in a certain particular way.

"Take a good Jonathan apple and pare it, and then take a spoon and scrape around and around until you get a nice mush, and then feed it to our little friend here a small amount at a time in the course of the next hour or two.

An Effective Cure

"I have been doing this for years and it is only recently that I find myself in fashion and having some authority behind me. Some European scientists began to use raw apple pulp and apple powder in different kinds of intestinal disorders, including summer complaint, in infants and children several years ago. I do not really believe that this child's diarrhea comes from eating apples. It is probably an infection, but at any rate the apple will do it good, whatever is the matter.

"It appears there is something in apple fiber that is called 'pectin' that is supposed to do the work. Don't ask me too much about pectin because I don't understand it myself although I have read all the scientific literature on the subject. All that I got out of the last article I read was that there were 1,000 cases of diarrhea of all kinds studied and 98 per cent of them responded to the use of scraped raw apple pulp.

"You can give as much as two heaping teaspoonfuls of this to the baby with prospects of benefit. If you spread the dosage out over a couple of hours. For older people it is best to withhold all food for three or four days, except for a glass of water containing scraped apple, at three or four-hour intervals.

Soft Diet

"When this baby begins to get better, don't feed any solid food for three or four days; give nothing but custards and egg. I should classify raw milk as a solid food; it becomes solid as soon as it gets into the stomach.

"If it is any comfort to you, you may also know that this raw apple pulp contains Vitamin A and that is supposed to have some beneficial action also.

"Is there more suffering from heat today than back in the 'horse and buggy' days?"

Answer—Certainly not. With the use of electric fans, air conditioning and the availability of the automobile to carry people to the seashore and lakeside, our position is far better than our ancestors in the "horse and buggy" days in the United States. As a matter of fact, statistics show that heat prostrations have been reduced in the last decade about 50 per cent over the period of 20 or 30 years ago.

"Please tell me how to obtain Vitamin E other than in wheat germ oil and green vegetables. I am under the impression that it can be had in concentrated form."

Answer—It has recently been isolated in concentrated form, but the process is very expensive and the product correspondingly expensive. It can be obtained when a patient with a rare form of paralysis needs it, but it is not necessary for the average person to obtain it in this way because ein an average diet there is plenty of Vitamin E to take care of the needs.

Incorrect Speech Stamps You

HOW HURT a girl is when a friend seems ashamed to introduce her, turns aside with a hasty "Wait a minute" on meeting an acquaintance. To a girl whose English is crude such moments come often, for friends really aren't proud of her

No matter how charming she may look, educated people wince when she makes such gross errors as "I could have WENT . . . Between you and I . . . I HAD ought to do that." Her speech would contribute to her charm if she said correctly: "I could have GONE . . . Between you and ME . . . I ought to do that."

When a girl is asked to bring another girl on a date, she chooses one who has background, who will make a good impression.

Such a girl doesn't say "I KIND OF liked that movie . . . I have no HOPES of going . . . Those flowers are NOTHING LIKE as nice as these." Her speech is acceptable in any society. She says correctly—"I RATHER liked that movie . . . I have no HOPE of going . . . Those flowers are NOT NEARLY as nice . . . "

Good English is no mystery. It can easily be acquired. With a list of common errors, right forms at hand, you note your mistakes and weed them out. Soon you speak delightfully.

You avoid superfluous words, such as "The dish fell off OF the table . . . Where is he AT?" The right forms are "The dish fell off the table . . . Where is he?"

You distinguish between words of similar meaning or spelling. Instead of "I was AGGRAVATED by the noise," you say correctly, "I was IRRITATED by the noise."

Kitchen Again May Be Center Of Home Life

World's Fair Exhibit Of 'Living Kitchen' Old Idea Modernized

By Elizabeth McRae Boykin

There is something wholesome and reassuring about the enthusiastic welcome that everyone is giving the "living kitchen" at the World's Fair. It is a new feature of this year's dramatic home building which is directed by Louise Bonney Leicester.

Reassuring, in such a distraught world, that even the most sophisticated people warm to the pleasant earthy charm of such a room, because it seems to bring emphasis back to a basic pattern of life. Because it recalls those hard hearty days of the kitchen range when family life centered there. A big room it was in olden times with a broad table, spacious for rolling out cookies or studying lessons at night around an oil lamp. There was no self-conscious interior decorating about those old kitchens and yet they had that most priceless ingredient of decorating, a friendly human quality. A quality, by the way, that inspired the modern version of the "living kitchen" which is so popular at the fair this summer.

Modern Equipment For Old Idea

Allmon Fordyce, well-known architect, designed this current "living kitchen," adapting modern equipment, modern materials, modern motif to a simple design of life. It is a suggestion for the space usually occupied by the living room, dinette and kitchen in the home of the woman who does her own work. Instead of having to work off by herself, away from the family, she can in this kitchen work sociably while the man of the house reads the evening paper and the children do their lessons, or lend a hand with the dishes. This kitchen would also be a heart's delight for the gourmet who likes to cook specialties and entertain in the kitchen.

The stove, the refrigerator and the sink are placed compactly in one end of the room and planned on an "assembly line" idea that makes the preparation and serving of food possible with a minimum of wasted time or energy. This kitchen end, finished in natural cypress, is separated by a "counter" with cupboards below and shelves above that are open on both sides, thus the glassware can be washed and put up here without taking a step and yet they're within reach of the other side where they look decorative in the meantime.

Walls of Natural Cypress and Brick

The rest of this "living kitchen" has walls in natural cypress and in brick; brick also is used for the floor in the fireplace side of the room while the remainder of the floor is in terra cotta linoleum. Brilliantly striped fabrics for chairs are in white, blue and green.

Into the fireplace a grill is fitted for broiling steak over the coals, while the wall against which the table is set has a long seat built in with side chairs to match. This table seats 6 normally but it can be opened out to seat as many as 14.

Bread-and-Butter Plate

At formal meals no butter is served, therefore the bread-and-butter plate is used only for the informal meal. Place the plate at the tip of the fork a little to the left of the service plate. The butter spreader should be placed across the right-hand side of the plate with the blade turned toward the center. Do not allow the blade to rest in the plate.

Modern Mexican Woman Is Helpmate, Not Doll

Senora Ledon Says Her Countrywomen Are Expanding Their Interests and Taking Active Part in Promoting Democracy

By Genevieve Reynolds.

THE PRETTY doll-like Mexican who entertained her husband's friends graciously but shut up like a clam when left alone with him is fast disappearing. A new woman, who shares her husband's mutual interest and is companionable is taking her place, according to Senora Amalia Castillo Ledon, of Mexico City, who arrived in Washington recently and is a guest at Hotel 2400.

Senora Castillo Ledon is the only woman playwright in Mexico to achieve outstanding success in that field. Her best known play, "When the Leaves Fall Down," was presented 100 times consecutively. Most recent of her works to receive wide acclaim is "The Biography of Outstanding Women in Mexico."

SENORA LEDON

Senora Castillo Ledon yesterday was knee-deep in plans and full of enthusiasm for the new League for Democracy which she organized three weeks ago in Mexico City. A member of the Inter-American committee, she originated and is promoting a movement for the solidarity of Democracy in the Americas.

Unite for Democracy

"All the Mexican women are united in this movement for democracy," she said. "They are proud to launch a plan of this sort simultaneously with the women of the United States. They have prepared an invitation and will issue it soon to the women in all the Americas to further consolidate democracy." She pointed out that the League for Democracy was not organized to settle internal troubles in her native land, but as a shield against the spread of totalitarian governments throughout the world.

"How long have Mexican women been free to organize clubs and to choose careers," the alert, blue-eyed senora was asked.

"Although Latin women in general, and Mexican women in particular, have been supposed to have no interest outside their families and homes," she replied, "yet Maria Sandoval de Zarco, of Mexico, was the first woman in the world to receive a law degree. She became a full-fledged barrister 28 years ago and maintains a flourishing practice today. Fifty-two years ago, Matilde de P. Montoya received an M. D. degree and practiced medicine until her death last year. These, however, were the exception rather than the rule. For the most part a woman's life and interest centered entirely around her family.

"But slow transition has been taking place in the status of women in Mexico for more than 25 years. Until a few years ago the Mexican women were dependent upon marriage for a living, but recent economic freedom gives them a chance to marry for love and companionship. Also, economic independence has given them more time for study. Now 90 per cent of the philosophy class at the University of Mexico is made up of women. And today our women choose whatever career interests them."

"Does economic and social freedom produce more old maids in your country?" Senora Ledon was asked.

"No," she laughingly replied. "Mexican women preserve their femininity at all cost. They are first and last women, with a woman's interest in the home taking first place in her life. Not one of them would let a career interfere with her home life.

No More Curfew

"Ten o'clock curfew no longer drives the woman from outdoors, as was the case until a few years ago. Nor does the ubiquitous chaperon trail the unmarried woman. Now, except for the very young girls, women attend social functions and even travel alone about the country. Socially they have nearly as much freedom as the girls of the States.

"Politically women are still clamoring for equal citizenship rights," explained Senora Ledon.

"After the revolution in 1917 the new constitution granted all citizens the right to vote and to hold office," she said. However, this did not specifically state that women could vote. So four years ago a movement was started to clarify women's voting status and was passed partially (now awaiting the approval of one branch of congress) to give women equal voting powers. Although the women participate in primaries and hold 85 per cent of all educational posts, they want to hold full powers of citizenship and to compete for all offices pertaining to women, schools and children.

"When the Mexican women want improvements in their social, economic, home or educational facilities they resort to public speeches and parades. For example, last year, when they sought lower costs in rents, they paraded about the town."

Although following the make-up tricks of the women of the States, the Mexican women still prefer their rich foods to slim figures and do not go in extensively for exercises, according to Senora Ledon.

Question of Skin Color Again Confronts Women

To tan—or not to tan?

This annual warm weather question of summer skin color again confronts us. What will be fashionable this summer, a porcelain white skin or a healthy-looking brown one?

This question of skin color this summer will be determined entirely by your age. If you are one of the young or younger groups and like your sun, imbibe all you want of it, for a smooth tanned skin is the thing for your age. On the other hand, if you are not a youngster, sun yourself discreetly. Get enough of a tan to look healthy and well but protect your skin in order to keep its tone on the feminine, delicate side.

Good Figure May Be Aid to Romance

One Reducer Became Belle Of Her Town

By Ida Jean Kain

THERE is nothing like a romance in a gal's life to stimulate her interest in looking her best . . . and we are delighted to report that one of our reducers not only carried out her good intentions as to slimming, but she also got her man!

A postcard from her says frankly that "I had been reading about slimming for some time, but I never got around to it until I fell in love. Then I started in! I have taken my weight down from 150 pounds to 132, which is perfect for my height of 5 feet, 7 inches. At least, he seems to think so!"

Improve Figure—Improve Chances

We wouldn't be so rash as to promise such happy conclusion to every slimming program, but there's no doubt that a girl improves her chances along with her looks, and that a slim figure helps considerably. We know another girl . . . She was so busy getting her master's degree that she couldn't bother her pretty head about calories or spare the time for exercise, or so she claimed.

But it so happened that she took a job in a community where there were plenty of eligible bachelors. Then she suddenly did an about face. She decided that it didn't matter if you did know all the dates in history if you couldn't get one of your own, so she took herself in hand—and made her figure over. She did rolling exercises to get rid of a sedentary hipline, twisted and stretched to nip in her waist, and she acquired a lovely posture instead of her round-shouldered, student's stoop.

Also, she abandoned the idea of saving all her money for her old age and bought a few very snappy clothes. Now, we hear she has become the belle of the town!

Both of those enterprising young women had an incentive to start with and it was easy for them to get going on their programs.

The majority of you may have interest will be to get results—and to get them fast. To deal firmly with the pounds, adjust your calories intake to the level that will let you lose steadily—the menu printed today is typical to be selfstarters. In that case, the surest way to keep up your

of the ones you should follow. To make short work of hip and waist padding, lie on the back on the floor, arms straight out on the floor shoulder level, knees flexed and feet held off the floor, and roll from the hips. Go away over on one side, then on the other, rolling back and forth across the heaviest part of the hipline. Try to keep the back fairly flat on the floor to give your waist the benefit of the twisting that is necessary in order to roll the hips. Later on, give the waist an extra stretch by shooting the legs straight out and down at the side, after you have rolled the hips over.

Bald Eagle Hill Health Camp Opens

90 Youngsters Find Needed Health Aids; Lack of Funds Keep 35 Confined in City

The sun shone brightly yesterday, after days of rain—and it was well because 90 children who went to Bald Eagle Hill Health Camp need it.

They came from Washington homes to spend eight weeks in the camp in Anacostia, where fresh air, sunshine, solid food and prompt medical care will help them to withstand the threats of tuberculosis when wintry weather begins again.

Bald Eagle Health Camp is operated by the District Tuberculosis Association. The 90 children who went there yesterday are not necessarily active tuberculosis cases.

Some are physically run down and many are in daily contact with tuberculosis cases where they live. The camp hopes to give them the building up they will need to resist the disease.

Of the 90 children, there were 30 white boys and 30 white girls. This group went to camp at 9 a. m. At 12:30 p. m. they were joined by 30 colored children. Physicians began examinations at 11 a. m. Afterward the children were given time to become acclimated to the surroundings.

Camp opened with 35 vacancies. It provides, in all, 125 beds but only 90 children can be cared for. The association lacks funds to feed the additional 35. The association emphasized that there still is time for the public through donations to enable the camp to care for the left-out children.

There is a staff of 27 men and women to care for the children and about 20 acres for the children to move about in.

Odd Jobs:

Otto Schmalzried's Is Tasting Beer—Odd?

By George Thorpe.

"A prohibitionist," said Otto Schmalzried, "is a menace to society."

Schmalzried likes beer. For 31 years he has been brew master at Washington's only brewery. His father and grandfather were brew masters. He is president of the District-Maryland-Virginia branch of the American Brew Masters' Society.

From childhood, his life has been devoted to studying, examining, tasting beer.

Much as he would hate to admit it, Schmalzried is actually something of a teetotaller. His attitude toward beer is purely objective.

Consider his education for example. When still in his teens, he started a nine years' apprenticeship in a brewery. After his graduation from a Philadelphia high school, he took post graduate courses in beer schools in Milwaukee, Chicago and New York.

Doesn't Rely on Intuition

Today a major part of his time is spent in his office-laboratory, bending over a microscope to scrutinize particles of malt in the manner of a professional chemist—which, in fact, he is.

After his two score years in the business, the brew master can look at a glass of beer across a good-sized room and discern immediately any imperfection, any sediment deposit imperceptible to the ordinary eye.

But in supervising the manufacture of some 49,000,000 quarts of beer that flow annually from his vats, Schmalzried refuses to rely on this intuition.

Frequently he descends into the "chip cellar." A tremendous room kept constantly at a temperature of 36 degrees, it houses 65 giant wood pressure tanks, together holding around 13,000 barrels.

Schmalzried examines the "wort" flowing from mash tub to kettle

Earlier the brew has gone through preliminary stages: mixing and cooking of malt, corn and rice; drawing off of the resulting fluid, "wort;" adding of hops and the fermentation process.

Test Drinks in Cellar

In the chip cellar the beer is in its final phase before bottling—further fermentation through aging—and it is here that Schmalzried takes his test drinks.

Walking down the rows of tanks, he stops at intervals and draws off a thimble glass of the new brew.

The test, he says, is by "sight, smell and taste," and the most important of these is sight. Should he detect any unwonted sediment in the brew, a minor revolution is in order. If it passes the sight and smell tests, he tastes the beer thoughtfully before affixing his stamp of approval.

Leaving the near-freezing cellar for the sweltering out-of-doors—a change he hardly notices now, but strikes the layman like a blast of compressed air—the brew master makes his way back to his office.

Has Beer 'Schools' Diplomas

There is the most sacred of all his testing apparatus. Two small jars of bubbling water, which no one but Schmalzried may see, register to the thousandth of a pound the pressure of every tank.

On the walls of his office are diplomas from his beer schools and pictures of beer picnics, of conventions and banquets of the brew masters—where beer is drunk because it's beer, not because you're thirsty.

That's the way Schmalzried, of 2121 Virginia avenue northwest, drinks his daily stein in the employes' bar across the way. You don't see a hurried American businessman any longer, but Schmalzried or one of his ancestors in a Vienna brauhaus, sipping to the music of Johann Strauss.

Police Trial Witnesses Subpenaed

Montgomery Calls Rockville Citizens To Tell of Raid At Meeting of Sect

Subpenas for 11 witnesses for the trial next Wednesday of three Montgomery County policemen charged with negligence in connection with the raid by a mob on the Jehovah's Witnesses' headquarters in Rockville, June 19, were issued yesterday.

The subpenas were issued by Sheriff H. Leslie Carlin upon direction of Simpson & Simpson, counsel to the Montgomery County Commissioners, who serve as prosecutors before the police trial board under the law.

Those summoned are former Chief of Police Charles M. Orme, who was dismissed last Saturday after an investigation into the part played by police in the raid; Fowler W. Stevens and Eva C. Stevens, of Rockville; Marian Barbour and Bernard L. Rowe, both of Silver Spring, and John Nathan Fraley, of Derwood, all members of the Jehovah's Witnesses, who were present the night of the riot; Sergt. Theodore Vollten, county police investigator; Policeman Jesse B. Day, county police, who was directing traffic several blocks away; Sergt. James R. Miller, special investigator, Maryland State police; Russell W. Gray, of Rockville, a bystander, and Richard H. Lansdale, clerk to the county commissioners, who was directed to bring all records of his office concerning the three policemen.

Trial Set Wednesday

The accused policemen are Sergt. Guy L. Jones, who was alone in police headquarters at the time of the riot; Policemen Leslie B. Thompson and Charles S. Peter.

Stevens and Rowe were arrested and held in "protective custody" for nearly two hours after the riot, and Fraley swore to a statement in which he said Chief Orme had told him "we are going to break up these meetings" every time they were held.

Members of the police trial board are County Commissioner R. W. Farmer, in charge of police; B. Peyton Whalen, police civil service commissioner, and Clarence H. Small, civilian member. The trial is scheduled for Wednesday morning at the courthouse.

Behrend-Finkel Bridge Team Takes Lead

Mixed-Pair Finals Scheduled Today At Annapolis

By Marian H. Barre.
Post Bridge Writer.

At the half-way point in the Annapolis mixed-pair bridge championship last night, the intercity partnership of Mrs. Edward Behrend, Baltimore, and Stanley Finkel, Philadelphia, was leading a field of 34 teams that represented the best man-and-woman combinations in this part of the country.

The game is the third event of the Annapolis Tournament, now in play at Carvel Hall Hotel.

Mrs. Behrend was in the limelight the day before when she finished as runner-up with Mrs. Allan Rutherford, also from Baltimore, in the contest for women's pairs.

Scoring 259½ match points in the first mixed round, the Behrend-Finkel team entered the finals with a 15-point lead over Mrs. Paul E. Golden, wife of the secretary of the Washington Bridge League, paired with George W. Reed, of Sherwood Forest, Md. This margin amounts to almost a board-lead as 16 points was top score in each match. Another Baltimore entry finished third. They were Mrs. Charles R. Durbin and A. F. Dwyer.

With the conclusion of the mixed game a greatly augmented field will settle down to the serious business of the tournament, the championship for open pairs that will be played in an afternoon and an evening session today. This match is regarded as the major event in duplicate meets as the removal of partnership restrictions strengthens a field.

Mrs. W. S. Athey and Tom Flood, both of Washington, now hold the open title. They will defend it against the best bridge talent in the East. With the exception of the Four Aces, all the top-flight luminaries of the game are expected in Annapolis this afternoon.

Fegan Denied Bail, Grand Jury Gets Knife-Slaying Case

Held for the grand jury by a coroner's jury in the knife slaying of French Miller, 60, of 811 E street southwest, Henry C. Fegan, 43, of 6224 Third street northwest, last night was denied bail and committed to await trial.

At an inquest yesterday, it was testified that Fegan stabbed Miller in the abdomen during a drinking bout in Hammersley court southwest, Tuesday. The wounded man died at Casualty Hospital the next morning.

The jury also held Grady Brown, colored, 28, of 1108 Sixth street northwest, responsible for the fatal stabbing of Clifton C. Warren, and bound him over for grand jury action. Warren was killed when he was slashed on the neck in front of 611 L street northwest, June 30.

Capital News in Brief

D. C. Girl Says 'I Do' —It's Adieu to Riches

Miss Cocalis Gives Up $25,000 to Wed Man of Her Choice

MRS. GEORGE McMILLAN

Virginia Cocalis, 24-year-old writer for the Farm Security Administration, who gave up a $25,000 inheritance to marry the man of her choice, was wed yesterday to George McMillan, employe of the Federal Food Stamp Administration. The ceremony took place in St. Nicholas' Greek Orthodox Church in Newark, N. J., home of the bride's family.

Miss Cocalis, who met McMillan during her employment in the Capital, was one of three daughters bequeathed $25,000 legacies from a $500,000 estate left by their father, Soteros D. Cocalis, owner of a chain of theaters. There was one requirement—that the girls find husbands in the Greek Orthodox Church. So when Virginia decided to marry George McMillan she bade her $25,000 good-by. He is a Baptist.

But Cupid's victory will have its gilt-edge, too. Virginia's sister, Mrs. Marie Cabouras, who received her $25,000 when she abided by her father's will, yesterday said the newlyweds will receive "many gifts from time to time" from the family.

"There will be no attempt to change my father's will," she said. "There will absolutely not be any legal action for that purpose, and the subject is closed with the wedding."

Mrs. Chysanthe Cocalis, the bride's mother, gave her blessing to the wedding.

After the ceremony the couple sped to the Cocalis summer estate in Delaware. From there they go on a honeymoon to Cape Town, W. Va. Then they return to Washington. Mrs. McMillan formerly lived at 106 Third street northeast.

Man Falls 30 Feet to Diners' Table

Charles P. Kinery, 42, of 2413 Newton street northeast, was injured critically yesterday when he crashed through a skylight at Union Station and plunged 30 feet to a restaurant below. He was removed to Casualty Hospital, suffering from back, neck and possible internal injuries.

The eating place was almost filled when Kinery crashed to a table occupied by two women. Mrs. E. Walters, of Bristol, Va., who was at the table with Jane Smith, of Arlington, Va., received a lacerated hand.

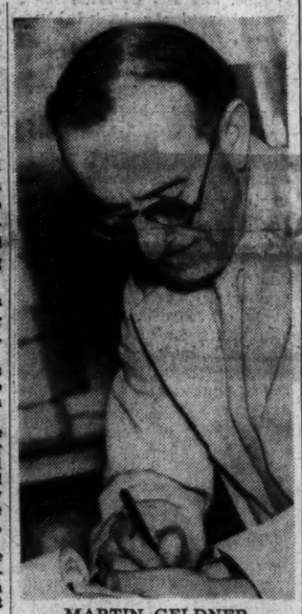
3 Robbed in Series of Holdups Here



MARTIN GELDNER

Martin Geldner, 62, manager of a laundry branch at 1545 New Jersey avenue northwest, had fully recovered last night from a brush with two colored bandits which left him unconscious in the store for ten minutes.

His assailants, he said, entered the laundry about 12:30 p. m. and grabbed him around the neck from behind. He said he attempted to grapple with the men but lost consciousness. When he recovered about ten minutes later he was lying on the floor in a rear room.

The men escaped with between $15 and $20 from the cash drawer and with $2 from his pockets, Geldner told police.

Earlier in the day three youths in a dark-bodied sedan accosted two men on the streets and robbed them of a total of $26 and a wrist watch.

George Tobey, of 1873 Monroe street northwest, was attacked near his home. One of the bandits held his hand in his pocket as if he had a gun, Tobey said, and after they took $5 and his watch escaped in the sedan. The car bore Maryland tags, he declared.

The second victim was George Dours, of 1322 Fifteenth street northwest, who was held up at Fifteenth and O streets northwest. He lost $21.

Clerk Found With Wrists Slashed

John Fisher Sills, 28-year-old clerk at the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, was near death in Emergency Hospital last night from knife slashes on his wrists.

He was found unconscious on the bathroom floor at the home of his divorced wife, Mrs. Christine Peebles Sills, 3515 Holmead place northwest, about 9:15 a. m. Both his wrists were cut and a butcher knife was on the floor, police said. The door was locked from the inside.

Mrs. Cora Peebles, mother of Sills' former wife, told Detective Charles Cannon that Sills had been ill and that he had asked her if he could stay at her home for a few days. He lives at 2304 Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

If Tatoo Is Naughty, You're Taboo, SaysArmy

Naughty pictures may have their place but their place is not on the anatomies of men seeking to enlist in the Army, it was stressed yesterday.

"Tattooing which is a bit too—well—which isn't just nice, is enough to bar an applicant," said Sergt. Norman W. Morgan, of the recruiting station at 631 Pennsylvania avenue northwest. "Of course," he added, "if he has the taboo tattoo removed he's eligible."

Starling Wins Aerial Fight With Moth

Aerial warfare with accent on the futility of fighting against odds came unexpectedly to The Post city room yesterday.

Through a narrow crack in a window ventilator a 4-inch starling dove into the room in pursuit of a moth. The bird's wings whirred noisily as it poised above the typewriters, stabbing at the moth.

When the smaller flier darted away, the starling circling relentlessly after, caught the moth just before it would have escaped through a second window. With its captive the starling flew from the room into the July sunshine.

Ship's S O S on Fire 'Merely Precaution'

Newport News, Va., July 5 (AP).—Spokesmen for the Baltimore Ocean Transport Co. said today the fire that broke out in the freighter Panamanian when she was four hours out of Baltimore last night was "inconsequential" and that the ship's S O S was sent "merely as a precaution."

2 Bandits Fire Shot In Store Holdup

Kaplan's Liquor Store, 1600 First street northwest, was robbed of $20 last night by two colored bandits who fired a wild shot into a wall before departing.

Samuel Kaplan, proprietor, was in the establishment with Burl Johnson, clerk, and Herbert Dixon, delivery boy, when the gunmen entered. They forced Johnson to open the cash register, then herded the three men in the center of the floor. Kaplan said they missed a considerable amount of cash in his pockets.

Endeavorers See Housing Movies

Slum Clearance, Religious Topics Occupy D. C. Group At Convention

The progress of Washington's slum clearance program was graphically pictured to delegates at yesterday's sessions of the District of Columbia Christian Endeavor conference at Fredericksburg, Va.

Massed in Monroe Hall at Mary Washington College for a general assembly period, the youths saw films contrasting former bleak and filth-ridden alleys with the new housing projects.

Presented by the Rev. John L. Mixon, director of the social welfare department of the Washington Federation of Churches, the movies also depicted the Goodwill Industries at work. Miss Josephine Davis, conference president, presided over the program.

Roman Catholicism, Christian Science and Jehovah's Witnesses were discussed in the forum on comparative religions, held earlier in the morning under the guidance of Dr. C. E. Hawthorne, pastor of Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian Church here.

While assuring that he did not agree with the beliefs of Jehovah's Witnesses, Dr. Hawthorne said they set a good example for other faiths in their ability to convert.

Dr. Louis A. Potter, Calvary Methodist choirmaster, conducted a Forum on Music.

Intensive Bible study and practical application was stressed by the Rev. William H. Brown, pastor of the Cherrydale (Va.) Baptist Church, in his forum.

Fifteen delegates left after dinner for a visit to Wakefield, George Washington's birthplace, on the lawn of which they held a devotional service later in the afternoon.

Dr. J. Walter Liggitt, pastor of the Seventh United Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, Pa., addressed last night's vespers, and a quartet from Hampton Institute sang. A general assembly climaxed the day, with a group of Eckington Presbyterian thespians, directed by Cecil Willis, presenting a sacred play, "My Redeemer Liveth." A program of hymns was heard.

The parley will be concluded today at 3 p. m. with a communion service, led by the Rev. Daniel K. Poling, new pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Wheeling, W. Va.

Mother Seraphim also is survived by another brother, Edward Byrnes, of Philadelphia and a sister, Sister Theresa, also a Carmelite nun.

White Collar Rookies at Ft. Meade Learn They're in the Army Now

1. ONLY THE BEGINNING—Arriving at Fort Meade, Md., the civilian soldiers enter headquarters

Businessmen Trainees Begin Earning $43.50 They Are Paying U.S.

By Howard Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

The industrial economist from Washington turned to the Philadelphia judge and said, "Whew!" mopping his brow while the lieutenant wasn't looking.

He echoed the sentiments of 235 perspiring business and professional men who stood on the parade grounds at Fort George Meade, Md., yesterday ready to get their $43.50 worth of modern military training in 30 days.

Volunteers all, who are paying board and lodging for the privilege of learning how the Army operates and where they would fit in should an emergency arise, the civilian soldiers pitched into camp life with obvious enjoyment.

Its Not Desk Work

But paper work in an air-conditioned office is a far cry from "picking 'em up and laying 'em down" on a sun-baked drill field, and there were groans aplenty.

Most of the candidates, although more than willing to learn what it was all about, hadn't seen a khaki uniform since their Boy Scout days. There were others who knew the ropes a little better, having previous experience in the Army, R. O. T. C. or C. M. T. C.

Nineteen men from Washington and vicinity registered for the 30-day course. Known at Fort Meade as the "B. P." (business and professional) outfit, the contingent will receive a condensed version of the 4-year studies at the Army War College.

Yesterday was spent in receiving equipment, barrack assignments and generally getting used to Army life. The business men—among them wealthy brokers, judges and even a candidate for the United States Senate—are housed in dingy barracks built during the first World War.

"Bankers' hours" are taboo. They'll all answer the "fall in" call at 7:30 a. m. and work until 4 p. m. They will receive liberty over the week-ends, but must stay near camp at other times.

To Get Oath Today

Today the trainees, after mass swearing in ceremonies, will hear Maj. Percy Black, former military attache to Berlin, lecture on the Polish campaign, detailing the tactics used by Hitler's mechanized forces.

Each Monday night the men will attend an open forum and will be expected to talk on various phases of the training they receive.

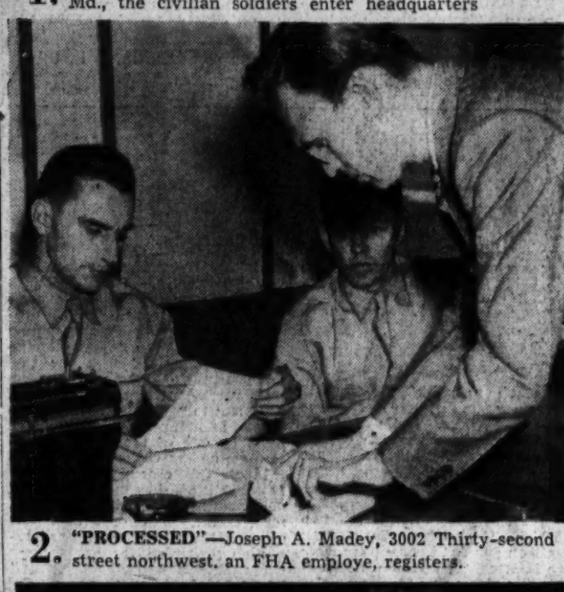
Huntington Thom, lawyer, son of Corcoran Thom, banker; James D. Danielson, student; William G. Claytor, jr., lawyer; Joseph A. Madey, real estate appraiser, FHA; Edgar Myers, accountant; Richard R. Quay, lawyer; Henry D. Brite, commercial manager, Electric Home and Farm Authority; Stanford E. Abel, engineer; Lowell J. Chawner, industrial economist; Cortland Walton, U. S. Housing Authority; James M. Barry, electrical engineer; John Enrietto, lawyer, and C. A. Suppler, Federal Loan Agency.

William R. Easton, investment counsel; R. King Stone, engineer; Francis R. Kenny, senior economist, Department of Agriculture; Paul H. Elliott, jr., lawyer; Fred A. Ballard, lawyer, and Calvin Dodd, lawyer.



2. "PROCESSED"—Joseph A. Madey, 3002 Thirty-second street northwest, an FHA employe, registers.

3. PHYSICALLY FIT?—Lieut. Jack Lanser makes a medical examination of Lowell J. Chawner.

5. "PICKING 'EM UP AND LAYING 'EM DOWN"—Most of the volunteers hadn't been in a uniform since their Boy Scout days. Post Staff Photos

Pending Bills For D. C. Seen Doomed

House Committee To Pass Up District Day Monday; 200 Measures Affected

A half dozen District bills on the Senate and House calendars and almost 200 measures that are still in committee, will die with the adjournment of Congress, it appeared yesterday, as Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee declined to take advantage of another District day on Monday.

Randolph was out of the city and was not due back before Tuesday, but committee clerks said he had stated that House leaders did not want any controversial local legislation called up. All other District measures reported by the committee have been passed.

The Senate District Committee prepared to clear up pending business by scheduling a hearing for 2 o'clock Monday afternoon on the reappointment of Riley B. Elgen, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, and Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, were named by Chairman King as members of a subcommittee to conduct the hearing.

Senate Group to Meet

Another meeting of the full committee was expected to be called next week or the week following the Democratic convention to act on House bills, including the proposed voluntary retirement law for policemen and firemen.

Complaints from suburban undertakers, it was reported, threaten to tie up a bill passed by the Senate to regulate undertakers and embalmers in Washington. House District Committee officials said that undertakers in adjacent Maryland and Virginia towns have appealed to their Congressmen to block the legislation, fearing it would keep them from doing business in the District.

Among the bills on the House calendar that seem sure to remain inactive regardless of how long Congress remains in session are:

The Kennedy reorganization bill, the Schulte milk measure, the child labor law amendment to permit children of 14 or over to appear on the stage at night, a fair trade practices bill for the liquor industry, and the taxicab limitation and optometry control bills already rejected by the House.

Fair Trade Bill, Too

On the Senate calendar is the Tydings fair trade practices bill which Senator King has blocked successfully to date.

The fate of a late District-Virginia boundary bill, submitted by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, appeared to depend on attitude of Alexandria and Arlington counties.

The House District Committee, it was said, is awaiting advice from Representative Howard Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, before acting on the bill. The Senate District Committee likewise is holding up the measure until it is accepted by Virginia authorities.

No action has been taken by either the Senator or House committee on last-minute proposals to amend the Alley Dwelling Authority Act.

Army Officer Shot Drawing Pistol At FBI Range

Maj. Lewis A. Dayton, 48, United States Army Air Corps, was wounded in the right thigh yesterday while practicing on the F. B. I. pistol range in the Justice building. Stationed at Chanute Field, Rantoul, Ill., Maj. Dayton was stopping at the Army and Navy Club.

According to police, the officer, whom friends in the Air Corps described as an enthusiastic pistol shot, was practicing drawing his gun quickly when it was discharged before leaving the holster.

His physician said Maj. Dayton was resting comfortably at Emergency Hospital. He described the wound as superficial.

Veterans' Group Elects P. R. Belt

Phillip R. Belt was elected commander of National Defense Post of the National Association of Regulars at a meeting of the veterans' organization last night at its headquarters, 907 G place northwest. Belt is a past department commander of the District Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Pass the Fan—Fair, Hot Is Forecast Today

Washingtonians who have complained of recent unseasonably chilly weather will have cause to rejoice with a rising mercury and fair sky today.

The thermometer will rise above yesterday's high of 79 degrees, in midmorning, said the Weather Bureau. Other forecasters predicted an exodus to nearby beaches.

'Untamed,' in Technicolor, at Earle, Recalls Curwood's Screen Stories

Triangle Romance In Far North Is Vividly Photographed; Stage Bill a Hit

"UNTAMED." Paramount Technicolor picturization of Sinclair Lewis' novel of "Mantrap," adapted to the screen by Frederick Hazlitt Brennan and Frank Butler, featuring Ray Milland, Akim Tamiroff and Patricia Morison, with William Frawley, Jane Darwell, Esther Dale, J. M. Kerrigan, Lily Malyon, Fay Helm, Clem Bevans, Sibyl Harris, Roscoe Ates, J. Farrell MacDonald, Charles Waldron, Darryl Hickman, Charlene Wyatt, Bahe Denedeel and Donna Jean Lester. Directed by George Archainbaud. Reviewed Friday morning. At the Earle Theater.

BELL

If the screen credits did not attribute the story to Sinclair Lewis and his novel of "Mantrap," the Paramount Technicolor production of "Untamed," currently on the screen at the Earle Theater, easily might be mistaken for a resurrection of one of the late James Oliver Curwood yarns that were so popular in the cinema's old days. The story unfolded against a panorama of magnificent natural scenery in the Far North, is one of regeneration and triangular love, seeking to express itself in the face of blinding blizzards, settlement gossip and an inherent sense of fair play that is finally rewarded by the death of one angle of the triangle.

One suspects that Mr. Lewis' original work has been appreciably denatured in its transplantation from the printed page to celluloid. The high-spirited girl who gave the novel its title is made the secretly rebellious wife of a wilderness guide. She falls desperately in love with the renegade young surgeon from New York, exiled to the wilds to repair his nerves, but never transgresses the duties and stanchness of a grateful, but unloving helpmeet. An epidemic breaks out in the dead of winter and the old, faithful serum has to be run in from a great distance. The young doctor attempts to find the messenger, bogged down in the blizzard. Alverna attempts to find the doctor and her husband finds them both. When Joe Easter is frozen to death in the discharge of an heroic errand, the path of true love is smoothed—even of the shoulder-deep snow.

The picture embraces so much that is familiar from long usage that viewing it is like meeting an old friend not glimpsed in years. Its most conspicuous asset is the rugged beauty of much of its scenic investiture, brought to life in all its grandeur by the perfection of natural color photography. That mighty snow storm gives the impression of savage realism, too, which is infinitely more than can be said of the utterly perfunctory "acting" contributed to the piece by a group of principals who usually give an excellent account of themselves.

Being the best actor in the play, Mr. Tamiroff is the one least seen. His role is too much submerged for the film's own good. As the marooned lovers, Ray Milland and Patricia Morison are out of their stride, whether trapped in the snow drifts or not. Miss Morison, particularly, is in a little over her head, even when the ground is dry and the flowers are in bloom. J. M. Kerrigan and J. Farrell MacDonald, two of the screen's honorable veterans, are highly competent in roles less important than they deserve, as may be said with equal justice of Jane Darwell. William Frawley is the picture's symbol of comedy. Roscoe Ates is wasted in a "bit" part that is virtually mute.

Things Get Tense in the North

Miss Carroll, Mr. Fairbanks Go Jungling in Capitol's 'Safari'

By Richard L. Coe

"SAFARI." Paramount picturization of the story by Paul Hervey Fox, adapted to the screen by Delmar Daves, costarring Douglas Fairbanks, jr., and Madeleine Carroll, with Lynne Overman, Tullio Carminati, Muriel Angelus, Billy Gilbert, Darby Jones, Fredric Vogeding and Clive Ion Rosemond. Directed by Edward H. Griffith. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Capitol Theater.

Synthetic as bathtub gin, "Safari" is an unexciting smatch of romance in Darkest Africa. While the Capitop film costars, Madeleine Carroll and Douglas Fairbanks, jr., it has none of the red-blooded eclat which made their "The Prisoner of Zenda" such watchable entertainment.

On the Capitol stage, those two familiar Capitolites, Sam Jack Kaufman and Art Brown offer their own informal "Jam Session," an unassuming pleasantry far more palatable than the pretentions of the feature film.

Paramount's triangular conceit deals with high life in the jungle, how eel-like Tullio Carminati is a luxury-loving Baron, dangling his gilded cage before the fascinated eyes of the fascinating Miss Carroll. But back in her mind somewhere is the memory of an aviator who died fighting in Spain, mayhap even Miss Carroll was thinking of that exciting film she made about that very war, "Blockade."

Of course, Miss Carroll loved that lad with all her heart, but "he came back in a little bronze box," so she's turning her back on action, welcoming the security of her commanding Baron. She doesn't want to go off with the boy friend on his shooting safari, but who should be the best guide in all Africa, but a solemn-faced Fairbanks, a guide for ten years in Africa, but nonetheless, just back from the war in China. How these adventurers do get around!

They Get Together

Well, you and I know why Miss Carroll decides to go on "Safari" even if Mr. Carminati has to go into a lengthy explanation for her benefit in the last reel. Lynne Overman explains the situation to Fairbanks and, as the hot African sun blazes in the jungle skies, love comes, unveiled, to our two adventurers.

There is precious little "wildlife" in all this sniping. One thing you will learn is, that on a safari you should shoot to kill and not go about maiming lions for other people to risk their lives completing your job. It isn't cricket. You might also learn what to wear, how to take a shower and where to land airplanes in Africa's tangled plains.

Miss Carroll is still one of the screen's loveliest heroines despite her pardonable lack of energy, and Fairbanks manages to keep his well-combed head above water. Lynne Overman, practically unrecognizable in beard and clever make-up, is the popular idea of a Scotsman.

Cute Little Olive!

Singing and dancing is the long suit on the stage, as well it might be with Maestro Kaufman and Organist Brown, the embattled masters of ceremonies. Their performers are attractive and peppy. Buster Shaver's ever-likable minute duo, Olive and George, have top position on the bill, with the tiny Olive next to stopping the show with her minuscular sophistication, complete to high heels, sleek hairdo and knowing wink. Little Olive must be one of the smartest performers on the variety stage today.

N. B. C.'s charming songstress, Lynn Allison, has not a "large" voice, but it has a remarkably sweet tone, which, combined with a welcome restraint, brought a good reception yesterday for her Strauss waltz and "Begin the Beguine." Ed Ford and Whitey, that man with the enviably trained dogs, continues to amaze audiences with their cleverness, while Weldon Barr's dancing impressions were equally well received.

A particularly interesting newsreel including a section devoted to our defense preparations, commence with Kate Smith's tingling version of the Irving Berlin cheerer, "God Bless America."

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, July 5.

While Vincent Sheean is in Italy, living new chapters for his "Personal History," Walter Wanger, who purchased the screen rights to that book and changed the title to "Foreign Correspondent," finds that the movie now costs him $1,300,000—and still isn't finished . . . The Hartmans have added new lustre to Fefe's Monte Carlo, which is doing record business. When Zanuck signed Barrymore for "The Great Profile," he was saved six lawsuits—two by the producers of "My Dear Children," two by the authors, and two by Mr. and Mrs. John Barrymore.

When the Athenia was sunk a great deal of publicity was given to the nursemaid who rescued Ernst Lubitsch's baby. And when that nursemaid, Carlina Strohmayer, arrived in New York on the rescue-ship and placed the baby safely into Lubitsch's arms, the papers again gave her publicity . . . Recently, however, Carlina terminated her employment with Lubitsch, for reasons unknown to him, and disappeared. Her full name is Carlina Strohmayer Consolo. She married a New Yorker who, a short time later, brought suit against her because of some financial transactions. She went West, while he obtained a judgment, but couldn't locate her. Then came this publicity. And when Carlina returned to Hollywood, her husband arranged a lawsuit in California, based upon that New York judgment . . . And now he is unable to serve her with the papers.

STEVE HANNAGAN: You're being credited with an assist, in the boom for Willkie at the convention . . . DRAMATISTS GUILD: Moss Hart, George S. Kaufman and Robert E. Sherwood have abandoned the movie they were writing and whose sales proceeds were to be turned over to your organization. They may try again . . . SENATOR DAVID I. WALSH: Because of your position against the President's foreign policy, Congressman John McCormack of Boston may run against you. . . . NEWSPAPER GUILD: The demise of a Georgian newspaper will be part of the ammunition to be fired against the Republican campaign shortly. . . . FIFTY-SECOND STREET ASSOCIATION: As soon as the District of Columbia changes its Saturday night curfew from midnight to 2 a. m., Leon & Eddie's will open a branch night club in Washington.

PLEASURE: Eddie Cantor spoke about George Jessel and expressed hopes for George's future happiness. He told of Jessel's strange manner of living—of the day when they teamed for a record run at the Palace Theater. When the engagement was finished, George went to Palm Beach. Cantor was offered a one-week job in New Haven, and wired Jessel that he'd pay him $2,500 to return for that week. Jessel's reply was a picture-postcard, showing George, wearing a yachting cap, sunning himself on a large yacht in Biscayne Bay. On that postcard was scribbled. "Forget about that week's work. This is the way a man should live—and enjoy himself" . . . The next week Cantor received a wire from Jessel, asking for $200—to pay for the yacht's gasoline.

PET DEPARTMENT: The horses used in "American Jubilee" are from Mexico, where they never were accustomed to being fed lumps of sugar. One of the chorus men in the show introduced the animals to this delicacy and trained his favorite horse to poke for the lumps in the places where he put them while the horse watched—in the man's coat pocket, vest pocket and pants pocket. The horse has learned too quickly, and too well—for he saw the man place a lump of sugar in his own mouth and thought that, too, was a pocket. The animal-lover now has teeth marks on his cheek.

PERSONALS: Estelle Taylor, who leased her Hollywood home to Mr. and Mrs. George Jessel, has much faith in the success of their marriage. She listened to some of Jessel's friends reporting that George was buying for Lois all the things she wanted, things he felt would delight her . . . "Don't you think," Estelle was asked, "that George Jessel is losing his balance?" . . . "Only," she replied, "in the bank."

REASON: Phil Silvers, the young comic who, in one season, went from Minsky's to MGM, has completed his first movie, "Strike Up the Band." He listened to Mickey Rooney and the producers discuss the present crisis—that it wouldn't have happened if Hitler had been stopped at the Ruhr, if Gen. Franco had been opposed, if the Allies had fought for the Czechs, etc. "You're all wrong," Silvers assured. "I caused all this trouble, because whenever I start getting a break, something happens. Now take this war—just as I've started my movie career. I guarantee you that if I was still at Minsky's Gaiety, doing five a day, this crisis wouldn't occur."

EQUITY: All the children now at the Actors' Orphanage in London will be brought across the Atlantic. One British citizen, now in America, will provide for them, until he can arrange for some of his colleagues here to participate . . . COL. LINDBERGH: Here's what is so puzzling to the National Defense Advisory Board, concerning Henry Ford's refusal to build plane engines for the British: Edsel Ford came to Washington and discussed the entire plan with Knudsen and others. He then returned to Detroit, and after several days he informed Knudsen that the deal was all right—including the engines for England. The Defense Commission received the impression that Edsel had received his father's approval. After that came Henry's cancellation.

Trans-Lux

"Happy days are here, but for how long?" is the thought you'll have after leaving the Trans-Lux. The bright and summery sequences will fill you with vacation ideas, but underneath is the sour baritone of politics and the somber bass of marching feet.

A celluloid trip to Boston is one of the best of its genre. The views of the Charles River, Boston Common, Harvard, Longfellow's home and Boston Tech are so airily photographed that they may inspire you to take one of those Baltimore-Boston boat trips. Or you may get thrown off this tangent by Lowell Thomas' air tour over the beauty spots of the West, including the Yellowstone, Boulder Dam, Yosemite, the Grand Tetons and some extra-satisfying canyons.

Fun at the Fair

Prospective World's Fair trippers will be enlivened by previews of those squirrelly hats now going on view, also the holiday celebrations at the Canadian Building and a small boys' hot dog eating contest. The cause of diversion is also served by shots of racing at Hollywood and Aqueduct, tennis by Big Bill Tilden and Vincent Richards, and a blow-by-blow picturing of the unpleasantness between Jack Dempsey and bald-headed old "Cowboy" Luttrell.

"Stranger Than Fiction" is the best of this series to date. It shows a blind guide to Baltimore's Fort McHenry, a way to use old silk stockings, Japan's new buses run by charcoal.

The Republican convention and the progress of the Nation's program are of historical value and are climaxed by Kate Smith singing "God Bless America." Right you are, Kate. MARY HARRIS.

Ski Group Selects Paulette as Chief

Paulette Goddard, film actress, last week was elected president of Southern Skis, an organization composed of approximately 200 skiing enthusiasts in southern California, by a unanimous vote of the membership.

Dr. Joel Pressman, husband of Cinemactress Claudette Colbert, was elected vice president; Wallace Neff, secretary, and Dorothy Cooper, treasurer.

Clubhouses for the skiing enthusiasts will be erected at Sun Valley, Yosemite and at numerous other winter playfields in the United States, according to Miss Goddard.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, July 5.—Tragic is Madeleine Carroll's futile trip to Europe to join her fiance, a French aviator, for she never saw him. She arrived in Madrid just as Germany invaded Paris and although all information is sketchy, it is certain that she never contacted her flier. "Virginia," starring Madeleine and Fred MacMurray, stars July 15, with location shots made in the State from which the picture derives its name.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Until today, Para was greatly worried about whether Madeleine would be back in time to make "Virginia," but a cable arrived from a man named Wyatt with the information that the blonde star would sail from Lisbon on the clipper July 8. All the messages are cryptic with no real details revealed, but the studio doubts if Madeleine has seen either her parents or her aviator. Stirling Hayden, youthful actor and a stranger in our midst, has been chosen by Director E. H. Griffith to replace Ray Milland in "Virginia."

The colorful Pola Negri, who was once reported in a concentration camp, put there by Hitler after she lost favor with him, and who is one of the most exciting women ever to be in Hollywood, is coming back. Pola has cabled friends that she wants to make another picture, and just between you and me, David Loew and Al Lewin will give her a part in "Flotsam," if she wants it. Pola is still a very beautiful woman and there never was anybody in the world just like her. How well I remember when she decided she wanted to meet Rudolph Valentino, and left no stone unturned until she landed him "hook, line and sinker."

The need for quick action is stressed in Edward Small's drastic statement which he is sending today to every independent producer. He is urging prompt attention to his appeal and says unless there is an immediate cut of salaries throughout the industry, elimination of the double bill and the giving away of so-called box-office stimulants and a sharing of problems by the entire industry, movies cannot survive the life and death struggle for existence. Says Small: "Too many people have been sticking their heads in the sand for too long a time rather than face the facts. The motion picture business has its back against the wall and faces destruction unless it is rescued from within."

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: The John Waynes have dated the stork. It's their fourth; Mary Lou Dix, who was Al Newman's heart for so many months, is now concentrating on Alfred Wright, jr.; Bette Davis chatted with her former husband, Harmon Nelson, the other eve on the long distance phone; Rita Johnson and Brod Crawford, who once were on the matrimonial threshold, are talking things over again.

John Barrymore has gained 8 pounds since he returned to Hollywood; Maurice Weinzelbaum, Chicago attorney, arrives here July 13 to see Ann Miller and don't be surprised if they make an announcement; Robert Preston has been lunching almost daily with Patty McCarthy, Dorothy Lamour's secretary; Arleen Whelan and Alex d'Arcy, once aflame, supping at the Cafe Lamaze; Jackie Cooper and Bonita Granville are making no secret of their feelings; Tillie Losch, who is now Lady Carnavon, is coming to America to do a play. She will give the proceeds to the Red Cross.

Everyone is asking why A. C. Blumenthal and Peggy Fears are remaining in Mexico for all these months. Talk is that Blumey is promoting some movie theaters; Gloria Blondell will take over the lead in "Goodbye to Love" when her sister, Joan, leaves the cast; Bob Hope's brother Jack, his secretary, and Kay Noonan are reported pricing wedding rings; the Don Ameches are expecting a baby any minute—their fourth.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, July 5.

I lunched the other day with Bette Davis and Van Heflin, Katharine Hepburn's leading man in "Philadelphia Story." He brought messages from Katie to Bette with the hope that those two could get together this summer—they've never met. Van Heflin took a test for "Santa Fe Trail." Metro wanted him for "Philadelphia Story," but he doesn't want pictures—except for an occasional one. They all want him to sign a term contract. Oh, yes, he's had picture experience—a year at RKO without getting anything but "B" pictures—except one bit in a Hepburn picture. She remembered him—and that's the reason he played the lead in "Philadelphia Story" on the stage—and he goes back in the fall.

HOPPER

Bette's giving her usual exciting performance in "The Letter." And when I asked Willie Wyler, her director, who was going to play the cobra and the mongoose, which were in the Jeanne Eagels version of the picture, he said, "Bette and I—of course. I'm the mongoose!" . . . And Pere Westmore has given Gale Sondergaard not only a black wig but a new forehead, to make her look Oriental in that picture.

Gene Markey may persuade David Warfield to make a picture. To the new generation he's just a name, but to us old 'uns he was one of the greatest characters in the theater. Will you ever forget his "Music Master?"

And I wonder how many of you will remember Elmo Lincoln? He was our first screen Tarzan 20 years ago—at the unheard of salary of $1,000 a week. Yesterday I saw him again on the "Flowing Gold" set. He's doing extra work—but is taking lessons at one of our leading dramatic schools, and at the age of 50 hopes for a screen comeback. Well, Minnie DuPree did it at 75—and so did Albert Basserman.

I always knew Director Dave Butler was clever, but he's shrewd as well. Imagine getting Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi, and Peter Lorre, together with Kay Kyser, all in the same picture and all playing comedy.

After seeing and hearing Judy Garland in "Andy Hardy Meets a Debutante," I'm not surprised that Judy, instead of Eleanor Powell, gets the star role in "The Ziegfeld Girl." Judy's terrific—and what sex appeal!

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

There's trouble stirring in the first division of the American League. A voice out of the past—and what a past—is beginning to be heard. The Yankees, off to a sour start in the pennant race and duly interred by the conclusion-jumpers, are beginning to roll, and if there is no panic in Cleveland, in Detroit and in Boston, there should be.

POVICH

This morning finds the Yanks in fourth place breathing hot on the necks of the third-place Red Sox. But what is more to the point, they are only 5½ games out of the league lead. If the league-leading Indians and Tigers aren't looking over their shoulders with great apprehension at the Yankee surge they're existing in a fool's paradise. Those Yanks mean business.

They've only started to play ball. They're on the move now with four wins in their last five games They've discovered that they aren't in such a hot league. The Indians are in front by winning an average of only three out of each five games. That isn't a hot pace. An inferior Yankee team is better than that. But this Yankee team is stimulated by its early-season failure. It has incentive that other Yankee teams may have lacked. This year they are meeting a challenge. For the past four years it has been a case of getting off in front and coasting.

The suspicion is that they don't have much to beat. The Red Sox who set the pace for the most of the season thus far were able to stay up there with probably the worst pitching staff in the league. The Indians, without any really potent hitting, were able to take over the lead. The Tigers, with a dubious infield, are hanging close to the top. In that kind of a league the Yanks certainly must be impressed with their own chances to take it all.

The blunt fact is that the Yankees have more good ball players than any club of the league. Even when the New York club was in last place early in the season, you wouldn't have been able to find a club-owner in the league who wouldn't swap his team for the Yankee club. The Yanks have too many potentialities which are only now beginning to assert themselves.

Consider the fact that the Yanks are only five games out of the league despite the batting slumps of Charley Keller, Joe DiMaggio, and Bill Dickey. What is going to happen when those gents begin meeting the ball in the manner to which they are accustomed? And the Yanks have been operating without Lefty Gomez since April 18. He had a sore arm. But he won his last start impressively this week and complained of no soreness. Toss a guy like Gomez onto any club and that team is vastly improved.

Any day now the Yanks will overtake the Red Sox and move into third place and what lies ahead? Merely the Indians and the Tigers. They can be caught. The Yanks are never a bad team to tie to if it develops into a stretch battle. The Red Sox must surely be counted out of it. Joe Cronin's woeful pitching is profaning an otherwise swell ball club. When the Red Sox could gain only an even break with the seventh-place Nats and the eighth-place A's in eight games this week, that was the tip-off.

We still maintain that the only serious opposition the Yankees will encounter before winning their fifth straight pennant will be the Tigers. The Indians, like the Red Sox, don't have it. Pitching—which they do have—will take a club only so far. As far as the Indians are concerned, the pity is that they can't take their short right field wall around the league with them. They suffer an inferiority complex as soon as they move into any other park as their habitually poor performances on the road indicate.

The Tigers, though, have power and better than tolerable pitching. Just as important they have the fortitude that the Cleveland cry-babies lack. The Tigers mean trouble, but for four years now they have failed to overtake the Yankees and this year it is no great Detroit ball club that Del Baker is managing. A good one, but not a great one.

When the Yankees were being kicked around earlier in the season they were not only helpless against left-handed pitching, but demoralized in a sense. It was a comparatively new experience for a ball team with "New York" emblazoned across their chests. They quarreled with umpires, they pressed, they were smitten with a horrible sense of futility. And then all of a sudden they discovered that the league, in fact, wasn't so hot. They could win the pennant this year with far fewer than their 100 victories of past seasons.

Their early-season reverses have made them tougher. With the coming of some success they are beginning to show the old Yankee swagger which has a tremendous psychological effect on the opposition. When they hammered out eight home runs in Boston on July 4—old Yankee stuff—they served emphatic notice that they were still the Yanks. It all adds up to "Beware!"

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, July 5.—Though he hasn't tasted milk since his early school days around Decatur, Ill., except in milk punches, Ken Overlin, the middleweight champion, will bring about the tasting of tons of it next Tuesday night when he fights Harry Balsamo at Queensboro Arena for the free milk for babies fund.

CONSIDINE

It is Overlin's first appearance here since the night he out-cutied Ceferino Garcia for the title, and while the title isn't at stake it shapes up as a bust 'em loose fight. Balsamo never became the second Ketchell, as some of the boys predicted he would, but he has lost only 5 of his 50 fights. And he can drop anything he hits.

If he had a little more punch, this Overlin would be one of the fabled figures of the ring. He is one of those incredible fellows who can break all the rules and get away with it. His training for the Balsamo fight will consist largely of cutting down his predinner cocktails tomorrow and Monday.

Nobody knows just how old Kenneth is or precisely how long he has been fighting. He was a happy-go-lucky sailor on the U. S. S. Idaho at least 10 years ago, and had fought a lot before that. He won the Navy's middleweight championship, then left the service because fleet maneuvers were perpetually interfering with his night club routine. When gentle matrimony at last came to him it was performed in a cheap ring at Virginia Beach, in his fighting togs, and his best man was his opponent—whom he promptly smeared.

Doing his roadwork an dance floors, and fighting for anything from $5 up, he toured the tank towns with his persevering and patient manager, Chris Dundee, fought in England, France and Australia, spent everything he made, made thousands of friends and had a good time. He still is having the good time. Few champions in history have ever been as relaxed as this soft-spoken, intelligent, good time Charles. He has no mistaken concept of his merit, no regrets about the things he has done, and likes to sit around with a drink in his paw and talk about his profession. He is a cultured Harry Greb, a nonbelligerent Mickey Walker. He never misses the fun and the laugh side of his business. When he's through he wants to be either a sports broadcaster (he's really very good at that) or a sportswriter.

Looks like it is going to be the Reds and Dodgers right down to the finish line, doesn't it? But no matter how much we'd like to see those Brooklyns come through, we can't see how their pitching is going to hold up. Or at least how it is going to keep going abreast of Derringer, Walters, Moore, Thompson, etc. Leo Durocher has no man he can hand a ball to and say, "go out there and win me this one," and fully expect him to obey. McKechnie has two such employes, and over the long haul we think the Reds will outscramble Brooklyn's gang of supercharged cast-offs, rookies, has-beens and stars.

The Red Sox certainly seem to be washed up, in the other league. This was the year to win. The Yanks were off to their worst start in years and the Sox should have piled up a great lead in the first two months. For a time it seemed that they would do just that, but as we look back it was a semisynthetic sort of spurt, built mainly on the fine late inning hitting of Jimmy Foxx. Sound pitching wasn't there, and now Joe Cronin has no pitching at all.

The Yanks, after one false harbinger, now seem definitely in the groove. Once they get past the Sox, which won't take long, we expect them to have a merry tussle with the Tigers, then come up behind the Indians and say "Boo!"—which will finish the Indians, except on such days as Bobby Feller pitches. Joe McCarthy must be taking heart with the knowledge that his team has gotten all the bad baseball out of its system.

16-Year-Old Hawaiian Wins Tank Title

Freestyle Mile Is Won By 50 Yards

First Major Tank Outing Sees Nakama Beat Foes Decisively; Smith Finishes 2d

By the Associated Press

Santa Barbara, Calif., July 5.—Sixteen-year-old Bunmei Nakama of the Hawaiian Islands took possession of the American mile freestyle swimming championship today, winning the event with ridiculous ease over six opponents in the National A. A. U. Swimming and Diving Tournament.

Competing for the first time in the National, as well as the first time in a major water meet, the slight little "Roaring Rainbow" from the Alexander Community House in Maui hit the finish wall 50 yards in front of William Smith, of Honolulu.

Clark's Threat Fails

The 23-year-old Pittsburgh star turned back the challenge of his friend and perennial foe of Ohio State, Earl Clark, in the finals.

Clark, the only diver to defeat Patnik in four years of major competition, was generally favored to lift the crown because of his victory over the champion in the qualifying round.

At the end of the five compulsory dives, Clark held a margin lead of less than one point, but he lost it, and a chance to attain the title, in the optional back, one and a half layout, when Patnik cut the green waters for a score of 99, and Clark fell off with 72.6, his worst dive of the event.

At the finish, Patnik had scored 163.8 points, Clark 160.94 points. Clark rallied on the final and hit 108.1 with a marvelous full twist forward one and a half, while Patnik had to be content with 96.8 points.

Patnik, newly graduated from Ohio State, announced his retirement from A. A. U. competition. He plans to go into business in Cleveland.

Welsh Tells Smith, 'You Sure Were Tough!'—He Meant It

Very often the winner is simply being polite when he compliments his beaten net opponent, but when Defending Champion Barney Welsh (right) praised Alphonso Smith yesterday after defeating him in a semifinal match of the Middle Atlantic tournament, he wasn't kidding. For Smith, despite an infected foot, gave the perennial District champion a whale of a battle before losing, 6—3, 8—6. Below—Davie Johnsen, who meets Welsh for the title today at Columbia. Welsh, Johnsen Gain M. A. Tennis Finals

Handicapped by an infected foot, veteran Alphonso Smith nevertheless played some of the finest tennis of his career to no avail yesterday as he bowed to Defending Champion Barney Welsh in the semifinals of the Middle Atlantic tournament at Columbia.

Welsh by his 6—3, 8—6 victory, achieved only after a terrific battle, qualified to seek his third straight championship which would retire The Washington Post trophy. His opponent in the finals at 3 p. m. today will be third-seeded Davie Johnsen, who advanced by default yesterday when Hugh Lynch, his second-seeded foe, was called to New York on business.

Following today's singles final will be the doubles title match bringing together a pair of dark horse combinations, Lieuts. Bill Howard and Jimmy Farrin, U. S. N., and Smith and Dick Murphy. They were seeded fourth and third, respectively. Howard and Farrin gained the finals by upsetting Defending Champions Lynch and Johnsen, while Smith and Murphy were surprising Second-ranked Welsh and Dooly Mitchell in matches Thursday. Ken Chase Faces Bostonians Today; Galehouse Pitches

Kendall Chase, one of the more emphatic disappointments of the Washington pitching staff, will get a chance to reestablish himself this afternoon. He will go to the mound against the Red Sox in the second game of the series.

Chase was beaten by the Yankees in his last start.

Manager Joe Cronin, hard pressed for pitchers, will send Right-hander Dennis Galehouse to the box. Galehouse lost a 4-3 decision to the Nats at Boston last week.

Nats Beaten, 9-4, by Bosox Hard Hitting

Masterson, Hudlin Toss 14 Safeties at Boston; Three Errors Help CauseVery Little

By Shirley Povich.
Post Staff Writer

Until yesterday the Boston Red Sox were suffering from the lack of a pitcher who could go the nine-inning route. But the Nats remedied that situation. They out-disgraced the Red Sox, enabled Jim Bagby to last the distance and took a 9-4 beating from the Boston club. It was the first time in their last 13 games that a Boston pitcher went the route.

At one point in the proceedings—staged before 8,000 wildly cheering ladies' day guests—the Red Sox had a 9-2 lead. They were doing the thing they do best—whacking the ball. Before it was all over the Sox had accumulated 14 hits off Walter Masterson and Willis Hudlin, including Jimmy Foxx's twentieth home run of the season and Ted Williams' eleventh.

Hudlin was an innocent bystander compared to young Masterson who surrendered eight runs to the Red Sox before he was humanely relieved in the midst of a fifth-inning assault.

The Nats made 12 hits against Bagby, but ten of 'em were singles in contrast to the long-distance clouting of the Red Sox. Joe Cronin's crew swatted a pair of triples and a pair of doubles in addition to their two homers, and they had the benefit also of three Washington errors.

Things Started Early

Despite the horrible shellacking of the Washington pitchers the Nats muffed inviting chances to get back in the ball game. They left 11 men on base. The only extra base blow to bounce off their bats with the exception of Cecil Travis' seventh-inning double was Jake Early's eighth-inning homer over the right-field wall with none on base. A couple of innings before with two on base Early obliged the Red Sox by striking out.

Before the game was two innings old the Red Sox had a 3-0 lead. The rout began in the second inning when Finney's routine grounder took a weird hop over Myer's shoulder for a cheap single. Before the inning was over Masterson had wild pitched Finney to second, Cronin had drawn a walk, De Sautels and Bagby singled and Doerr produced a fly that drove in the third run. Oh, yeah—Buddy Lewis muffed a ball in rightfield that put the third run on third base.

Boston's fourth run wasn't very complicated. Jimmy Foxx simply banged one of Masterson's pitches into the leftfield bleachers, where a blue-shirted fan made a sensational bare-hand catch amid bleacher shouts of "Sign him!" That happened in the fourth inning.

Johnson and Hayes Hit for Circuit; Babich Holds Foes

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 5.—Home runs by Bob Johnson and Frank Hayes, coupled with Johnny Babich's seven-hit pitching, gave the Athletics a 6-to-3 victory over the New York Yankees before 25,520 at Shibe Park tonight.

Joe Gordon and Joe DiMaggio blasted a pair of roundtrippers for the Yanks, but both came with the bases empty.

Hayes connected for his four-base clout following Dick Siebert's single in the fourth. Johnson's smash came off Relief Pitcher Steve Sundra with Benny McCoy on base in the eighth and assured victory.

Babich, who beat the Yanks in a ten-inning game at New York last Sunday, was in trouble in the second and eighth, but pulled out with a minimum of damage. Following Gordon's homer in the second the Yanks loaded the sacks with one out, but failed to score another run.

In the eighth DiMaggio's double, a walk to George Selkirk and Gordon's single gave the Yanks their third run. Selkirk was nipped trying to go to third on Gordon's hit to cut short the rally. Coach Art Fletcher was banished for protesting the decision.

Johnson's single in the opening inning following walks to Bill Lillard and Wally Moses scored the A's first run. Moses came home when Selkirk fumbled the ball.

Caddell had been in ill health for about five months. He gave up his coaching job at the college in the winter after having tutored baseball players here continuously for 18 years.

Flock Scores Four in Final Round to Win

Clubs Fight for Five Hours Before Victors Hit Stride; Medwick Is Injured by Ball

Boston, July 5.—The Brooklyn Dodgers, artists at performing the unusual, turned the trick again today when they beat the Boston Bees, 6 to 2, with a four-run rally in the twentieth inning of the longest game ever recorded in the majors in point of time.

For 5 hours and 19 minutes the two teams waged see-saw warfare. Finally the Bees blew up in the gloaming and allowed Brooklyn to run away with the contest. A determined group of 3,881 fans watched the struggle from the bleak stands in National League field and saw the Bees muff so many opportunities in the extra innings that the Dodger victory came as no surprise to them.

On June 27 a year ago, in these same surroundings, Brooklyn played a 2-2 tie with the Bees over the 23-inning route. That game, longer though it was in innings, was shorter as far as minutes are concerned.

Although his name will not be inscribed in the National League's statistical department as the winning pitcher of today's marathon, Hugh Casey was the brightest star in the Brooklyn firmament. Casey withstood the Bees when they were at their busiest in the extra innings, but in the nineteenth he grew weary and had to be relieved.

Ironically for Casey the Dodgers surged ahead in the next inning. A single by Dixie Walker set the rally in motion. An error by Joe Sullivan, who had pitched shut-out ball for 11 innings, gave the rally momentum. With Walker on first Jimmy Wasdell sacrificed. Sullivan threw wildly to Hassett and the runners went to second and third.

Sullivan, dismayed by his own blunder, couldn't find the plate after his error. After he had passed Mancuso purposely to fill the bases, he proceeded to throw four unintentional balls to Dolph Camilli. An error by Eddie Miller and Reese's single to center accounted for three more runs. They weren't really necessary. The Bees were so exhausted they could hardly swing a bat in the twentieth despite the fact that the first two batters walked. Miller, whose error in the twentieth paved the way for Brooklyn's additional runs, was largely responsible for all the extra innings

Medwick Is Hit On Wrist in 15th

BY International News Service

Boston, July 5.—Although he was replaced by a runner on first base after being hit in the wrist by a pitched ball in the fifteenth inning of a game with the Bees this afternoon, Joe (Ducky-Wucky) Medwick, Brooklyn Dodger's outfielder, tonight was believed to have escaped serious injury.

Medwick, only recently recovered from a "beaning" that resulted in a Nation-wide controversy, apparently suffered a bruised wrist. X-rays were to be taken as a precautionary measure but it was expected he would be back in the lineup tomorrow.

The incident occurred in the first half of the fifteenth inning when Medwick was batting against Pitcher Sullivan. He took first base and was replaced by Wasdell, who was sent in to run for him.

Medwick was acquired for approximately $200,000 from the Cardinals. Shortly after he joined the pennant-anxious Dodgers, he was struck on the head by one of Bob Bowman's pitches while Brooklyn was playing against the Cardinals.

President Larry MacPhail and several Brooklyn players claimed the "beaning" was intentional but Bowman and his teammates insisted it was accidental.

Clifton's Lad Wins Hunter Championship of Culpeper Show

Golondrina, Losing Lead, Is Reserve

'Big Little' Horses Top Contenders; In Triple Bar Class Clover Seed Victor

By Anne Hagner

Culpeper, Va., July 5.—Two "big little" horses, Dr. Lewis M. Allen's Clifton's Lad and Mrs. James Hamilton's Golondrina, proved their merit over many heavyweight competitors to take the hunter championship and reserve, respectively, as the Culpeper Horse Show ended near here today.

The "big little" description, frequently applied to horses that are small in size but big in bone and accomplishments, fits perfectly the two title winners, for both mounts are scarcely 16 hands in height.

Clifton's Lad, a gray 8-year-old son of Coq Gaulois, won several minor awards yesterday and the hard-fought Corinthian event today to qualify him for the championship preliminary, shown under saddle. With Norman Haymaker up, the handsome little gelding worked to perfection at a walk, trot and canter, despite the fact that he has not been shown in hack classes for many months.

Owner Rides Winner

Golondrina, ridden throughout the show by Mrs. Hamilton, her Warrenton owner, was not able to duplicate yesterday's feat of winning two blue ribbons, in hunter classes, but was still able to place third to Clifton's Lad and Royalty 2d in the preliminary.

The victory of Clifton's Lad brought to an abrupt end Mrs. M. E. Whitney's string of Culpeper championship awards, which have numbered three in the past three years. Haymaker, in charge of the Whitney show string this season, has ridden Dr. Allen's high-class mounts for many years.

His present ambition is to procure Clifton's Lad to make a third for Mrs. Whitney's famed gray hunt team, which will make its next appearance at the Rappahannock (Va.) show two weeks hence. Mrs. Whitney is expected to return to her Llangollen farm, at Upperville, from California in time to ride her mounts, now rounding into best form.

Four Jumpoffs

Although the hunter battle drew most interest today, much excitement resulted from the triple-bar class, which necessitated four jumpoffs before Mrs. D. N. Lee's Clover Seed finally defeated U. S. Randle's Way for the blue. The bars were spread to a width of 10 feet in the last round, when Randle's Way and rider, Johnny Keeler, ploughed through the middle of the last fence, scattering bars in every direction.

Jenkins-Armstrong Bout Barrier Cleared

By the United Press

New York, July 5.—The last barrier to the best fight of the year was removed today when Justice John H. McCooey denied an application for an injunction to restrain Lightweight Champion Lew Jenkins from meeting Henry Armstrong, welterweight king, at the Polo Grounds, July 17.

This injunction was sought in Brooklyn Supreme Court by operators of the Broadway Arena who contended that Jenkins had a prior contract to fight Jack Sharkey, jr., at the arena. The injunction would have prevented Jenkins from encountering Armstrong until he had fulfilled the alleged contract with Sharkey.

Justice McCooey gave his denial without delivering an opinion.

Promoter Mike Jacobs was naturally delighted at the decision because this 12-round nontitle engagement between the two knockout artists already has enjoyed a large advance sale. Jacobs said: "I was disappointed by the Louis-Godoy and Galento-Baer gates, but here is a bout that will live up to expectations. If it doesn't outdraw both those fights, I ought to quit promoting—because it's a natural."

Armstrong Choice

The Louis-Godoy heavyweight title tilt at Yankee Stadium grossed $149,000, and Tuesday's Baer-Galento gate at Jersey City was $97,254.

Meanwhile, Armstrong, the perpetual motion Negro from Los Angeles, continued to rule the betting favorite at surprisingly long odds of 11-4. Price-maker Eddie Borden predicted that this price will be shortened considerably in heavy betting before ring time.

Borden said that the heavy wagering on this brawl will be on knockout angles, since virtually none of the experts expects it to go the distance. Most of Armstrong's victories have been by the kayo route, and Jenkins, the Texas Thunderbolt, is working right now on a string of eight straight knockouts.

Jenkins, who hasn't fought since May 10 when he wrested the lightweight crown from Lou Ambers on a third-round knockout, is conditioning at Grossinger's Country Club, Ferndale, N. Y. This is the spot where Barney Ross trained for most of his New York bouts. Armstrong is grooming at Joe Murcio's resort, Greenwood Lake, N. Y. This is Champion Joe Louis' training site and the place where Jenkins sharpened for the Ambers bout.

Have to Make 140 Pounds

Although no title is at stake in this brawl, both principals are contracted to fight at 140 pounds or less. This will provide a weight-making hazard for Armstrong, who has been putting on poundage steadily during the past couple of years. It will not bother Jenkins, a natural lightweight, who will scale around 135 pounds.

Hammering Henry scaled 144 pounds in his last bout on June 22, when he knocked out Paul Junior at Bangor, Me., and he was not impressive. Today he registered 145 pounds—pounds that will be very difficult to pare off.

Jenkins drove into New York today to see his dentist. He did his roadwork at Ferndale early in the morning and sparred five rounds after returning from the dentist.

Louis Plans Only Two Title Fights In '40, Says Pilot

By the United Press

New York, July 5.—Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis will make but two defenses of his title in 1941, both outdoors, his comanagers, John Roxborough and Julian Black announced today. That procedure will be followed each year thereafter, as long as he holds the crown. The comanagers believe that too many Louis defenses have tended to cheapen the title and lessen the big-fight gates.

Chisox Slug To Turn Back Browns, 10-8

Chicago Bombards St. Louis Pitchers For Total of 13 Hits

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 5.—The Chicago White Sox unloosed a 13-hit attack today to defeat St. Louis, 10 to 8, in a slugging match which gave the Chicago team its fourth straight victory, and three in a row over the Browns.

The Sox assault was made at the expense of Eldon Auker, who was knocked out in the fifth inning, Roxie Lawson and Emil Bildilli.

The Browns made seven hits, including homers by Harlond Clift and Walter Judnich, off Johnny Rigney and Pete Appleton. Rigney, who didn't allow a hit in the first four innings, was driven from the mound in the fifth, but Appleton finished up satisfactorily while the White Sox continued their hitting spree.

It was Appleton's third victory of the season.

Upstart Gains Semifinals of College Tennis

By the Associated Press

Montclair, N. J., July 5.—The three top-seeded netmen and an unranked upstart from the University of Southern California advanced today to the semifinal bracket of the Eastern intercollegiate tennis championship at the Montclair Athletic Club.

With unseeded Myron McNamara in the victory column were another Trojan, George Toley, seeded second; top-ranking Isadore Bellis, of the University of Pennsylvania, and Seymour Greenberg of Northwestern.

Bellis paced the field with a three-set triumph over the chop specialist, Frank Mehner, of Utah, seeded eight, 3—6, 6—3, 6—1. The chop had Bellis worried in the early stages, but he solved Mehner's tactics in the last two sets.

Toley was an easy winner over Joseph Fishbach, fifth seeded, from St. John's, of Brooklyn, 6—4, 6—1, and McNamara came from behind to down Alexander Carver, of North Carolina, another favorite spiller, 5—7, 6—3, 6—2.

Greenberg put out a third Trojan, Billy Reedy, sixth ranked, 6—2, 6—4.

In the freshman division semifinals, top favored Dick McKee, of Miami, went down before Arthur Marx, of Southern California, the son of Comedian Groucho Marx, 6—4, 0—6, 6—1, and Bill McGehee, of Tulane, seeded No. 2, won from Edward Moylan, of Spring Hill, Ala., 6—3, 6—4.

The first year doubles title went to Henry Canda and Ward Chamberlin, of Princeton, by virtue of a 6—3, 6—2, 3—6, 6—3 victory over Edward Antolini and Kenneth Everson, of North Carolina.

Three Homers Rout Cardinals For Cubs, 11-5

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, July 5.—Four-run, three-run and two-run homers powered the Chicago Cubs to an 11-to-5 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals today.

Glen Russell hit for the circuit with the bases filled, Augie Galan with two on and Bill Nicholson with one aboard. On top of that, Billy Herman had a perfect day at bat with four singles. The Cubs got 15 hits altogether.

No one was on base for the Cards when Johnny Mize hit his twenty-first homer of the season and Terry Moore his seventh off Lefty Vern Olsen. He had to be rescued by Ken Raffensberger in the eighth when the Cards threatened.

Giants Shell Phil Hurlers And Win, 15-2

By the Associated Press

New York, July 5.—The New York Giants partially made up for their shabby showing in the Dodgers' series by whaling out a 15-2 victory over the Phillies today before a ladies day crowd of 10,234.

Hugh Mulcahy and Lefty Lloyd Brown, of the Phils, were touched for 17 blows while Cliff Melton went the route, scattering seven hits for his eighth victory of the season.

The Giants equaled their best previous scoring of the year in the second inning when they tallied eight runs and drove Mulcahy to the showers.

Western Netmen Win

By the Associated Press

Glen Cove, N. Y., July 5.—Four Western players, Frank Kovacs, of Oakland, Calif.; Midshipman Joe Hunt, of Los Angeles and the United States Naval Academy; Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., and Hal Surface, of Kansas City, today won semifinal brackets in the Nassau Country Club's invitation tennis tournament.

Cooke plays Surface and Kovacs meets Hunt in tomorrow's semifinals.

The towering Oakland star, who returned to major competition this summer after two years' absence, turned in today's outstanding performance when he eliminated Gilbert Hunt, of Washington, D. C., two-time winner of the Nassau Challenge Bowl, 8—10, 6—1, 6—3, 6—3. After losing the furious first set, Kovacs increased the pace and almost blasted Hunt off the court with his terrific drives.

Cooke defeated Edward Amark, of Oakland, in a postponed second-round match, 6—4, 6—3, then went on to beat William Gillespie, of Miami, Fla., 5—7, 4—6, 6—4, 6—1, 6—2. Surface turned back Frank Guernsey, former intercollegiate champion from Rice, 8—6, 6—1, 6—3, and Hunt turned back Sidney B. Wood, jr., of New York, one-time Davis Cup player, 4—6, 6—3, 6—4, 6—3.

Angott Agrees To Defend Title

Louisville, Ky., July 5 (AP).—Charley Jones, manager of the National Boxing Association's world lightweight champion, Sammy Angott of Louisville, announced today Angott had agreed to defend his title for the first time for Promoter Art Rooney in Pittsburgh, August 1.

Jones said Rooney informed him Baby Arizmendi, who recently fought a draw with Angott in Los Angeles, had rejected an offer to be Angott's Pittsburgh opponent because he considered the percentage too low.

He said Pete Lello, who drew with Angott recently in New York, and George Latka, Los Angeles, were being considered as opponents.

Reds Rally, Defeat Bucs in Ninth, 5-4

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, July 5.—The Reds today came from behind with three runs in the ninth for a 5-to-4 victory over the Pirates and a clean sweep of their series-of-three.

Neither Jim Turner nor old Danny MacFayden finished their starting mound assignments, but the Deacon was charged with the loss, his second of the year. Joe Beggs was the winning pitcher, his fourth triumph of the season in a relief role.

But until the ninth inning splurge, they left 10 men on base, and the game looked hopeless. Their only tally to that point was racked up on Ival Goodman's sixth homer of the year which also scored Lonnie Frey, who had singled.

The Pirates lost little time in forging to their long-held lead, Arky Vaughan's infield single and successive doubles by Maurice Van Robays and Vince DiMaggio netting two in the second.

A walk and two errors by Red Shortstop Eddie Joost netted another in the fifth and in the next frame, Vaughan kissed a three-two ball into the rightfield bleachers for the circuit.

In the ninth, with one away, Frey doubled for his third hit of the day. Goodman was saved by Vaughan's fumble, and Frank McCormick singled to score the Red second-baseman.

Californians Move Up in Boys' Tennis

By the Associated Press

Haverford, Pa., July 5.—Two Californians, an Easterner and a Southerner remained in the running tonight as the National Interscholastic Boys' Tennis Championship reached the semifinal round.

The Californians were top-seeded Bob Carrothers, of Coronado High School who defeated a fellow Californian, Charles B. Hopper, jr., 6—2, 6—2; and Earl Cochell, of Los Angeles, victor over Arthur Prochaska, of Hartford, Conn., 6—2, 6—4. Carrothers had little difficulty in disposing of Hopper, a Beverly Hills youth representing Hill School, of Pottstown, Pa.

Also in the round of four were E. Victor Seixas, of Philadelphia, who beat Dick Bender, 1937 National Indoor Boy Champion from Pingry School, Westfield, N. J., 8—6, 6—1; and Jack Blair, of Miami, Fla., who eliminated Robert Lovelace, of Corpus Christi, Tex., 6—2, 6—4.

Carrothers faces Seixas while Cochell meets Blair in tomorrow's matches, setting up the possibility of an all-California final should the two Westerners triumph.

Seixas and Billy Voght, holders of the Middle States Interscholastic doubles title, advanced to the finals of the doubles competition, by winning one match by default then turning back Richard Johnson and George Kennedy, of Pelham Manor, N. Y., 6—2, 6—1, in the semifinal round.

Marble, Wolfender Earn Finals Berths

Evanston, Ill., July 5 (AP).—Alice Marble, Beverly Hills, Calif., queen of American tennis, and Virginia Wolfenden, Los Angeles, advanced today to the women's singles finals in the North Shore Invitation Tournament.

Miss Marble defeated Gracyn Wheeler, Santa Monica, Calif., 6—1, 8—6, and Miss Wolfenden eliminated England's Mary Hardwick, 7—5, 5—7, 6—1. The two victors meet tomorrow for the title.

The first of Cecil Travis' three hits produced a run for the Nats in the third after Buddy Lewis singled, and in the fifth they made some motions toward getting back in the ball game. Lewis led off with a single but Walker grounded into a force play. Bonura walked but Travis flied out. Myer singled to center for one run and Pofahl singled to left for another, but Early, sad to relate, fanned.

Sarazen and Spencer Trounce Burtons With Best Ball 67

Sarazen Records Two-Under-Par 70, Spencer Has 74 In Special Match

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Gene Sarazen and Cliff Spencer gave the Burton brothers, Allan and Danny, an 18-hole lesson yesterday at Army, Navy Club, the National Open runner-up and the East Potomac pro handing their rivals a 5 and 3 defeat with a best ball 67.

Sarazen, who stayed over for the match after playing in the Red Cross benefit affair Thursday at Indian Spring, missed par on only one hole and finished with a 2-under-par 70. He and Spencer each dropped three bordies, Spencer scoring a 74 for the round.

Yesterday's round is one of the few pleasure jaunts that Sarazen has scheduled in the next few weeks. The Connecticut farmer will play a charity match for an orphan home near his home in Brookfield Centre today, and has Red Cross benefits scheduled for weeks, including the big match in Detroit when his hand-picked team will meet the 1939 Ryder Cup squad in a challenge match.

Disappointed in Little

Sarazen didn't mince any words yesterday in his disappointment over Lawson Little refusing to play on his team due to other business. Gene felt the other boys were all giving up just as much as Little to play the match and the National Open champion should be one of the first to rally to the cause. He probably will be replaced by Clayton Heafner, the colorful North Carolinian, according to Capt. Sarazen.

Wearing his conventional knickers, Sarazen treated several hundred fans to some fine golf over the Service Club course. He started with a birdie four, dropping an 8-foot putt, and was out in 1 under par 34 after three-putting the seventh and holing a 10-foot birdie putt on the ninth. The 1922-32 Open champ chipped close for a birdie on the fifteenth and otherwise was consistent with eight pars on the back nine for 1 under par 36 and 70.

Spencer was off to a bad start, but he birdied Nos. 7, 12 and 15 to help Sarazen by three shots.

Danny Cuts Margin

The Burton boys were four down at the turn, but Danny cut the margin to three by chipping in the cup from off of the eleventh green for a birdie three. Spencer's birdie on the twelfth left his team 4 up and the leading dormie four the winners ended the match with birdies on the fifteenth. Allan knocked in a 12-footer for a birdie four on the next hole, but it was too late. Host Professional Allan Burton was 77 and Danny, the Quantico Officers Club pro, was 78.

Spencer was satisfied with his round and was glad to get the bad first nine out of his system before tomorrow's Red Cross playoff at Indian Spring when he and Claude Rippy, his amateur partner, meet Henry Picard, P. G. A. champion from Hershey, Pa., and Roger Peacock, of Indian Spring. The match will start at 1 p. m. with the diamond studded gold medals to the winning team.

Admission will be $1 with all proceeds to the District Chapter of the American Red Cross for the War Relief Fund.

Smith made it a one-two finish for the Islands by nosing out Rene Choteau, of Yale University, but both were 16 seconds behind the flying Islander from Maui. Smith and Jose Balmores, of Maui, set the pace for the first quarter mile, but Nakama—who, prior to the race, was rated "just fair" by the Hawaiian delegation—pulled into the lead at the halfway mark. From then on he increased his lead, and as Balmores fell back, it developed into a fight for second place between Smith and Choteau.

Smith was timed in 21:47.2, and Choteau in 21:47.4.

Dispute Marks Sailing Races At Fair Haven

Special Dispatch to The Post

Fair Haven, Md., July 5.—A controversy over the buoys which marked the five-mile triangular course today caused judges of the first annual Fair Haven Sailing Club regatta yesterday to split honors in the 20-foot round bottom class.

Carroll Smith and Carl Trammell, both of Gallesville, Md., thus took down identical trophies. They sailed Wings and Nolle Prosse, respectively, Smith turning the best time of 1:02. An almost dead-calm marked the first leg of the race, slowing contestants considerably.

In the 18-foot class, Joseph McDonald, in Intrepid, turned in the best time with William Alden's Alma and Harrie White's Proa following in that order. A two-craft race marked the Penguin Class, in which R. A. Young's Penguin No. 1 finished first. Judy, sailed by William Heintz, was second.

The 16-foot class proved the most popular of the day, seven sleek vessels turning out for action. Best of the lot was Lawrence Hartge's Aloa, finished well ahead of Robert Ray in his Duchess.

Two Golfers Score Holes in One on Local Courses

Two golfers realized the ambition of every linksman on local courses yesterday.

From Kenwood came a report of a hole-in-one by Mrs. J. C. Dale, District women's team captain. The ball dropped on the 168-yard seventeenth hole following a spoon shot and rolled in. Witness to the feat was E. S. Shepherd.

A spoon also accounted for an ace at Rock Creek. Dr. W. O. Hankins, playing with Hampden Wilson, Mrs. Hankins and W. O. Hankins, jr., holed out from the tee on the 150-yard second on "B" course. Hankins wound up with a total of 43 for the nine.

Carlsark Tops 20-Footers At Rock Hall

Scores Sweep Over 6 Foes in Finals Of Yacht Club Regatta

By the Associated Press

Rock Hall, Md., July 5.—The 20-foot sloop Carlsark, skippered by Carl N. Bordley, made a clean sweep of the event for her class today by defeating six others in the final race of the series at the Rock Hall Yacht Club Regatta.

Bordley and Carlsark, representing the Chester River Yacht and Country Club, literally ran away with the honors in the 20-foot sloop series. Carlsark was first across the line in the first two races of the series yesterday.

Shamrock, skippered by Eldridge Zang, of the West River Yacht Club, was second in the series, and Gale, skippered by Vincent Cramer, of the Annapolis Yacht Club, was third.

By a margin of 1 point, Tough Guy, owned and sailed by C. J. Rosemere, of the Cambridge Yacht Club, won the series for the Hampton Class.

Two seconds yesterday and a first today gave Rosemere and Tough Guy a total of 15 points, just enough to nose out Gypsy, owned and sailed by Oscar Semond, of Cambridge. Gypsy had two firsts yesterday, but faded to sixth place in the seven-boat race today.

Final standings in the three-race series:

STARBOATS—Aries II, Henry Wilmer, jr., Corinthian Yacht Club, Philadelphia.

Navy Boat Leads Field At Hampton

6 Starters Still Out In Cruising Cup Race From Gibson Island

By the Associated Press

Hampton, Va., July 5.—Fifteen of the 21 sailing craft that put out from Gibson's Island, Md., yesterday morning in the Virginia Cruising Cup Race of the Hampton regatta crossed the finish line today but announcement of the winner awaited the officials' computation of classes and handicaps.

One of the others was reported still heading here. The five remaining starters dropped out of the running.

First across the finish line at 12:32 p. m. (Eastern Standard Time) was a Naval Academy boat, the Vamarie, sailed by midshipmen. Another Class A craft, Stormy Weather, owned by William Labrot, of the Annapolis Yacht Club followed 50 minutes later.

Two Class B entries were next home, crossing the line at 1:27 and 1:44 p. m. They were Dryad, owned by James H. Dunbar, of Wilmington, Del., and the Alert, a naval academy craft manned by midshipmen.

Others finished in this order: Resolute, Naval Academy, Annapolis; Gibson Girl, John R. Sherwood, of Baltimore; Intrepid, Naval Academy, Annapolis; Lingamore, Mr. Flannagan, Baltimore; Egret, C. P. Shutt, Greenville, Del.; Tejeira, Theodore Hoster, Baltimore; Kelpie, Bill Henderson, Baltimore; Windward, H. Clay Primrose, Baltimore; Yola, Howard A. 3 World Marks Fall in Power-Boat Trials at Detroit

Detroit, July 5 (AP).—Three entries in the International Model Power Boat Regatta whizzed around the waterworks pond to world records today.

Mike Succarde, of Detroit, averaged 50.75 in his Class A steam-powered boat, improving on his own record of 49.63 set last year. Jerry Wehlann, of Detroit, reached 51.52 in his Class A gasoline model to break his own record of 49.63.

Treasury Takes 9-to-7 Victory

Treasury took a 9-to-7 victory over Washington Gas Light yesterday in the U. S. Government Baseball League, a pair of runs in the final inning turning the tide.

Hudson and Backus were touched for nine hits, but Gas Light's best inning was the sixth, in which 4 runs came over. The winners tallied all their runs in the third, fifth and eighth.

Spencer Gains Round of 8 in Va. State Golf

Meets Al Dollins Today; Kent, Stringfellow, Battle, Burke Score

By the Associated Press

Hot Springs, Va., July 5.—Steady-stroking Wynsol Spencer, 20-year-old defending champion from Newport News, shot his way through two strenuous rounds of match play today and will meet Al Dollins, of Covington, tomorrow in the first quarter-final match in the State amateur golf tournament.

Others to survive morning and afternoon rounds of 18-hole "sudden death" match play over the Cascades course were Charlie Kent, Richmond city champion, and Frank Stringfellow, like Kent a member of the Country Club of Virginia; Bill Battle and John Battle, Charlottesville brothers who are members of the University of Virginia golf team; Aulick Burke, veteran from Petersburg, and Sam Bates, Norfolk city and Tidewater amateur champion.

Spencer Beats Watson

Spencer eliminated Meredith Watson, of Petersburg, 2 and 1, in the morning round and then, after being 1 down at the turn in the afternoon, turned on the pressure on the incoming nine to oust Jimmy Watts, of Lynchburg, who won the title here in 1938, 3 and 2.

Dollins, who lives in Covington, plays under Roanoke Country Club colors, but is most familiar with the rugged Cascades layout, defeated T. B. Williamson, of Norfolk, 7 and 6, in the first round, and was pressed to play the best golf he could muster before he was able to turn back a magnificent bid of Bob Hornsby, of Newport News, to win one up on the eighteenth.

Kent took his morning match with Richard Peyton, of Staunton, 6 and 5, then found it necessary to collect four birdies and an eagle in the afternoon round to defeat Ben Janssen, 2 and 1.

Stringfellow adanced through the day's play by defeating W. E. Blewett, of Newport News, 7 and 5, this morning and R. W. Ryden, jr., of Winchester, 5 and 4, in the afternoon.

Bill Battle defeated Burr Melvin, of Newport News, 2 up, and Bill Brown, of Richmond, 8 and 6.

Wins on 21st Hole

Bates eliminated Irvin Blanchard, of Portsmouth, 4 and 2, and Tom Shepherd, of Charlottesville, 5 and 4.

Burke went to the twenty-first hole to beat Beverly Shriver, of Hot Springs, one up, and in the afternoon defeated Bill Cunningham, of Richmond, 4 and 3.

John Battle first defeated Wilson Todd, of Richmond, 8 and 7, then beat Don O'Brien, favored Richmond contender, in a match that was settled on eighteenth green one up.

FBI Shooter Takes Eastern Pistol Crown

By the Associated Press

Camp Ritchie, Md., July 5.—Walter Walsh, crack marksman with the FBI in Washington, fired an aggregate score of 1,735 to win the Eastern Regional Pistol Championship today for the second straight year.

He built up his score steadily in eight matches to finish 36 points ahead of this nearest opponent, George Lyon, of Chambersburg, Pa.

First place in the difficult individual center-fire match—which calls for ten shots at 60 yards slow fire, ten timed and ten rapid fire at 25 yards—clinched the title for Walsh. He scored 292 in the match.

New York City Police took first and second in the police doubles and first in the individual center-fire in the Camp Perry Course match. Harold J. Voelbel and Joseph Welden won the doubles with 587 points, and fellow officers Herman Hunter and Mark Walsh were right behind with 586.

Welden fired 294 to win the individual center-fire match, two points ahead of H. L. Benner, of the United States Infantry from Camp Perry, Ohio.

Mrs. H. V. Noble, of Erlton, N. J., annexed the Eastern women's pistol title, taking the crown from Mrs. Dave Platt, of Baltimore, who finished third today. Mrs. Marion Gassenheimer, of Westwood, N. J., was second.

Fred M. Molt, of Asheville, N. C., won the Spencer match with 196 points and nine in the X-ring. Jim Lacy, of New Haven, Conn., Northeastern rifle champion; T. T. Charlton, of Hancock, Md., defending champion, and Floyd T. Oswald, of New Tripoli, Pa., were tied for second with scores of 196 and seven in the X-ring.

R. O. Willman, of York, Pa., won the short gauge metallic match with a 399; Jim Lacy, of New Haven, was second with 398. Dave Carlson, of New Haven, took first in the 50-meter metallic sights match with 395.

Na! Said the Little Fox—Dashing Off With the Golf Ball

Great Barrington, Mass., July 5 (AP). The mystery of disappearing golf balls that has bothered both duffers and pros alike at the Wyantenuck Country Club has been solved—and the solution has nothing to do with bunkers, brooks or slices.

"I was walking down the fairway of the second hole toward my ball after a good hit right down the middle. Out of the nearby woods crept a young red fox. It grabbed the ball in its mouth and fled."

GAO Rally In Ninth Tops Center Market

Two General Accounting Office runs in the ninth inning accounted for a 6-to-5 setback for Center Market yesterday. The loss further removed the Marketmen from a chance to catch District Grocery as the Departmental League season neared its end.

Mathias started for G. A. O., but was removed in the fourth as Center Market took a 3-to-2 lead. Norris, his relief, was touched for a pair of tallies in the fifth, but after that held the opposition scoreless.

Eight Thirty And Isolater Clash Today

Handicap Kings to Renew Rivalry in $25,000 Butler Race

By the Associated Press

New York, July 5.—The two kings of the handicap division, George D. Widener's Eight Thirty and William Woodward's Isolater, renew their rivalry tomorrow in the $25,000 Butler Handicap at Empire City.

Nine others have been named for the rich mile and three-sixteenths jaunt but off past performances they might as well stay in their stalls as far as first place is concerned. Eight Thirty, assigned top weight of 128 pounds, won the Suburban Handicap at Belmont Park, and Isolater, in with 119, captured the Brooklyn at Aqueduct in which the Widener colt ran third.

Isolater, runner-up to Lovely Night last year, also will have the benefit of the unpredictable Fighting Fox as a running mate. The Fox, allotted 122 pounds, is the type of horse that usually wins or runs far back. There're seldom any halfway measures about him.

The early line quoted Eight Thirty at 2 to 1 and the Isolater-Fighting Fox entry at 7 to 2. Myron Selznick's Can't Wait, second in both the Brooklyn and Suburban, and Mrs. Payne Whitney's Hash were held at 6 to 1. William Ziegler's 8-year-old Esposa, 1938 victor, was no better than 30 to 1.

W. L. Brann's Aethelwold, the Falaise Stable's War Dog, Maxwell Howard's The Chief, B. F. Whitaker's Sickle T., third a year ago, and J. B. Partridge's Sandy Boot complete the field.

William Streett, Famous Trainer, Claimed by Death

By the Associated Press

New York, July 5.—William B. Street, well known trainer of race horses and one of this country's foremost amateur riders a decade ago, died last night at his Oyster Bay, Long Island, home.

A prominent sportsman and writer, he was trainer of horses owned by Mrs. Frank M. Gould, Mrs. Barclay Douglas and S. A. Warner Baltazzi at the time of his death.

Streett won practically every major timber race in the country, except the Maryland Hunt Cup, from 1927 to 1937, when he gave up riding and devoted all of his time to training. The last two years he trained both jumpers and flat runners.

In 1937 he trained and rode Mrs. Frank M. Gould's What Have You in the Grand National at Aintree, but failed to finish. Other outstanding jumpers trained by him include, Baltazzi's Ad Lib, winner of the 1937 Foxcatcher National, and Ostend, one of the country's ranking timber toppers a few years back.

Real Money Wins by Three Lengths in Charles Town Race

Nod Defeated As $13.60 Shot Wins

Jockey Martinez Gives Victor Smart Ride; Lady Solace Takes Third Money

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., July 5.—Those who took the hunch collected a bunch when Real Money, owned by Mrs. C. H. Baumgardner, scored a smashing victory in the Clendenin Purse, featuring the Friday program here. Ridden by Jockey A. F. Martinez, who has grown on local fans after coming here unheralded, Real Money pounded to the wire three lengths ahead of the Blue Grass Stable's Nob, with Donald Christmas' Lady Solace third in the field of seven going 7 furlongs.

Real Money was coupled as an entry with Mrs. H. W. Wageley's Bellthorn, which drew much of the mutuel play, but the $13.60 paid by the entry "wasn't hay," as they say around the track. The winner's time of 1:30 was 6 seconds over the track record held by Gay Amazon, but was fair under the track conditions. The oval was drying out, but heavy and holding. The crowd of 6,000 installed Pandoramint as the favorite and got some flashes of front-running for the money. Real Money always was close up, but Martinez bided his time. When he seemed assured that Bellthorn, the entry-mate, was quitting, the Cuban rider rallied the Time Maker gelding and he forged to the front to be opening a good gap at the end.

All of the well-played horses were off poorly, through one cause or another, in the first race and the winner was J. B. Royston's Glitter Girl, a $15.60 shot and in charge of Jockey Willie Dufford. Totty was second and Freds First third.

The daily double paid $74.40 and was the "1 and 6" combination. Gold Sweep carried 120 pounds to victory in the second race under a good ride by Jockey John Hernandez. The 8-year-old paid $6.80 and finished ahead of Westing and Small Devil. Westing probably would have won but for running out at the turn for home.

H. Bunting's Depinard paying an individual mutuel of $17.20, took the third event, coming up with a hard drive on the inside to upset the "good thing," Ana X. Thoa was third from a sluggish beginning.

REAL MONEY, forward factor from break and steadied along to far turn, responded when shaken up to take command, drew clear and was kept to pressure to end. NOB, allowed to settle into stride, lost ground at first turn, came through on inside and was best of others. LADY SOLACE was blocked while attempting to move up on inside, swung out for racing room and closed gamely. STEALING HOME moved up menacingly approaching stretch and weakened. PANDORAMINT was used up setting pace under hustling tactics and stopped.

SIXTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:17. Off 5:18. Winner, Mrs. T. Lewis' b. g. Selection at Charles Town

Dear Al:

Pick up your colors, fellows, this is the last-go-roundup here in Jefferson County. The program is a worthy closing one, topped by the $1,000 Fayetteville Purse. In fact, the card involves races at a variety of distances from 4½ furlongs in the opening event to 2 miles in the finale of the day and meeting. All in all, it hasn't been a bad meeting. I wish I could have picked more winners. Brothers Boyle, Bradley, Burton and Hay deserve credit for the way they have conducted the long session. Most of us will move over to the "other town" for the start of the 10-day session at Hagerstown on Tuesday. Jockey Sammy Palumbo has the riding honors for the meeting sewed up with 40 winners. He took the day off yesterday after being sick several days. Last summer he piloted 51 winners. George (Red) Palmer, starter at Delaware Park, closed the meeting up there the day before and then took a fireman's holiday by watching yesterday's sport here. Marty Tige shipped Navigation, winner of three races here, to Hagerstown. Trainer Don Yates is singing the blues and there are reasons. He sent Circus Lights to the post the other day and the horse stumbled, fell and broke a knee bone. Yesterday morning, Back Bay, a 2-year-old filly, owned by Don Hastup, became so ill that she had to be destroyed. Yates now has only one horse, Playdema, ready to run. Galt Davis, of Washington, reports he has sold Spotless and not Trosta. It seems a claim was put in for Spotless and there was something wrong about filling out the papers. So Davis obliged by selling Spotless at the claiming price. See you on the rail.

First race—Highland Song gets in this with feather weight and could be the right one in a rather open affair. Dabs has shown enough to be dangerous and deserves attention. Xmas Carol is improving and belongs in the money circle.

Second race—Postponement gets my call in this 7-furlong affair. Seems capable of carrying the 115-pound assignment. Brainchild has shown fair form hereabouts and should be in the thick of contention. Foxton is slightly better than shown.

Third race—Seplin is a standout in this field. Gets only steadying weight and looks like the best bet of the day. Balky Fox had trouble in that last and may be close. Miss Pilgrim is in light and has a chance.

Fourth race—More Grand could be the right one in this field. Promises to get a good ride and I'm going to be there. Shanteb took a short sprint in fine fashion and is a threat. Small Change will be right there if in action.

Fifth race—I'm going to take Flagetta in this field. If you don't like them long, stay off. Royal Business comes back to take on 128 pounds and appears to have too much weight. Darby Du is too fit to be disregarded.

Sixth race—Time Her seems to have an edge on Hiblaze in this abbreviated sprint. I believe the race is between the two. Pirate Ship is in light enough to be dangerous.

Seventh race—Exhort was shipped her to knock off a purse. The No. 1 post position should help. Needs only to make the turns. Trostar is fit as those ailing legs. Aufoin could awaken with a bang in company of this sort.

Eighth race—Canimar appears best in the 2-mile finale of the day and meeting. Bay Arnold will improve on a good track. Tee Off could be prominent.

Substitute races—If No. 1 is used, I'll take Chalotaur, Sun Voter and Channing. If No. 2 is used, I'll take John Werring, Veritas and Runout.

Best bet—Seplin.

Week's Buying By British Put At 100 Million

Total Orders for U. S. War Materials Now Seen At 1.8 Billion

By the Associated Press

New York, July 5.—A spokesman for the British purchasing commission said today the British government had placed orders for $100,000,000 of war materials in the United States in the last week.

The new buying, he said, brought the total placed here by the British, and the French previous to their surrender, to $1,800,000,000. Of that amount, it was stated, 60 per cent represented airplanes, "with ordnance next in volume."

The spokesman said that, thus far, the British had lost no ships carrying goods across the Atlantic from the United States.

He said a total of 2,000,000 tons of steel had been bought in the United States and that steel purchases were being "stepped up."

Sharp Advance Continues in Hog Prices at Chicago

Chicago, July 5 (AP).—The sharpest advance in hog prices since last September's war boom continued today in one of the liveliest trading sessions of the year at Chicago's Stockyards.

With supplies comparatively small, considering the holiday accumulation, packers bid prices up 15 to 25 cents, some, sales showing even more gain. Top soared to $6.60 per hundredweight, highest since April and up as much as $1.30 since the advance got under way about ten days ago.

Livestock men said the sudden rise apparently was due to diminished receipts and expanding consumer demand, with choice pork loins here up a cent a pound to 17 cents, wholesale, highest since April 30. This represents a rise of 4½ cents in wholesale pork since June 25. Additional bullish factors in the hog trade have been official figures indicating production this season will decline as well as British lard buying and United States Government relief purchases.

Bids Are Opened On Army Clothes

Philadelphia, July 5 (AP).—The Army opened bids at its headquarters depot here today for 400,000 drawers, 5,800 wool-filled comforters and 13,867 yards of cloth for new-type wind-resistant mackinaws.

Apparent low bidders, their offers and the quantities on which they bid, included:

Utica Knitting Mills, Utica, N. Y., 255,000 shirts, at $0.8361 each; Faith Mills, Inc., Averill Park, N. Y., 70,000 shirts, at $0.829 each; Munsingwear, Inc., Minneapolis, 75,000 shirts, at 83 cents each.

New Haven Quilt & Pad Co., New Haven, Conn., 5,880 comforters, at $9.85 each.

$8,000,000 Plane Plant for Dallas

Dallas, July 5 (AP).—Ben Critz, manager of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce, reports the Hall-Aluminum Aircraft Corporation will build an $8,000,000 factory here to produce war planes and parts.

The corporation's plant now is located at Bristol, Pa.

Critz said the Dallas plant would have a pay roll of $750,000 to $1,000,000 a month.

Brokers' Loans Decline

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $262,000,000. The week ended yesterday and the total represented a decrease of $14,000,000 when compared with the previous week. Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $495,000,000.

Pound Drops 14 Cents in Thin Market

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 5.—The free British pound dropped 14 cents today in a foreign money market virtually devoid of buyers and sellers.

The Canadian dollar swung far in the opposite direction, gaining 2.81¼ cents to 87⅜ United States cents. The Swiss franc dipped 0.01 of a cent.

Banking quarters emphasized the smallness of trade in explaining the wide fluctuations. Rates were sensitive to transactions involving only a few thousand dollars, they said.

Closing rates follow (Great Britain in dollars, others in cents.)

Official Canadian control board rates for United States dollars: Buying, 10 per cent premium; selling, 11 per cent premium; equivalent to discounts on Canadian dollars in New York of buying, 9.91 per cent; selling, 9.00 per cent.

Pennsy Seeks $7,995,000 Issue For Equipment

By the Associated Press

The Pennsylvania Railroad applied to the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday for authority to issue $7,995,000 of 2¼ per cent equipment trust certificates in connection with the purchase of new equipment costing $9,993,750.

The Pennsylvania proposes to buy 2,545 freight cars, 8 passenger cars, 25 steam locomotive tenders and 2 steam passenger locomotives and tenders.

The freight cars will be built in its own shops and the passenger cars will be built by the E. G. Budd Manufacturing Co. It has not been determined who will make the locomotives.

Also yesterday, the I. C. C. authorized the Norfolk Southern Railroad to sell to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation $136,000 of 2½ per cent equipment trust certificates in connection with the purchase of 40 flat cars and 12 caboose cars costing $170,000.

Auto Output Drops In Holiday Week

Detroit, July 5 (AP).—Wards Automotive Reports estimated today that output of the motor car factories this week, curtailed by the Fourth of July holiday and by the approaching end of the 1940 model year, would total 51,975 cars and trucks.

The total, lowest of the season thus far, compares with 87,550 last week and 42,784 this week a year ago.

'Fear Buying' Keeps Auto Sales Rising

Surplus of 500,000 New Cars on Hand In Clean-up Period

By David J. Wilkie
Associated Press Automotive Editor.

Detroit, July 5.—Declining factory output and an unexpectedly strong retail demand ushered the automobile industry this week into the second half of the year and the "clean-up" period preliminary to new model production.

Behind the production division was an aggregate output since January 1 of approximately 2,600,000 cars and trucks; ahead, according to all current indications, is a virtual certainty that the surplus of about half a million new units now on hand will be reduced to below normal volume by the time the various car makers get 1941 models into production.

Contra-Seasonal Trend

Apprehension over the possibility of upward revision of retail prices all along the line, say leading authorities in the industry, has caused a wave of demand contrary to normal trends as the model production year nears its end.

Some authoritative trade observers have referred to the increased demand of the last few weeks as largely a form of "fear buying"—fear not only of increased prices after the end of the present model season, but also of a possible shortage once the surplus has been absorbed and the car makers turn part of their facilities over to the filling of a huge war order program.

Price Outlook Hazy

None of the motor vehicle manufacturers has discussed price prospects for the 1941 models; every one, however, has asserted that the volume of war orders as at present foreseen should not interfere with car production on a normal basis.

Several of the companies, as a matter of fact, already have completed retooling operations for the production of next year's models and others are well along with this work. Guesses are being made, as usual at this season, as to which of the car makers will be first out with 1941 types. On the bases of retooling progress, Packard, Buick and Nash should head the introductory parade as they have in recent years.

Rubber Export Quota Increase Aids U. S. Buying

London, July 5 (AP).—The international rubber regulation committee today raised the export quota on crude rubber for the final half of this year to 85 per cent of the basic quotas from the previously fixed 80 per cent.

In New York commodity circles, the action of the rubber export control in boosting quotas for the July-December period was presumed to have been taken to permit building of reserve supplies in the United States.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation, it was noted, has arranged to provide the funds for accumulation of 150,000 tons of rubber as a wartime reserve in addition to the 85,000 tons involved in the rubber-cotton barter with England. At the end of May, only 19,200 tons of the bartered rubber was reported to have reached the United States.

The 85 per cent quota, a rubber authority said, will permit monthly shipments of about 110,000 tons from the producing regions in the Far East, providing cargo space can be obtained.

New Deal Emphasis Shifts From Reforms to Recovery

By Merryle S. Rukeyser
A Special Correspondent.

THE NEW EXPANDED effort for National Defense is changing the climate of opinion at the Nation's Capital, and is resolving the New Deal riddle as to whether to put recovery or reform first on the agenda.

The new emphasis is on recovery, since it is recognized that national defense will be measured in terms of the number and quality of things produced, rather than in fancy social ideology. Accordingly, there is a growing disposition to audit the efficacy of new experiments.

In this spirit, a spokesman for the Securities & Exchange Commission told me that he and his associates recognized the need for streamlining and speeding up the procedure of the commission. Modification of the 20-day waiting period is an illustration of what is in mind, and the majority of the commission appear desirous of approving public utility requests without the time-consuming red tape of public hearings. Commissioner Healey, however, opposes this proposed change.

LIKEWISE, in order to assuage public opinion and get the cooperation of industry in the national defense program, there is a tendency to purport to break away from collectivist schemes and to pay lip service at least to private initiative and enterprise.

Although the defense corporation, a subsidiary of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, will finance emergency war plants and machinery on more advantageous terms than private lenders, there appears to be a disposition to turn over to private banking channels whatever financing they can competitively handle.

Asked what this would include, a financial spokesman for the Administration said that as a by-product of the military preparedness effort there might be an expansion in consumer goods industries, which might require financing.

THE WILLINGNESS of the Administration to work with private enterprise in part reflects the strong insistence of William S. Knudsen, defense generalissimo and president on leave from the General Motors Corporation, that this attitude is essential.

Financial officials of the Administration are studying carefully means of preventing American bank balances, investments and plants, owned by French and British nationals from falling into the hands of conquering aggressor nations. Accordingly, there is a widespread disposition to recognize that the United States Treasury holds a prior claim on British and French assets in this country in the form of the defaulted war debt.

If these assets should eventually be thus applied, American taxpayers would be relieved to the extent of some $6,000,000,000 of the existing national indebtedness.

LONG BEFORE the war, this writer proposed that these French and British assets in the United States be thus applied through friendly negotiations, thus eliminating the allegedly insuperable barrier of transferring payment through the foreign exchange market. My proposal was that the British and French governments in peace time be asked to reimburse their own nationals who owned the American funds and securities and direct investments in terms of their home currencies, or internal bonds. Otherwise there would have been an impairment of individual property rights.

Stocks Hold Firm in Sluggish Trading; Steel List Rises on Expected Output Gain

New York, July 5.—Stocks settled back after a firm start but most groups held in light trading and the close was a little higher for the list as a whole. Steels made the best gains while the rail equipments were weakest. The composite for the 100 key stocks was 0.13 point up on sales of 283,030 shares.

Bonds, foreign exchange and commodities were all productive of action. Second-grade rail liens, which are currently favored by some of the street's investment advisers, gained 1 to 3 points. Sterling was off 13 cents in an otherwise dull foreign exchange market.

The busiest time of the day was in the first hour when a few large blocks were traded, including 4,000 shares of Packard, which became the session's leader, the company announced that it is prepared to spend $30,000,000 at once for plant expansion to produce the 9,000 Rolls-Royce engine which it has undertaken to build for the United States and British governments.

Flurry in Air Stocks

A mild flurry in the air stocks was stirred up by unofficial estimates that more than $500,000,000 has been allocated for expansion to cope with the huge defense program. Some of this money is already being spent. The most active of the air shares, however, showed little change on the day while others, in smaller demand, retained most of their morning advances. Douglas was in the latter classification.

Steels benefited from sentiment created by the British action to prevent surrender of the French fleet to the Nazis. Steels also received some support from favorable news on the operating rate. While aggregate production is off this week due to the holiday, observers do not believe there has been any change of note in the daily average output, and are forecasting a rise in schedules next week. In the Youngstown district, it was reported today that operations are at the highest level for the season of the year in history, not excepting 1929. Steel common, while closing half a point under its best level of the season, was up ⅝ net and Bethlehem gained a full point.

Westinghouse Strong

Westinghouse was prominent as a result of the announcement by its management of readiness to manufacture shells, gun carriages and a variety of other munitions. The shares, finishing at 91, were a point higher.

Mercantile shares were dull and several of them, including Montgomery Ward, were not traded until late in the session or not at all. Oils were steady, Texas gaining a point, while Standard of California eased a fraction. General Electric, Chrysler and American Can each rose a point or more. American Smelting, Delaware & Hudson, International Harvester, Northern Pacific and Union Carbide were ahead large fractions.

Copper shares were a trifle lower, a reflection of a slight sag in scrap metal prices. Some of the shipbuilding shares were active and a bit higher, including International Marine. One of the outstanding certainties of the perplexing world situation is that there will be a serious shortage of merchant marine when the war ends.

Foreign Bonds Slump

Listed bonds were irregular in a quiet session, today, most domestic bonds showing gains, while a number of foreign dollar issues plunged sharply. Domestic rails of the speculative variety were in fair demand, and a number of industrials also advanced. In the foreign section, French stamped 7½s dipped 30 points on the first trade since May 21. Italian bonds also continued to recede. Trading amounted to $4,730,000.

Buying of carrier bonds became almost aggressive for a brief while, owing to the appearance of the carloadings report. Gains of a point or two were common, and some bonds advanced 4 and 5 points. The thinness of the market contributed to the larger advances. Share privilege issues were slightly improved, and modest buying appeared in some industrial bonds. Communications and other special groups likewise did well.

The drop in French 7½s did not surprise traders, who have been aware for some time of the modest bids on the issue. Italian and German issues were depressed, partly because of the indications that Britain intends to fight to the bitter end. Bonds of Belgium, Denmark and other occupied territories also receded. The Latin-American group was quiet, with losses more numerous than gains.

United States Treasury issued hovered around former levels, losses of smallest fractions being the rule. Best grade corporate issues were better, where changed.

Bank Reserves Continue Rise, Hit Fresh Peak

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday lendable excess reserves of banks increased $10,000,000 to a new record high of $6,810,000,000 in the week ended July 3.

The increase was due to large Treasury gold purchases, which more than offset a seasonal increase of money in circulation.

The board's statement said:

"During the week ended July 3 member bank reserve balances increased $14,000,000. Additions to member bank reserves arose from increases of $192,000,000 in gold stock and $2,000,000 in Treasury currency and a decrease of $80,000,000 in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve banks, offset in part by increases of $144,000,000 in money in circulation, $4,000,000 in Treasury cash and $102,000,000 in November deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts and a decrease of $8,000,000 in Reserve Bank credit. Excess reserves of member banks on July 3 were estimated to be approximately $6,810,000,000, an increase of $10,000,000 for the week."

Profit Taking Trims Sharp Rise This Week In Major Cereal

By the Associated Press

Rubber at New York countered lower trends in major commodity futures markets yesterday with gains ranging to nearly ¼ cent a pound. Prices advanced despite announcement shipments of crude rubber for the last half of 1940 would be enlarged under the quota system.

Wheat at Chicago closed down ¾ to 1¼ cents a bushel after early gains of more than a cent. Profit taking after Wednesday's sharp rise and hedging of the new crop wiped out the gains. Corn ended ⅛ to ⅝ of a cent higher.

The spot cotton delivery at New York sagged $1.10 to $1.20 a bale under active liquidation. Distant positions, which closed 5 to 20 cents a bale lower, steadied on trade and outside buying.

Heavy Receipts Drop Wheat

Chicago, July 5 (AP).—Heavy receipts of wheat at principal Southwestern markets, where the 194 harvest is in full swing, helped to depress domestic prices today.

The market also had to contend with profit-taking sales as a result of forecast of partly cloudy weather and probable showers in the spring wheat belt where moisture is badly needed. Many traders who bought Wednesday during the price advance sold today.

After rising as much 1½ cents early in the day due to failure of moisture relief to materialize over the week-end, wheat tumbled 2¼ to 2⅜ from the highs following the forecast and when hedging sales against the heavy movement of new grain increased. Wheat closed ¾ to 1¼ lower than Wednesday; July, 77¼ to 77⅜; September, 77¾ to 77⅞. Kansas City prices were 1⅛ to 1⅜ cents lower, but Minneapolis quotations closed ¼ off to ⅜ up.

Corn finished ¼ to ⅝ higher here; July, 61⅝; September, 58¾ to 58⅞. Oats, ¼ to ½ lower. Rye, ⅜ to ⅞ lower, and lard, ⅝ higher.

July Cotton Slumps

New York, July 5 (AP).—July cotton futures dropped sharply today in a rush to liquidate holdings in the spot month. Old July lost 24 points and new 22. Later deliveries dipped only 1 to 4 points.

In the rush to sell, around 25,000 bales of old July were liquidated, traders estimated.

Relative firmness of later months was based on reports of further unwanted rains in sections of the belt and talk of a higher Government cotton loan rate.

Rail Loadings Set New High During Week

The Association of American Railroads reported yesterday 752,326 cars of revenue freight were loaded during the week ended last Saturday.

This total was the highest for any week since the middle of last November. It was a new high for 1940 for the fourth consecutive week.

This was an increase of 24,230 cars, or 3.3 per cent, compared with the preceding week; an increase of 90,922, or 13.7 per cent, compared with a year ago, and an increase of 163,446, or 27.8 per cent, compared with 1938.

Survey Indicates Brighter Outlook For Advertising

New York, July 5 (AP).—A "highly optimistic" outlook for advertising during the rest of the year was reported tonight by Editor & Publisher, after interviewing a score of prominent advertising agency executives.

The magazine said several agencies reported their clients to be increasing advertising appropriations while all of them stated their clients "generally were maintaining schedules."

The huge defense program of the Government, said Editor & Publisher, "is the basic factor creating business optimism. Advertisers expect it to increase payrolls, thus creating greater buying power.

"One agent stated, 'all of our clients have increased their appropriations in the last 60 days.' Another said, 'our volume is ahead of any year in our 17 years of business.'"

2 Bucharest Papers Banned By New Regime

Anti-Jewish Measures Begin; Britons Expect Similar Treatment

By the Associated Press

Bucharest, July 5.—Rumania's new pro-German government suppressed permanently tonight, "in the interest of public order," two democratic Bucharest newspapers, Semnalul and Jurnalul.

It likewise was reported that decrees excluding Jews from journalism and the army were being prepared.

Aside from this, the government devoted itself to keeping the nation tranquil and at work, despite reports in other Balkan capitals—denied here—that Russia was placing additional troops in Bessarabia.

Besides the reports of further Russian encroachments, the Hungarian press continued to charge that troubled conditions prevail in Transylvania, where a substantial Magyar population remains a constant source of Hungarian concern.

U. S. Intercedes for 3 Britons

With Rumania generally considered completely Allied now with the Rome-Berlin Axis, British citizens were reported liquidating their interests in anticipation of governmental measures against them.

American authorities formally requested the Rumanian government today to grant an extension of stay for 3 of 30 British oil men ordered to leave the country within 24 hours.

The men are William R. Young and Albert A. Luce, of the National Supply Corporation, of New York, one of the largest firms dealing in oil machinery in the Balkans, and Harry Wist, of Refoil, Inc., an oil company.

A government communique today said withdrawal from Bessarabia and Bucovina had been completed July 3.

The communique said that in Bucovina, "where the Russians inadvertently went past the agreed line, they have fallen back."

In Transylvania, Jewish leaders were reported ready to make a mass migration to Palestine, Africa or anywhere there is room for them.

Any breakup of Rumania would involve a scramble for oil. British and French holdings account for about 70 per cent of the annual production of 6,240,000 tons.

Romano-Americana, affiliated with the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, was the largest American producer in 1938. It accounted for 780,000 tons.

Prescott Gatley, D.C. Banker, Dies After Long Illness

H. Prescott Gatley, 65, chairman of the board of the National Savings & Trust Co. and well-known lawyer, died yesterday at his home, 8 Quincy street, Chevy Chase, Md., after a long illness.

GATLEY

Mr. Gatley was born in Washington and spent all of his life here. He was graduated from George Washington University in 1895, and received the degree of master of laws from the University the following year. Following his graduation he became assistant clerk in the District Supreme Court, resigning in 1900 to enter the practice of law.

From 1907 to 1917 he was a member of the law firm of Maddox & Gatley, and later with the firm of Minor, Gatley & Rowland. At the time of his death he was a partner in the firm of Minor, Gatley & Drury.

General counsel and a member of the board of the National Savings & Trust Co. for 15 years, Mr. Gatley became president of the bank in 1934. He resigned last year and became chairman of the board.

He was a former president of the District Bar Association and a former president of the Chevy Chase Club and the Lawyers Club. He was also a member of Phi Delta Phi.

Surviving are a son, H. Prescott Gatley, jr.; a daughter, Mrs. Helen H. Wheeler; three grandchildren, a brother, Albert S. Gatley, all of Washington, and another brother, Clarence G. Gatley, of Los Angeles.

The funeral will be held Monday at 2:30 p. m. at St. Alban's Church. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Bomb Squad Holds Former Bund Man

CAESAR KROEGER

38, described by police as a former member of the German-American bund, was arrested in New York yesterday on charges of violating the Sullivan antifirearms laws by detectives investigating the bomb explosion that killed two at the World's Fair

Dynamite Thief Sought in N.Y. Fair Bombing

Police Round Up Radicals; Ex-Bund Member Arrested

New York, July 5 (AP).—Grim, tired-eyed detectives, in relentless mood, tonight sought to connect the theft of 39 sticks of dynamite with a bomb which blasted two of their comrades to death yesterday soon after it had been hustled from its hiding place in the New York World's Fair British pavilion.

The dynamite was stolen May 29 at gun's point from a magazine guarded by a watchman for a synagogue excavation. Investigators said the weight and size of the dynamite sticks approximated the weight—20 pounds—of the bomb explosive.

They said they discovered in Kroeger's apartment two German-made pistols, one loaded. The pistols, they said, were in a drawer, under a copy of Adolf Hitler's "Mein Kampf."

Associates of the two slain detectives—Joseph J. Lynch, 33, and Ferdinand A. Socha, 35—offered a $1,000 reward for the arrest and conviction of those responsible for the bombing. Mayor LaGuardia announced he would ask the board of estimate to offer a $25,000 reward.

Valentine disclosed that the Italian pavilion, adjacent to the British exhibit, had received a post card warning there would be an explosion on the premises. He said the warning was received the same day that a mysterious telephone message was received at the British pavilion that it was to be blown up.

The effect of the bombing spread to Washington, where the police guard was increased about the United States Capitol and every visitor was required to identify himself.

Japanese Troops Leave Hongkong

Copyright by New York Times

Hong Kong, July 5.—It is learned that approximately half of the 10,000 Japanese troops along the Hong Kong border have been withdrawn, presumably to reinforce the column of Japanese operating near Tamshui, in the East River area, where recently Chinese regulars suddenly appeared and repulsed the Japanese with severe losses.

Japanese troops are meeting considerable difficulty in clearing up Chinese forces along the railway between the Hong Kong border and Sheklung.

Neutrals Predict Nazi Peace Feelers Within 'a Few Weeks'

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), July 6.—A neutral diplomatic source who has good contacts with both principal belligerents predicted early today that new German peace feelers will be made within three or four weeks.

However, he said most neutral diplomats were convinced by "the new British aggressiveness" that any such move would be a failure.

He explained that a trial balloon which had been sent aloft by a member of the Spanish cabinet had been exploded by the British seizure of most of the French fleet and by Prime Minister Churchill's fighting talk in Commons yesterday.

Churchill Sees Maisky

Nevertheless, he predicted acceleration of warfare on the diplomatic front as well as in the sea and air—to be followed by peace hints when the British are feeling the strain most.

There still are many, he said, who believe that "peace and appeasement possibilities" never will be definitely ruled out so long as the faction of former Prime Minister Chamberlain is as strong in the Government as at present.

Evidence that the British are strengthening the diplomatic offensive was seen in Prime Minister Churchill's reception last night of Ivan Maisky, the Russian Ambassador—Churchill's first invitation to the Soviet envoy since taking office. It was understood they talked over the European situation in friendly fashion.

Britain, while wooing the Russians, also was said by the neutral source to be expected to grant further concessions to the Japanese, thus strengthening her hand in Europe in the "one war at a time" policy.

Consider U. S. Attitude

Such concessions, he speculated, likely would be limited only by the British wish to avoid injuring friendly feelings in the United States.

Britain is well aware, he said, that the United States would regard with a chilly eye, due to America's interest there, British "diplomatic capitulation" to the Japanese.

8 British Ships, Sub Sunk in Day, Nazis Say

Damaging of Nine Other Vessels Claimed By High Command

By the United Press

Berlin, July 5.—The German high command today claimed that the Nazi air and sea forces have sunk a British submarine, eight vessels, including four troop transports, and damaged nine others in the last 24 hours.

German torpedo speedboats—youngest arm of the Nazis' fighting forces—torpedoed the 5,500-ton British teamer Hartlepool southwest of Portland, England's important naval base, and sank a 12,000-ton tanker and two merchant ships from a convoy, the high command said.

The British submarine was destroyed by an outpost ship off the Norwegian coast, the Germans reported. German dive-bombers were credited with sinking four troop transport ships of 5,000 tons each and damaging nine others.

A British warship also was reported attacked and damaged.

The high command admitted that British planes again had attacked Kiel, German naval base, but said that a British plane had been shot down in the raid.

An additional seven British planes were shot down in raids on northern and western Germany, according to the high command. Several civilians were reported killed and two German planes were listed as missing.

The Germans boasted that the last two days had proved their superiority still further in aerial warfare and said that the blockade war against Britain is being "ever more intensified."

The German press carried what it termed more cases of "indiscriminate British bombing attacks on nonmilitary objectives." The newspapers claimed that residential sectors in German towns had been bombed recently.

R. A. F. Silences Enemy Radio

New York, July 5 (AP).—The British radio said tonight that "a dozen wireless stations in territory under German control went off the air tonight, a sign that widespread raids were being carried out by R. A. F. bombers." The broadcast was picked up here by the Columbia Broadcasting System.

"The area of enforced silence," the broadcast said, "extended from Denmark to the Saar territory."

BertramShapleigh, Noted Composer, Is Buried Here

Private funeral services for Bertram Shapleigh, internationally known American composer, and a member of the Washington Composers' Club, were held Wednesday at the Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest. Burial was in Fort Lincoln Cemetery. Mr. Shapleigh died suddenly Tuesday in Emergency Hospital. His home was at 2220 Twentieth street northwest.

A member of a New England family whose American ancestry dates back to 1635, Mr. Shapleigh was born in Boston on January 15, 1871. He was graduated from the New England Conservatory of Music, and studied composition with Edward MacDowell and piano with Ferruccio Busoni. After a period of study in Europe, he taught theory and composition at the Eisenach Academy in Boston.

In 1898 he went abroad again and lived in Germany, France, Belgium, Spain and Italy. He then settled in England, and built a home, Weird Wood, in the Kentish hills near London. This home was destroyed by fire, together with his library of 7,000 volumes. In 1915 he returned to the United States and became associate director of the Von Ende School of Music in New York. During recent years he had devoted himself entirely to composition.

Mr. Shapleigh was a prolific composer in all forms from opera and symphony to art songs and instrumental pieces, his published works reaching to Opus 80. Among his best known songs is a setting of Browning's "Oh To Be in England Now That April's There." In April of this year, one of his symphonic sketches, "Gur Amir," was performed by the Marine Band orchestra.

U. S. Jury Indicts Pulp Producers Under Wage Law

New York, July 5 (AP).—The first industry-wide indictment under the wage-hour act was announced today by the Department of Justice which said the Federal grand jury had charged the American Pulpwood Association and 12 large corporations with conspiracy to evade the act.

The indictment charged that the defendants, which represent approximately 80 per cent of the industry, maintained piecework pay which provided less than the 30-cents-an-hour minimum required by the act.

The Government charged that, contrary to the terms of the act, the defendants paid arbitrary piecework prices regardless of the workers' individual abilities, varying conditions of employment or overtime. The act provides for time and one-half pay after the normal work week of 42 hours.

The companies operate mills in Georgia, North Carolina, Alabama, Virginia, Tennessee, Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi, Arkansas and South Carolina.

Listen!
with Glynn

With this writing, the "Listen With Slocum" department suddenly becomes the "Listen With Glynn" department as you rare souls reading this probably have already noticed.

But for the moment it should be titled the department of utter confusion. This business of arriving in town, pretty much the worse for a hurried leavetaking and then being calmly informed by the aforementioned Slocum that all I had to do immediately was to write a column—about anything at all, he very helpfully said—puts me in the predicament of the gent who was introduced as being a perfect scream and then told to be funny for five minutes.

At the moment, in addition to his moral support, Slocum is being very helpful by cleaning out his office around me. The litter on his desk has been considerably dented and they tell me that it's the first time the desk top has seen the light since he arrived. The typewriter on which this deathless prose is being composed (?) has had to be shifted around four times thus far to make way for his onslaughts.

All this following upon a morning during which I've been meeting my new Washington compatriots and resolving to emulate as best I can the estimable gent who knew Addison Simms, of Seattle.

In closing I should hereby like to enter a determined categorical denial to anything and everything that Slocum said about me in his columnar swan songs. He can't call me educated and get away with it.

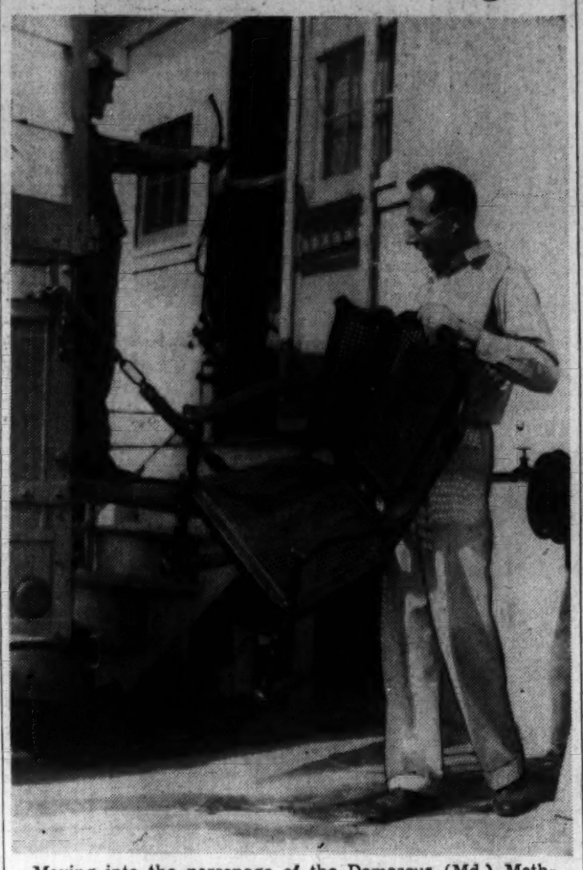
Church of the Week

New Damascus Methodist Pastor Moves Into Parsonage



Moving into the parsonage of the Damascus (Md.) Methodist Church is the Rev. J. Elmer Benson, new pastor

The Rev. J. Elmer Benson Rolls Up His Sleeves to Help; William Baker, Member For 50 Years, Recalls History of Parish

By Robert Tate Allen

The Rev. J. Elmer Benson, who on June 16 conducted his first services as new pastor of the Damascus (Md.) Methodist Church this week rolled up his sleeves and helped move into the nearby parsonage.

Formerly pastor of the West Harford charge in Hartford County (Md.) the Rev. Mr. Benson on June 1 was named by the Baltimore Conference sessions to succeed the Rev. Raymond Hunter Brown as leader of the Damascus charge, which also includes Salem Methodist Church of Cedar Grove.

Assuming the new charge is almost in the nature of a homecoming for the clergyman, who years ago served his first pulpit in nearby Urbana, Frederick County, when fresh from the Westminster Theological Seminary at Western Maryland College. He preached for six years in Fowblesburg, Baltimore County.

Native of Cabin John

The cleric and his wife are no strangers to the Washington metropolitan area. A native of Cabin John, Md., where his father, Charles E. Benson is United States commissioner, he studied in nearby schools, and later was graduated from the old Business High and Williamsburg-Dickinson Seminary.

Mrs. Benson at one time served as superintendent of the Junior League of the old McKendree Methodist Episcopal Church, when services were held in the 900 block of Massachusetts avenue northwest. They have two charming children, Beverly, 11, and Bruce, 13, who carried chairs and otherwise helped to get settled in the new location.

Also doing his bit yesterday was William Andrew Baker, 50 of whose 60 years have been spent as a member of the Damascus Church. He has served almost every lay position in the congregation.

Cornerstone of another edifice was laid shortly afterward in Masonic ceremonies conducted by the Prudence Lodge of Mount Airy. In 1932, the present modern church and Sunday school plant was dedicated by Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, now retired resident prelate of the Baltimore Conference, Methodist Church. The Rev. W. Clark Main, now of Hyattsville, was then pastor.

Among other active leaders of the Damascus Church are C. W. Day, 80 years old; Morgan Watkins, church school superintendent and church treasurer; Mrs. Paul Watkins, head of the Ladies Aid Society; Mrs. Herbert Hyatt, president of the young people's organization; Dr. George Boyer, famed country doctor of Montgomery County, and his son, Dr. Milton McKendree Boyer.

Dr. Boyer, sr., has practiced medicine for more than 33 years in the county, once making his calls in a horse-drawn buggy. He has brought more than 1,800 babies into the world.

The Salem Church, whose educational and social unit was dedicated in 1938, with Dr. G. Ellis Williams, then superintendent of the Washington District of the old Methodist Episcopal Church, preaching, is located near Henderson's Corner.

Formed "Singing Convention"

The Rev. Mr. Brown was the guiding spirit behind the formation of a "singing convention" in the Damascus area, through which congregations of several denominations hold joint song services.

Leaders of the Salem congregation include Julian P. King, church school superintendent, and Mrs. William H. Beall, supervisor of the woman's work and young people's division, and others.

The Damascus charge soon will launch its annual daily vacation Bible school, with members of other churches in the community invited to participate. In charge will be Mrs. Herbert Hyatt, Mrs. Bradley M. Woodfield and Mrs. William Baker. Sessions will be held daily from 9 a. m. to 12 noon, Monday through Friday.

"MY COUNTRY, 'TIS OF THEE"
SAMUEL E. SMITH

My country, 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liberty,
Of thee I sing:
Land where my fathers died,
Land of the pilgrims' pride,
From every mountain side
Let freedom ring.

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

Written in 1832 when America was very young, it seems particularly fitting that this favorite patriotic song should have been the message of a youth, a student at the Andover Theological Seminary. It is an inspiring thought that we and the Mother Country join in the same tune when singing our national hymn of praise.
